KATMAI VOLCANO BURSTS INTO VIOLENT ERUPTION.

Three Other Alaska Mountains Shoot Forth Flame, Smoke and Ashes.

[illegible] Many More on Peninsula and Islands Not Heard [from], but Supposed to Be Active in Great Upheaval [that] Strikes Arctic Land—Ships Are Forced Far from Course to Escape Kadiak.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SITKA (Alaska) June 8.—Ashes from the Aleutian range volcanoes began to fall here today, and the sun shines discolored through the cinders. Sitka is 700 miles in a direct line from the volcanoes.

[VALDEZ] (Alaska) June 8.—The [illegible] steamship Dora, plying to points [along] the Alaska peninsula, Kadiak [Island], reports that Mt. Katmai's out[break] is terrible in its violence.

[Deafening] explosions occur at short [intervals] and the surrounding country [is covered] with three to four feet of [ashes].

[There] were indications in Shelikoff [strait] that were such as to lead the Dora's [master] to fear there had been a gen[eral] lifting of the ocean bottom near [illegible]. For this reason, as well as be[cause] of the smoke and ashes, the [ship] did not dare to approach Ka[diak].

[Katmai] has always been regarded [as extinct]. The natives have no tra[dition] of any former activity of the [volcano].

FEAR PEOPLE'S SAFETY.

[BY A. P.] NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

[SEWARD] (Alaska) June 8.—Kat[mai] Volcano, in the Alaska peninsula, [is in] violent eruption, and grave fears [are] entertained for the safety of the [inhabitants] of Kadiak and neighbor[ing] islands.

[The] steamship Dora arrived at Sel[dovia] yesterday with a foot and a half [of ashes] on her decks and reported [that she] had been unable to reach [Kadiak] on account of the dense smoke [and] had been obliged to steer a course fifty miles from her usual route in order to pass the island.

The wireless station at Kadiak is out of commission, as is also the Dora's equipment, and in fact all the wireless instruments in Alaska, because of electric conditions in the atmosphere.

The steamship Admiral Sampson arrived from Sheldovia today with news of the Dora's experience.

OTHER VOLCANOES ACTIVE.

SEATTLE, June 8.—Three slumbering volcanoes in the Aleutian mountain range of Alaska suddenly have come to life and are throwing out great quantities of smoke and hot ashes.

The awakened peaks are Illiamna and Redoubt, in the Cook Inlet country, and Katmai, which overlooks Shelikoff strait. It is likely that Bogoslof, Shishaldin and Pauloff, which are active volcanoes, and much further west, are also spouting flames.

Dispatches from the north say that the volcanoes are emitting lava and rocks, but the discharge from the Alaska craters is usually only ashes and smoke, and it is hoped there will be no loss of life. Apparently Kadiak and its neighboring islands have been cov-

Two Bandits Shoot Car Conductor and Beat Motorman—Former May Die.

George Hart, a conductor on a car running from Los Angeles to Pasadena, was shot in the shoulder and left side while resisting a highwayman, who ordered him to through up his hands at Los Robles and Washington streets, Pasadena, shortly after midnight.

While they were fighting another robber attacked the motorman, who also resisted, and knocked him unconscious.

Hart perhaps will die, as the bullet in his side passed close to the heart.

The police were attracted by the firing, and found both men unconscious. A passerby saw the robbers running from the scene. He describes them as being about 20 years old, and the one who did the shooting wore a light suit of clothes.

The car crew was turning the trolley pole and adjusting the head-light when attacked.

Ten Thousand Five Hundred Dollars Pledged at Meeting in the State—Gov. Shafroth Enlisted in Work — Elements Harmonized. Ready to Enter Kansas.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAS ANIMAS (Col.) June 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ten thousand five hundred dollars is the total rolled up by the men of Colorado. This includes the sum pledged at the mass meeting held at the Los Animas Commercial Club tonight. It places Colorado in the lead of all four States crossed by The Times car. A cohort of workers has marched into line and Federal aid for a national highway across the United States seems almost certain, with more than 50,000 ready for battle.

When Gov. John F. Shafroth of Colorado welcomed The Times car today and placed himself on the side of the good roads workers, success in this State was made certain.

"My congratulations to you for the work you have done and are doing," said the Governor. "Carry this message of good roads across this country, and include me among those who are working for a national highway. You have done a great work in Colorado."

This message to the men of Las Animas and Otero counties tonight proved a slogan that gave the meeting a send-off, and Colorado was placed on the map with the largest number of road boosters gained thus far on The Times tour.

GOVERNOR GIVES PLEDGE.

Gov. Shafroth, in a stirring message, pledged himself in favor of the national highway along the old Santa Fe trail.

Good roads men from as far away as Pueblo attended the meeting in La Junta today, and $2500 was pledged toward the movement, which is to mean a transcontinental highway. Farmers from the well watered region of Rocky Ford came in their wagons to the mass meeting called in the public square. The Times special car was the rostrum, and the men of affairs of Otero county urged their friends to take a hand in this great work.

With The Times car close to the Kansas line, the meeting proved of great importance, as it demonstrated the strength of the road men in Colorado. There is a fight to the finish between the old and the new Santa Fe trail men. The old Santa Fe trail men have taken the helm. Sentiment

FORTY-EIGHT DELEGATES ADDED TO THE TAFT LIST.

Decisions by the Republican National Committee on the Contests by Roosevelt from Arkansas, Florida and Georgia Favor the President in Every Instance—Indiana Cases to Come Up Tomorrow.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 8.—Forty-eight was the total number of delegates to the Republican National Convention turned in the Taft column today by the National Committee's decision on contests from Arkansas, Florida and Georgia.

The Roosevelt contestants lost every case, as they did yesterday. Ten of the Georgia districts—twenty delegates—went to Taft in one blanket decision, both sides agreeing to their being decided upon the same arguments as had served in the case of the four delegates-at-large, which had just been given to Taft. The two remaining Georgia districts, with their two apiece, soon went the same way.

With the twenty-four delegates, sixteen from Alabama and eight from Arkansas, placed on the temporary roll of the convention as the result of yesterday's hearings, today's work runs up the total of seventy-two added to the Taft list since the National Committee convened Thursday.

THE CASES DECIDED.

The cases passed upon today were those of:

Arankses—Third, Fourth, Fifth and Seventh Congressional districts—two delegates each; eight in all. The Sixth District was not contested; the delegates are listed as "uninstructed."

Florida—The six delegates-at-large and all three districts—the entire State representation; twelve in all.

Georgia — The four delegates-at-large and all of the twelve Congressional districts, each with its two delegates, twenty-eight in all.

FOR NEXT WEEK.

This clears the docket for taking up early next week the cases upon which the Roosevelt peoeple are laying far more stress than upon those from the South, such cases, for example, as those from Indiana, which probably will be taken up when the committee convenes Monday morning. There still remain, in alphabetical order before these, the cases of the six delegates-at-large from Arizona and of the Fourth Congressional District of California. They may be taken up Monday, or may go over until later.

It was a day of publicity for Southern Republican organizations. Starting with the last three districts of Arkansas the committee went through that State, Florida, and Georgia, in which all the Taft delegates had been contested by Roosevelt. In every case decision was reached after full hearings of the facts in the cases; and i. only one instance did the Roosevelt leaders ask for a full test of strength.

In the Fifth Arkansas district where charges of violence and fraud were made by both sides, Committeeman Burnam of Kentucky, asked that both delegations be seated with a half-vote each. He got ten votes for his motion; those of Knight of California, Burnam of Kentucky, Wight of Louisiana, Kellogg of Minnesota, Littauer (representing Flanigan,) of Nevada; Duell (representing Ward,) of New York; Capers of South Carolina, Thorson of South Dakota, Loose of Utah, Rogers of Wisconsin.

On this roll call, of the others who hitherto have usually voted with the anti-Taft contingent, Du Pont of Delaware voted with the Taft people and Lyon of Texas and Bieber of the District of Columbia, were recorded as "present, but not voting."

Not all the viva voce votes were unanimous; negatives were heard on many of these, but there was no way of surely identifying the voices.

In such other cases when the roll call was asked for as especially by the Taft men, it was desired in order that the committee might go unanimously on record in favor of the seating of the delegates.

The Roosevelt men on the committee, or those who have indicated support of some of the Roosevelt contests, asked searching questions and repeatedly prolonged the allotted half-hour, or hour of discussion, to establish fully the merits of the southern contests.

After the noon hour, the demand for votes became less numerous and in the majority of the Florida and Georgia cases, the Taft delegates were seated by viva voce votes, a scattering sound of "no" greeting the majority of those in the Georgia contests.

SOUTHERN REPUBLICANISM.

With opposing negro attorneys presenting the questions of regularity in Florida and Georgia, and with the Taft and Roosevelt contest managers asserting their opinions in vigorous language at to the character of southern Republicanism, the day's session took on an interest that held the committee members closely.

The Georgia contests were of a distinctly legal character. Ormsby McHarg, the Roosevelt attorney, contended that the Taft conventions had been held at a time and under a call that could not be legal, because the annual registration lists had not

SEVENTY-TWO TO NOTHING IN FAVOR OF MR. TAFT.

Even Roosevelt's Own Men on Committee Are Voting Against the Colonel.

They Find No Merit at All in the Contests So Far Debated and the Third Termer's Camp in Chicago Now Presents the Pitiful Spectacle of a House that Is Divided Against Itself.

BY GEORGE GRISWOLD HILL.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] Seventy-two to nothing in favor of Taft up to this Saturday night.

"Steam roller?"

Not a bit of it. It has been by the practically unanimous vote of the Republican National Committee.

Not one Roosevelt contest thus far presented has had sufficient merit to enable all the Colonel's supporters of the committee to vote for the Roosevelt delegates.

ONLY TWO DIVISIONS.

In all the cases thus far decided there have been only two divisions. One of these occurred yesterday over the Ninth Alabama, when that sturdy and loyal supporter of the colonel, Cecil Lyon of Texas, voted for the Taft delegates solely on the merit of their claim.

The other occurred today in the case of the Fifth District of Arkansas, on which the vote stood forty-two to ten in support of a motion to seat all four delegates, with half a vote each. The Roosevelt supporters on the committee number fifteen.

LOSES HEAD AND HOPE.

Ormsby McHarg was the institutor of most of the southern contests. Having lost his head, and by the violence of his language embittered the southern delegates beyond the possibility of repair, he has given up the fight and declares the Rooseveltites will appeal to the Credentials Committee of the national convention.

"What is the use of wasting our energy, when we know what they will do? We are going to carry our fight to the Committee on Credentials," declared McHarg this evening.

Lyon W. Kellogg and other Roosevelt members bitterly resent this.

That there is not the slightest chance that the Committee on Credentials, which will be composed in large part of the very men whom McHarg has attempted to browbeat, and who assert that he has grossly insulted them, will reverse the actions of the National Committee, taken in almost every instance unanimously, every Roosevelt leader knows. That is the reason the Roosevelt leaders are so dejected.

"BILL" FLINN'S COMMITTEE.

"Bill" Flinn organized his circus committee this afternoon. "Bill" calls it a "steering committee." He thinks that sounds better. He says its purpose is to promote the interests of Col. Roosevelt on the floor of the convention, which, being translated, means that it is to attempt to create a stampede for the colonel regardless of the merits of his claims or the wishes "of the people."

People here don't believe the "Bill Flinn Committee" will get anywhere. They say the Taft people are too well organized and that, moreover, whatever chance there may have been to gain strength for the colonel, has been dissipated beyond redemption by the violence of McHarg's language and the gross misrepresentations of Senator Dixon.

In the course of today's session McHarg declared that "there is no Republican party south of the Mason and Dixon's line."

This assertion brought upon him a storm of protest not alone from the Taft men on the committee, but from a number of Rooseveltites, among them being Messrs. Capers of South Carolina and Lyon of Texas.

"If there is no Republican party in the South why did you go there after Roosevelt delegates?" demanded Gen. Powell Clayton.

McHarg had no answer ready.

THE GEORGIA CASES.

When the case of the Georgia delegates-at-large was being discussed H. S. R. Johnson, a Taft delegate, pleading the legitimacy of his title to a seat, said: "It was all harmonious. We had no idea there would be any contest. The motion to make the action of the convention unanimous was made and carried in the case of each delegate. And all was pleasant and peaceful until about the twelfth or fifteenth of April. Then we had a 'visitor.'"

Johnson then made a courtly southern bow in the direction of McHarg, who blushed.

He said no more but the committee well understood his meaning.

ROOSEVELT FRICTION.

There is serious friction in the Roosevelt ranks. Last night Senator Dixon issued an inflammatory statement in which he talked of the "steam roller" and declared there was no justice in the decisions of the committee and almost simultaneously Col. Roosevelt announced at Oyster Bay that he had never expected to receive more than two votes from Alabama, those of the two uncontested delegates from the Third District, and even showed to the newspaper men his confidential list, showing that he could not expect more. Even the newspaper men who are seeking to promote the cause of Mr. Roosevelt are incensed at his course for they all wrote dispatches declaring that rank injustice had been done by the committee only to be confronted this morning by Mr. Roosevelt's assertion that, in effect, he had no title to any of the seats from Alabama which his managers had contested and that the committee had done perfectly right. Then, too, Senator Dixon does not believe in the "Bill Flinn Committee." He has a notion that this past master in ward politics is out of place in a national convention and that his methods will serve only to bring down ridicule on the devoted Rooseveltites. But "Bill" is here and has organized his group of strong armed, leather-lunged fighters, Dixon to the contrary notwithstanding.

ROOSEVELT DISSOLUTION.

Another occasion of dissolution is the refusal of the colonel to announce in unequivocal terms that he will be regular whatever happens. His managers realize that their fight is lost and they have no desire to go out of the Republican convention and to become wanderers—men without a party. They are urging on the colonel their view that although he is doomed to defeat this year, he can, by remaining regular, make an earnest fight for the nomination in 1916, but he will not listen to their representations. Of course, he says, and Dixon feebly re-echoes him, that there will be no occasion for a bolt if he gets a "square deal," but he will not say that under no circumstances will he bolt, and that is what Dixon wants him to say and what he would like to feel certain of himself.

Col. Roosevelt now expects to come here next week. This, too, is in direct violation of the urgent representations of Senator Dixon and others of his supporters. They feel certain that if he comes he will bolt, and they gravely fear he will make of himself a spectacle which will prevent his ever again being seriously considered for office, while they, too, will go with him down to irrevocable defeat.

While they have kept the wires hot urging the colonel not to come, they have been emphatically denying that he would come. But today George W. Perkins admitted that Col. Roosevelt would come and would occupy the rooms at the Blackstone Hotel which are now occupied by Mr. Perkins.

The hollowness of the Roosevelt contests is producing a most depressing effect on all of his followers. Comparatively few of them have had any idea of their hollowness. They supposed the contestants could at least offer some basis on which every Roosevelt member of the National Committee could get together. Now they realize that these contests are merely grand stand plays, instituted that they might produce the greatest measure of moral effect in the North, and afford a basis for the ridiculous claims of Senator Dixon and his associates and might influence at least that portion of the voters in the North who place anxiety to be on the winning side to get on the band wagon above personal preferences and convictions.

LOSING DIXON.

Of course, the feeling of Senator Dixon and those who have made the fight with him is that the coming of Flinn and those he has associated with him on the "Bill Flinn Committee," together with the coming of Col. Roosevelt himself, means that the former are to be set completely aside. They appreciate that the spectacular strong-arm game which "Bill" Flinn is prepared to play, is the game which most appeals to the colonel. They know only too well from what he has said to them over the long distance telephone that he regards Dixon and his assistants as weak sisters, prepared to confess defeat after the first battle. They realize perfectly that he is utterly impatient of any reasoning based on his, or their, future in the Republican party; that he would stake his all—and their own—on the throw of the dice now and would trust to his own destiny, in which he believes so firmly, to extricate himself four years hence. And none of these realizations adds in the slightest degree to their comfort. Nor would it surprise them in the slightest degree if ultimately he were to turn on them in his defeat and charge them with his undoing, because of the manner in which they have deceived him regarding the strength of their contests and the extent of his own popularity.

AT TAFT HEADQUARTERS.

At the Taft headquarters the atmosphere is wholly different. Chairman McKinley, Secretary Hilles and their associates are all rejoiced at the proof which the National Committee by its unanimous action is affording their contentions that the Roosevelt contests are all spurious and that they had no basis whatever except on paper. They are not permitting themselves to be quite jubilant. They are determined to proceed cautiously and surely, making no mistakes as they go along. They are certain that if they make no

FLINN ARRIVES IN WINDY CITY.

Round-up Committee Named in Chicago.

Rooters from Various States Invited to Come.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 8.—The arrival of William Flinn of Pittsburgh, the departure of George W. Perkins for Ohio, an all-day conference of a score of leaders and announcement that a demonstration for their candidate would take place in Chicago next Wednesday, marked the activities of the Roosevelt campaign managers today.

The Roosevelt headquarters held the center of the stage today, aside from the deliberations of the National Committee, and tonight further interest was aroused by semi-official announcement that Col. Roosevelt would be in Chicago next Thursday, possibly earlier.

The information that Col. Roosevelt would arrive about the middle of next week came from several apparently authoritative sources, although Senator Dixon, director of the Roosevelt campaign bureau, said he did not think the former President would be on hand.

George W. Perkins, just before his departure for Ohio, was quoted as saying he had made reservations for Col. Roosevelt at a Chicago hotel. John V. Clinnin, an officer of the Spanish-American War veterans also said he had received information direct from Oyster Bay that Col. Roosevelt would be in Chicago in time to address a reunion of the veterans next Thursday night.

"ROUND UP" COMMITTEE.

Other reports stated that Col. Roosevelt would be here in time to be present at the planned demonstration of his middle western followers Wednesday afternoon. This expected demonstration was the outgrowth of today's conference at the Roosevelt headquarters. Telegrams were sent to hundreds of men in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and other States urging them to reach Chicago Wednesday morning. During this meeting, also, an organization was perfected to advance Col. Roosevelt's candidacy and to act as a "round-up" committee in meeting Roosevelt delegates on their arrival to attend the convention.

William Flinn of Pittsburg, was made president of this organization and Frank Knox, of Michigan, secretary. The meeting was attended by the following:

William Flinn, Pittsburg; Frank Knox, Michigan; Medill McCormick, Chicago; Thomas Niedringhaus, St. Louis; Gov. Stubbs, Kansas; George Priestley, and George M. Disney, Oklahoma; Dr. Harry Waldo Coe, Oregon; Dwight B. Heard, Arizona; Latham Merriam, Nebraska; Edwin M. Lee, Indiana; Milton V. Purdy, Minnesota; E. C. Carrington, and Galen Taite, Maryland; Walter L. Brown and Nat C. Wright, Ohio; Robert Burton, North Dakota; S. S. McNinch, North Carolina; E. A. Dickinson, California; George L. Record, New Jersey.

Activities at the Taft headquarters were continuous. Robert O. Bailey, assistant secretary of the treasury, arrived in Washington and met Congressman McKinley with several other Taft adherents.

Mr. Bailey said no particular significance attached to his visit.

McKINLEY'S STATEMENT.

Congressman McKinley, director of the Taft forces, reviewing the acts of the National Committee in seating the Taft delegates, declared that "nine-tenths of the decisions had been by unanimous vote."

"So much for Senator Dixon's charge that a steam roller is operating in the governing body of the Republican party," said Congressman McKinley.

Continuing his comment, Mr. McKinley declared:

"The bad faith of all of the Roosevelt contests, however, is amply reflected by Theodore Roosevelt himself when, after having one contest after another thrown out by the unanimous vote of the committee, he said he never expected more than two votes in Alabama, anyway. This statement alone illustrates the absolute dishonesty of all the Roosevelt contests and admits that Mr. Roosevelt now knows that his demand for a renomination from the national convention is a false pretense from beginning to end.

"Nevertheless, when Mr. Roosevelt holds his bolting convention in Chicago, he will demand that every one of these fraudulent delegates elected in his behalf and thrown out by the unanimous votes of the National Committee, including all the Roosevelt members thereof, shall be seated in his own convention and he will proclaim them throughout the land as the only true blue Republicans from the States whence they come."

ILL-FEELING ENGENDERED.

Bad feeling between Roosevelt and Taft leaders, which sputtered intermittently yesterday and last night, became acute today and threatened to break into an open clash in the meetings of the Republican National Committee.

The gravity of the situation was driven home this morning when a police detail of thirty plain clothes men and uniformed patrol men took their station at the Coliseum annex where the contest hearings are being held.

The subject of a possible clash was discussed until a late hour last night at several conferences of leaders on both sides at downtown hotel headquarters. Officers of the national committee joined with others of prominence in the party councils in stating that all possible efforts were being made to prevent any occurrence that might reflect upon the conduct of the preconvention deliberations.

William Flinn of Pittsburgh, who comes to Chicago a sthe personal representative of Col. Roosevelt, and who, the Taft manager charge, had planned a demonstration at the committee sessions, reached Chicago in time to confer with Senator Dixon of the Roosevelt bureau, before the committee sessions.

ROOSEVELT TO COME.

According to those in close touch with developments in the Roosevelt headquarters where the conference obtween Senator Dixon, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Flinn and a majority of the Roosevelt members of the national committee continued through a greater portion of the day it was decided to have Col. Roosevelt come to Chicago as soon as possible. This report was followed by another that Senator Borah and others had determined to change their plan of action in the committee sessions and that opposition to all Taft contested delegates would be made beginning with Monday's sessions.

Col. Roosevelt was said to be in continual communication by telephone with Senator Dixon and Mr. Perkins, and also to have made numerous suggestions to be read to them during the deliberations.

Former State Senator J. F. Manning of Vermont, now in Chicago, made formal announcement of the candidacy of Gov. John Abner Mead of Vermont for the Republican Vice-Presidential nomination.

MR. FLINN'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Flinn declared the rumors which had preceded him were less substantial than air.

"I am not here to start a roughhouse. I have no monkey wrench to throw into the steam roller," said Mr. Flinn. "I am here simply to do what little I can to further the nomination of Col. Roosevelt.

"I am so out of touch with political methods that if I got in front of the steam roller I might be crushed myself, so I don't think I shall attend any of the sessions of the National Committee.

"If his friends advise him that his presence is necessary or desirable, Col. Roosevelt will come to Chicago," said Mr. Flinn.

THE QUESTION OF BOLT.

The question of a possible bolt by the Roosevelt men was parried by Mr. Flinn, who said:

"It all deepnds on the outcome of the contests. If the steam roller crashes along without regard to justice it will be time enough to think of that question."

Other arrivals were Thomas F. Niedringhaus of St. Louis, newly elected national committeeman from Missouri, who joined the Roosevelt workers, and former Congressman James A. Tawney of Minnesota, who sought the Taft headquarters.

A committee of Indiana delegates, both Taft and Roosevelt men, conferred with Fred A. Sims of Indiana, and former Senator James A. Hemenway, concerning the advisability of having one State headquarters during the convention. The Taft men on the committee are Capt. W. E. English, Clement Studebaker, Jr., and Webb Woodfill. The Roosevelt men are Edward C. Toner and Enos Porter.

MRS. DIXON ARRIVES.

Mrs. Joseph Dixon, wife of the Montana Senator, arrived for the national convention with a typical Roosevelt family.

A CONFESSION.

A plain, common-sense, everyday reason for the overwhelming preference of classified advertisers for The Times is that Times "Want Ads" pull better and get quicker and more satisfactory results than those of all other local newspapers combined. This knowledge, born of experience, impels almost every classified advertiser in this field to patronize The Times, with the result that this paper regularly prints practically all the "Liners" carried by the five other Los Angeles papers, in addition to a vast number that cannot be found in any other publicity medium. Very few persons have the time or inclination to read the "Liner" section of more than one newspaper, and for the reason stated, a very great majority of the people of Los Angeles and the Pacific Southwest, no matter what other newspapers they may take, invariably turn to The Times when they are in search of employment or help, or when they desire to rent, let, buy, sell, exchange, borrow, lend or transact any other kind of business expeditiously and profitably.

An average week's record: For the week ending Saturday, June 8, The Times printed 16,954 separate "Liners," or 6496 more than its nearest local contemporary, and 1618 more than the total number printed by the two other local morning papers put together.

The Times has more bona fide subscribers and is delivered into more homes, offices and business houses in Los Angeles, all Southern California, San Joaquin Valley, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico and the northernmost parts of Old Mexico than any of its local contemporaries, and, by reason of its being known far and wide as the leading newspaper of the Pacific Coast, it is read exclusively by fully 85 per cent. of the tourists and prospective settlers that annually visit Los Angeles and Southern California.

The Times daily average circulation for May, 1912, was 63,237 copies, and its Sunday only average circulation for the same month was 90,029 copies. The purchasing power of the buyers in Los Angeles and the Pacific Southwest is represented in these figures.

Times "Want Ads" afford the maximum of publicity at the minimum cost, and they add to the prosperity of those who use and read them. Procrastination is not only the thief of time, but the enemy of progress and individual advancement.

SEVENTY-TWO TO NOTHING.

mistakes their candidate cannot lose and they are determined there shall be none.

Their absolute confidence in the situation is revealed by their emphatic refusal to accept a compromise proposed by the Rooseveltites, in connection with the Indiana delegates. The Roosevelt people have instituted contests against the four delegates-at-large and the eight delegates from the First, Third, Fourth and Thirteenth Districts, respectively. Mr. Roosevelt is extremely anxious to win the delegates-at-large, or at least two of them. Accordingly a representative of the Roosevelt faction came to ex-Senator Hemenway and proposed a comprise whereby two Taft and two Roosevelt delegates-at-lage should be seated and one of each faction from each of the four districts. The proposition was immediately and emphatically rejected. Mr. Hemenway declares that there is not the slightest color of right on the part of the Roosevelt contestants and that there is no reason whatever why the Taft people should agree to a compromise. He contends that even apart from certain technicalties which have been raised by the Rooseveltites President Taft had a clear majority in/each of the conventions which elected these delegates and the Taft managers have decided to carry the fight to the last ditch. It is explained that the reason why Mr. Roosevelt is especially concerned about the Indiana contests is that a decision in favor of the President will exclude ex-Senator Beveridge from the convention and Mr. Roosevelt has faith in the oratorical powers of "the boy orator."

The Indiana contests will probably come up the first thing Monday morning and a decision in favor of President Taft will be regarded by all here as a crushing blow to the Roosevelt cause. There are few cases regarding which Mr. Roosevelt has talked so violently and extravagantly and the general impression among those who have not investigated the contests for themselves is that either he has been grossly deceived, or there must be some merit in them. The Taft people assert in the most emphatic terms that there is no merit in them and that the colonel must have been deceived, although the colonel's frank avowal that he expected to get only the two non-contested delegates from Alabama has somewhat shaken their faith in the hypothesis that his wild cries of fraud have been wholly due to his having been misled. It may be added that Col. Roosevelt's belated statement that there was "naked theft" in the case of the Ninth Alabama contests deceives no one here and is recognized to have been issued solely at the instance of Mr. Dixon, for Mr. Roosevelt made it perfectly clear that he knew last night no theft had been perpetrated.

POLITICAL HUMOR.

Serious as is the business before the National Committee, its sessions are not without humor, especially when some of the "colored brethren" take the stand. One of these was protesting against the hardships occasioned by the holding of district conventions in Florida outside the districts themselves. Ignoring the fact that this rule for economy because the same delegates who go to the State convention immediately afterwards hold the district conventions in the same town, he said:

"We's poor people down in Florida and it sure do work great hardship for us poor niggers to go outside our districts to those district conventions."

"But if you did not have the money to go to the district convention how did you get here to Chicago for this meeting?" asked a member of the committee.

"Well boss, we done it by jackpots," was the reply which amazed the committee.

"'Deed it was this way," continued the negro as he twisted his hands. "We wanted to come here to protect our rights so we jes' raised a little jackpot in each of our churches and that was where the money came from."

Gov. Stubbs blew into Chicago today. When asked by a newspaper man for what particular purpose he had come, the Governor replied:

"I have come to Chicago to stay until Theodore Roosevelt is nominated for President."

"Have you bought a house?" inquired the newspaper man, but he received no answer.

"Where is Gov. Deneen?"

This was the question heard on the lips of many of the Roosevelt leaders this afternoon.

It appears that Gov. Deneen was seen to arrive in Chicago today, but he promptly disappeared and could not be located subsequently. The Governor is in the unfortunate position of a man who wants, above all things, to get on the winning band wagon. He supposed Col. Roosevelt had a sure thing and announced that he was for the colonel But things have begun to look pretty blue to the Governor during the last two days and he does not care to become too closely identified with the Roosevelt organization. That is why the Rooseveltites were all hunting him while he remains in secure if not comfortable obscurity.

One of the most indignant men when Ormsby McHarg made his assertion that there was no Republican party south of the Mason and Dixon line, was H. L. Remmel, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Arkansas, and Mr. Remmel had figures to prove the falsity of the statement.

In 1896 Mr. Bryan polled 71,752 votes in Arkansas. In 1908 he polled only 22,056. In 1908 Mr. Taft received 56,750 votes in Arkansas, which was 9932 more than Mr. Roosevelt had received four years before, and which equaled 37.89 per cent. of the total vote of the State. To put it another way, the Republican vote of Arkansas is larger than that of Delaware, Idaho, Montana, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont Under the circumstances, Mr. Remmel submitted that Arkansas not only has a Republican party, but that it is very lively and growing, and that even a fit of anger afforded no excuse for Mr. McHarg's aspersion on that, as well as on the other southern States.

Meeting other assertions of the Roosevelt people, Mr. Remmel points out that in the Arkansas State convention there were 392 delegates, of whom only sixty-two were officeholders and only forty-nine were negroes. Altogether, Mr. Remmel is pretty proud of the lusty young Republican party in his State and he predicts that this year the Fourth District, now represented by Ben Cravens, who received a majority of less than 4000 out of 22,000 votes, will this year send a Republican member to the House.

FORTY-EIGHT DELEGATES.

been approved. This contention was denied by the Taft delegates. Their negro attorneys furnished however but part of the argument in the cases. The Taft forces, led by Henry L. Johnson, a negro attorney of Atlanta, whose argument was frequently applauded by the committee members characterized the Roosevelt contests in Georgia as "after-thoughts," and declared there had been no question in Georgia as to the interpretation of the State law "until after the advent of a stranger from the north" who reached the State about April 15. They did not name the "stranger," but the committee laughed as they thought they guessed his identity.

After the Arkansas cases had been decided Committeeman Lodwen of Illinois, insinuated laughingly, that Gen. Powell Clayton, the veteran leader of the Arkansas delegation-at-large, had himself instigated the contests against his faction.

From Florida in the cases of the delegation-at-large and of the first district, came two contesting delegations, each regarded as pro-Roosevelt and each hostile to the other as well as to the Taft delegates.

Some interesting side lights were thrown upon the Republican situation in the South by today's testimony and in spite of the intensity of feeling between the factions, the committee was several times in roaring laughter over the continual amusing episodes without much regard to their factional sympathies. Some of the hottest of the contests were from districts where white Republican voters are scarce.

HOW IT WAS ALL DONE.

There was excitement about the Coliseum Annex as the members of the National Committee began to assemble shortly before 10 o'clock. Reports that William Flynn of Pittsburgh would enter the committee upon a proxy and that Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota would open the day's proceedings with a protest against anything that might savor of "steam roller" methods invested the opening with unusual interest.

Roosevelt forces had agreed that a statement should be made to the committee, similar to that which Senator Borah of Idaho made yesterday.

Senator Dixon's statement last night that "the theft was cold-blooded premeditated and deliberate in this case had intensified the feeling between the Taft and Roosevelt adherents.

Allusions in Senator Dixon's statement to an alleged conversation in the committee-room between Senator Crane and A. M. Stevenson of Denver, in which the latter declared the delegates must be given to Taft, although "there is no justification for it," also angered several members of the committee, who threatened to bring it up on the floor.

Ormsby McHarg was prepared to present the rest of the Arkansas cases at once, but asked that when these were completed, the Georgia contests be taken up. In the Florida cases Mr. McHarg had asked for a postponement to Monday, because of the absence of some of his witnesses and assistants.

The two policemen regularly on duty outside the committee room were reinforced by two "plain clothes" men today

The Taft forces from Florida appeared at the hour of the committee meeting and National Committeeman Chubb from Florida said the cases would be called at the conclusion of the Arkansas arguments.

The committee opened without friction. Chairman Rosewater said the Third Arkansas District case would be called at once if there was no other business. No objections met this proposal and the Arkansas attorneys and contestants were invited into the room.

THIRD ARKANSAS.

The Third Arkansas District presented another case of two conventions, both held in the same hall, the one appointed for the meeting. The Taft delegates were headed by R. S. Granger of Eureka Springs and the Roosevelt delegates by Tom Williams of Rogers.

"We are not claiming regularity, as that term is used within the party," said J. A. Comer of Little Rock, opening the Third District contest for the Roosevelt contestants, "but we do claim that we represent the majority of the Republicans. As typifying the situation in Arkansas, I will point out what happened in Washington county. There, the county convention met in response to the call of the regular organization, but when the Taft forces saw they were outnumbered by the Roosevelt men, five to one, they resolved themselves into a mass convention and from that time on, there were two conventions."

Mr. Comer declared the chairman of the committee, or convention, in Arkansas would recognize only his own friends and declare their motions carried even though the vote was overwhelmingly against them.

The Granger or Taft delegates rested their case largely on the regularity of their committee and convention actions.

The Taft delegations were seated unanimously.

As soon as the arguments were ended Frank B. Kellogg, of Minnesota (a Roosevelt follower) moved that the Taft delegation be placed on the convention roll.

A roll call was asked for by a rising vote of almost the full committee and the Taft delegates were indorsed. 51 to 0.

FOURTH ARKANSAS.

The Fourth Arkansas district contest was then called. The Taft delegation was known as the "Spear delegation," the Roosevelt as the "Legate delegation."

Wallace Townsend, who had appeared in the Arkansas cases yesterday, again contended for complete regularity in all proceedings by which the Taft delegates were chosen.

J. A. Comer charged there was no organization which represented the Republican party. It was brought out that no call for the district convention had been issued by a district committee.

The Taft delegates were seated by another unanimous vote.

FIFTH ARKANSAS.

In the next case, from the Fifth Arkansas district, which contains Little Rock, the capital of the State, and eight counties, headed by W. S. Holt of Little Rock, again were the contestants against the "Morrow faction," the Taft delegation.

"We had 109 of the 182 delegates to the Pulaski county convention," said Mr. Holt. "We went to the convention hall and were met by policemen with clubs and revolvers. If the Taft forces had the majority, why didn't they use it, instead of keeping us out?

"As we couldn't get into the hall, we finally held our convention just outside of the door."

In one township of Pulaski county, Mr. Holt said, four Taft men had chosen the whole ticket of county delegates; in another three Taft men had acted. He charged that in his own ward in Little Rock, the second, National Committeeman Powell Clayton refused to admit them at first to the appointed place.

Finally the Roosevelt crowd forced its way into the hall and selected a list of delegates, Gen. Clayton leaving the hall.

Later, said Mr. Holt, Gen. Clayton came back with twenty or thirty and selected another set of delegates, who were later declared legal.

Mr. Holt charged that postmasters dominated Arkansas politics.

"How long were you postmaster of Little Rock?" demanded Gen. Clayton.

"Twelve years and four months," replied Holt.

Mr. Redding, who called the Roosevelt convention, declared a "bunch of hoodlums" had carried their convention in 1908, and had been recognized at the Chicago national convention.

"We are here trying to correct the error of four years ago," said Mr. Redding.

"You say that the national convention made a mistake four years ago, do you?" asked Committeeman Capers of South Carolina.

Mr. Redding said he thought the 1908 action had been a mistake.

"We want to do everything in a regular manner," said Mr. Holt, "but how can we when we are met at the door by thugs armed with clubs and '45s'? Unless you want to put your seal of approval on such thuggery, you will have to seat our delegates."

Wallace Townsend, representing the Taft faction, declared the Roosevelt delegates were urging "the revolutionary doctrine of their illustrious chieftain," the recall of judicial decisions.

Mr. Townsend declared the Redding committee, under which the Roosevelt convention was held, had gone out of existence in 1908, while the "Clayton committee" had acted as the regular committee in 1910 and had maintained its regularity.

He denied any armed men had guarded the doors of the Pulaski county hall.

Committeeman Burnam of Kentucky, a Roosevelt man, moved to substitute for the motion to seat the Taft delegates a provision for the seating of both delegations with a half vote.

This was defeated by the first test vote of the day—forty-two to ten.

The original motion was then carried by a viva voce vote.

SEVENTH ARKANSAS.

J. A. Comer, for the Roosevelt or "Oastler" delegates, declared that there was no Republican regularity in the Seventh. Mr. Townsend steadily insisted on the regularity of action.

The Seventh district Taft delegates were unanimously declared legal.

THE FLORIDA CASES.

The Florida cases cover the whole State delegation—the six delegates-at-large and the six district delegates—two from each of the three Congressional districts. Two so-called Roosevelt delegations presented claims for the delegations-at-large and two for the seats in the First District.

The Florida cases were then taken up, beginning with the six delegates-at-large.

The Taft delegation was headed by National Committeeman Henry S. Chubb. The second Roosevelt delegation, the "Groves delegation," was represented by C. H. Alston, a negro. Alston and his men got into the room where the regular convention was being held, but were put out.

The Chubb delegates, or Taft faction, were also represented by a negro, Joseph W. Lee of Jacksonville. Lee disputed McHarg's statement that there was no Republican party in Florida. McHarg retorted that the regular procedure of the party had not been followed in Florida.

The Taft delegates were unanimously seated.

C. H. Alston, representing the second set of Roosevelt delegates, asserted that both the Taft and other Roosevelt delegations had been elected by conventions from which many Republicans had been excluded.

The two Taft delegates from the First district were seated over the adverse votes of two or three members of the committee. Committeeman Thorson of South Dakota offered a motion to exclude all three delegations from the convention. The Taft motion was offered as a substitute. No roll call was demanded.

In the case of the Third District of Florida, Mr. McHarg again said there had been no proper call for the convention.

The Taft delegates were seated by a unanimous vote without a roll call.

GEORGIA CASES.

Then came the Georgia cases, covering the entire State, four delegates-at-large and two in each of the twelve Congress districts, twenty-eight in all.

Mr. McHarg proposed to bunch them in one presentation, but ex-Senator Dick, representing the Taft interests, objected.

The Georgia cases were taken up separately. The contest over the four delegates-at-large was first called.

The "Johnson delegates," for Taft, were four in number, while the "Tilson delegation," for Roosevelt, comprised eight, double the number alloted to Georgia by the national committee last December. Dean E. Ryman, a Roosevelt contestant, said the law of Georgia required the preparation of a new registration list on April 20, last, and the Taft conventions were illegal because they were held without any regard to the new registration lists, but on the basis of old lists.

Questioned by the opposing attorneys whether the new registrations were available in time to meet the requirements of the conventions, Mr. Ryman declared they were ready the day after the law required them to be taken.

"The OWL" Celebrates Its 20TH Birthday

Twenty years ago this week, the first Owl Drug Store was opened in Market Street, San Francisco. The event was of real moment to the people of the Pacific Coast. Our plan was to conduct the drug business on a strictly business basis, and from the very beginning of its career, "The Owl" set aside all precedents, working out its own methods, as every pioneer has to do. Progressive ideas prevailed—as they will always prevail if based upon right principles and intelligently carried out. We are proud of the fact that "The Owl" Drug Company has grown in the last twenty years, from one store, with eight employees, to Eighteen Modern Stores and a large Manufacturing and Distributing Plant, employing more than seven hundred persons in all.

We know that unless "Owl" Prices, Quality and Service were RIGHT, we could not expect the support of the public. Our success is the best evidence possible of such rightness. You, however, who recognize the merit of "The Owl's" plan of conducting the drug business, are entitled to our utmost appreciation.

Therefore, to commemorate our twentieth birthday, we will hold this week a series of vigorous Special Sales. We will offer such prices and attractions that you cannot afford to miss reading "The Owl's" advertisements every day. Indeed, it will be worth while to every Man, Woman and Child to visit an Owl Drug Store not only once, but many times during this week.

"It's Better"—BORATED Peroxide of Hydrogen

"A Few Drops Are Enough"

—"Leaves No Metallic Taste"—

Pint is Priced Regularly 25c Special Monday 19c

Borated Peroxide of Hydrogen possesses DOUBLE the antiseptic properties of ordinary Peroxide. It contains one per cent. of pure Boric Acid. You'll find also that it retains its strength longer, and is immensely more pleasing to use than the ordinary, common grades of peroxide, which contain Acetanilid. One of "The Owl's" Quality products.

For Mouth and Throat

A teaspoonful in half a glass of water for gargle or mouth wash is quite sufficient to disinfect the mouth, teeth or throat.

For Pimples and Sallowness

Very few lotions are as good and efficacious under such conditions as Borated Peroxide of Hydrogen. Just apply it to the skin.

As a Hair Bleach

Borated Peroxide is the safest bleach to use, as it is strictly non-irritating—the acidity being reduced to a minimum. You see, this is strictly a SAFE Peroxide.

For Tan and Sunburn

Dilute the Borated Peroxide with two or three parts of water. You'll find its effect pleasantly grateful.

For Colds and Catarrh

Dilute the Borated Peroxide with six parts of water and use a nasal douche or atomizer.

BORATED Is Safe

Perfectly safe to use Peroxide now, if you use the BORATED. It's the cheapest kind of health protection. Ask your Physician or Dentist what he thinks of BORATED Peroxide of Hydrogen.

PASTOR FACES MURDER CHARGE

Maine Minister Accused of Killing Wife's Father.

Victim's Son Was Originally Under Suspicion.

Farmer's Body Was Found in Grove a Year Ago.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW SWEDEN (Me.) June 8.—On a charge of murder the Rev. Charles Emelius, a Lutheran minister, was arrested here today. He is accused of having killed August Jacobson on June 17, 1911. The local authorities at the time pronounced Jacobson's death a case of suicide, but representatives of the Attorney General's office maintained he had been murdered.

Mr. Emelius was taken to Presque Isle, where he will be given a hearing. Several witnesses accompanied the officers, including Edgar Jacobson, son of the dead man, who was arrested last April, charged with having murdered his father, but who was discharged.

Mr. Emelius, who is about 30 years old, came to New Sweden a year ago and married Jacobson's daughter last fall.

Jacobson was a prosperous farmer and leading citizen of New Sweden. He was found dead in a clump of trees on his farm June 12, 1911.

CHINESE SMUGGLED IN.

San Francisco Officials Ask Los Angeles Police to Arrest Man Who They Say Superintended the Job.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] Evidence accumulated today, the authorities report, to show that Capt. Adolph Adolphson now in the Federal toils has been the leader of a ring that has been smuggling Chinese and opium into this country.

The State immigration agents learned that over a score of Chinese were smuggled into Moss Landing, near Watsonville, in Santa Cruz county last night and the government authorities have received information that "Billy" Lungrin, an alleged accomplice of Adolphson, for whom there is a warrant outstanding, was responsible for landing the Chinese.

The authorities have learned that after superintending the smuggling of the coolies at Moss Landing, Lungrin proceeded to Los Angeles. Police and government officers of Los Angeles have been notified to arrest him.

Capt. Frank Ainsworth, inspector in charge of the immigration service, and several deputies went to Santa Cruz county this afternoon to make an investigation.

MISSIONARIES EXONERATED.

Japanese Governor-General of Korea Explains His Government's Attitude on Christian Movement.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEOUL (Korea) June 8.—Gen. Count Terauchi, Japanese Governor-General of Korea, quietly visited Pyongyang and met the American missionaries, to whom he explained the Japanese government's attitude on the Christian movement in Korea.

Count Terauchi said the stories concerning a conspiracy on the part of Korean Christians against his life were unquestionable true, but that the utmost leniency had been exercised towards those having connection with it. He gave the missionaries his personal assurances there had been no torture of prisoners.

Count Terauchi said the government exonerated the missionaries from any connection with the conspiracy and told them he would cooperate with them in their movement. The missionaries expressed their deep satisfaction with the Governor-General and their confidence in him.

ROLPH LENDS HIS AID.

Mayor of San Francisco Rushes Specialists to Bedside of Old Colored Usher and Saves His Life.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] In the rush and whirl of his manifold public duties Mayor Rolph has proved that he still has his ear turned to the call of humanity. Sweeping aside stacks of unanswered letters and the press of municipal affairs, he saved the life of George Cuthbert, his old colored usher, several nights ago in what the sensationalist might term, "An automobile race against death."

Recently Cuthbert was stricken with the complications that come with age and was confined to his bed at his home. One night during the week word came that the faithful usher was dying. Rolph jumped up from his chair.

"Get the machine," he said. "Ring up doctor so-and-so, and hurry up."

And they did. Two eminent specialists accompanied Rolph on the wild night ride to the home. Old Cuthbert was far gone. The physicians worked hard. An hour passed, then the aged colored man opened his eyes. The Mayor was standing by his bed. Old Cuthbert tried to rise but sank back.

"Boy," he murmured. "Bring a chair for his honor."

The physicians smiled. The crisis had passed. Cuthbert is now recovering slowly.

MALFEASANCE CHARGED.

OCEAN SHORE SUIT FILED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—Charges of "conspiracy, fraud, malfeasance in office and corrupt so-called 'high finance,'" are made against C. C. Moore, Peter D. Martin, J. Downey Harvey, J. A. Folger and H. D. Pillsbury, all directors of the Ocean Shore Railway, in a suit filed today to demand an accounting from them. Moore is president of the Panama-Pacific Exposition Company. It is alleged that the defendants mismanaged the road, speculated in lands along the right-of-way, and otherwise profited by the use of the company's funds to the extent of $2,000,000.

AUTO GOES OVER BANK.

Real Estate Operator of Los Angeles and Fresno Is One of Injured Persons in Martinez Smash.

(By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

MARTINEZ (Cal.) June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] By the wrecking of their automobile over a steep embankment as they were racing a train to a crossing near Byron Hot Springs last night, Peter Rice, a wealthy real estate operator of Fresno and Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Emery of San Francisco, and Harry Owens, the driver, were injured, the latter very seriously, by the heavy six-cylinder car, which skidded in making the turn to the crossing, and plunged over a thirty-foot embankment. All of the occupants of the car were thrown clear of the wreck, and were taken to Tracy later in the evening for medical care.

LORIMER CASE IS SET.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The Senate will vote on the question of unseating Senator Lorimer of Illinois Saturday, July 6. This date was agreed upon at a conference late today at which the views of both the pro-Lorimer and anti-Lorimer Senators were voiced. The agreement, however, was with the understanding that in the event of the adjournment of Congress earlier than July 6, the voting time would be advanced so that the case would be finally disposed of at this session of Congress.

PROHIBITION PLANS.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Delegates are being elected daily to the Prohibition National Convention and preparations for the quadrennial gathering are well under way. It was announced today by National Chairman Jones that there will be 1484 delegates at the gathering in Atlantic City June 10. Booms of candidates for nomination for President are appearing among those frequently named being Francis E. Baldwin of New York and Eugene W. Chafin of Arizona. I. H. Revelations.

ANOTHER PLOT IS DISCOVERED.

New Conspiracy Against Madero in Laredo, Tex.

American Arms Smuggled Across the Border.

Orozco Yields to the Demand of Consul Letcher.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) June 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] United States and Mexican government secret service men have "tumbled" to a new revolutionary movement in Mexico with Laredo, Tex., or the environs of that city, as the base of supplies.

Involved in this new plot against the Madero administration is Manuel Garza Aldape, one time candidate for Vice-President in the Orozco party of revolters, according to the secret service operatives. He is a wealthy landowner in Mexico. Aldape was wanted by the American government and a warrant was issued for his arrest about six months ago. At that time news came from Chihuahua that Orozco had arrested Aldape. This subsequently proved a ruse and while Aldape was supposed to be in prison in Chihuahua, he was in reality circulating through Texas.

The latest revolutionary plot includes the purchase of a large quantity of ammunition and rifles in St. Louis and Chicago which were sent in small consignments to this city and subsequently distributed at different points along the border. A number of these shipments have already successfully eluded the customs officers and border guards along the Rio Grande River. The war material, say the secret service men, was taken across the line at fords near Laredo and that city is apparently the base of the new operations. The States of Nuevo Leon, Coahuila and Tamaulis are practically form a junction fifty miles north of Laredo on the Rio Grande. All three States are now within Federal control.

GEN. OROZCO YIELDS TO OUR CONSUL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHIHUAHUA (Mex.) June 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gen. Pascual Orozco this afternoon sullenly yielded to the demands of the United States Consul Letcher and released Cruz Ortiz of El Paso, who was held in the military penitentiary here charged with being a spy in the employ of President Madero.

Ortiz, after his release, went to the American Consulate and a few minutes later boarded a train for Juarez.

Hot words are reported to have passed between Consul Letcher and Orozco during the latter's demand for the release of Ortiz. Orozco insisted Ortiz is not a citizen of the United States and maintained his right to believe his subordinates acted in good faith and had every reason to believe Ortiz was acting as a Madero spy.

In releasing Ortiz, Gen. Orozco heatedly informed the American Consul he would arrest any one found in the rebel zone whom he suspected of being a Madero follower.

Four others were arrested with Ortiz in Juarez and were brought here on the same train with him. They, too, claimed American citizenship. Consul Letcher has made no move in their behalf. What has become of the four, no one knows except the rebel officers and they refuse to tell. The presumption is they were sent to "the front for trial." It is not improbable they have been executed.

REBEL OUTPOSTS ARE WITHDRAWN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHIHUAHUA (Mex.) June 8.—Rebel outposts which hitherto have extended to Santa Rosalia, sixty miles south of Bachimba, where the main body of Gen. Orozco's troops are located, have been withdrawn to Ortiz, fifteen miles south of Bachimba. Federal scouting parties are believed to be in control of the railroad north of Santa Rosalia.

Cruz Ortiz, the American citizen, alleged to have been a government spy, was released today, following a demand by Marion Letcher, the American Consul.

BANDITS ATTACK AMERICAN CAMP.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GUADALAJARA (Mex.) June 8.—The camp of the Cinco Minas Mining Company, a New York corporation, was attacked by bandits, who were repulsed after a fight, in which two were killed and several on each side wounded. The defense was made by guards directed by E. J. Callahan and R. J. H. Spence, mining men. Rural and State guards are pursuing the bandits. The Cinco mines are northwest of this city, near the Tepic line. They are the property of the Marcus Daly estate.

FEDERALS OCCUPY TOWN OF MADERA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MADERA (Mex.) June 8.—Two hundred Federals, under Capt. Pinedo, recruited in Sonora, have taken possession of this town, the division point on the Mexican Northwestern Railroad, between Chihuahua and Juarez. The Federals found no rebels here when they entered.

The capture of Madera affords a distribution point directly west of Chihuahua and gives the government control of a portion of the Northwestern railway.

GIVEN DAMAGES.

SAN BERNARDINO (Cal.) June 8.—[By A. P. Day Wire.] A judgment for $10,000 was rendered by a jury today against the Salt Lake Railroad, in the suit of O. G. Griffin, a lumberman of Los Angeles, whose wife was killed in an automobile crash near here last October. Griffin's two children were killed in the same accident, which occured at a grade crossing. Mrs. Griffins' sister also lost

"Watch Us Grow."

POPULATION INCREASES AT A TREMENDOUS RATE.

"LOS ANGELES, 419,094 population."

These figures represent a conservative compilation made by the Los Angeles City Directory Company from the data collected by the new city directory about to be issued.

The increase numerically in the last year is greater than that of any similiar period in the history of the city and the estimate which is based on a house to house canvass will enable every enthusiastic resident of Los Angeles to "point with pride."

The new figures reveal the remarkable fact that for every day of the year, 168 people were added to our population, and not alone in population but throughout the business life of the city is the same marvelous ratio maintained.

Bank clearances for the first five months of 1912 as compared with a corresponding period a year ago are 25 per cent. greater, or, in round numbers, $759,000 more each day.

During the last twelve months building permits have been issued representing a valuation of $25,173,549.00, and of the total number of permits issued, 6500 were for residences.

SUBMARINE IS SUNK.

All on Board Lost When French Vessel Vendemaire and Battleship St. Louis Collide.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHERBOURG, June 8.—The French submarine Vendemaire was sunk today in collision with the battleship St. Louis. The submarine was cut in two. It is feared that the whole crew of twenty-six was drowned.

The accident occured during the practice maneuvers of the French fleet between Aurigny Island and Cape Hague, in the race of Alderney, where violent tidal currents prevail.

The battleship was steaming along when the Vendemaire appeared right under her bows. There was no time to avoid a collision. The St. Louis struck the submarine with terrific force, driving the latter below the surface. The engines of the warship had been reversed, but when she was brought to a stop the submarine had disappeared.

The Vendemaire was commanded by Lieut Prioul, a young ensign, and a crew of 25 men. She was launched July 7, 1910, and was the ninth vessel of the Pluvious type added to the French navy. She was 167 feet in length with a beam of 16 feet.

SAN DIEGAN ARRESTED.

SANTA CRUZ (Cal.) June 8.—The man arrested at Del Monte yesterday and brought here today, charged with having passed bogus checks on the Casa del Rey, signed Charles W. Clark, has been identified as John T. Taylor of San Diego. He is 22 years old. The police here have been informed that Taylor is wanted in other cities of the State, principally on the complaints of hotel men. Taylor posed as a son of Senator Clark of Montana. He traveled in an automobile and is said to have issued checks which may total $1000.

OXNARD BRIEFS.

OXNARD, June 8.—Rev. Father Bernard Vaughn, who for some little time has been in Los Angeles, reached here this afternoon by automobile for a short visit with his cousins, Mrs. George P. Austin and Mrs. Allan Backus. With him came Very Rev. Father Richard Gleason, William A. Childs, George W. Jansen and O. Redman. The party is on the way to Santa Barbara where Father Vaughn is to take the "rest cure."

The temporary building erected for the Sisters hospital, which is to be used until the main building is finished, will open for patients on Monday. The structure has been entirely furnished. In connection is to be organized a training school for nurses.

VOLCANO BURSTS.

ered by ashes. Since the change of climate in Alaska cattle, sheep and hogs have been able to feed out doors on Kadiak Island throughout the year. The volcanic ashes, if they fell on the island, eighteen inches deep, as they did on the decks of the steamship Dora, must have destroyed the grass, which, however, will grow again through the ashes.

Mt. Illiamna is more than 12,000 feet high and the blazing peak must present a magnificent spectacle to vessels at sea.

The red sky above Illiamna is visible seaward for 100 miles.

The efforts of the mountains to clear the debris from their clogged craters caused convulsions which were recorded in Washington, D. C., and very plainly in Seattle. After the chimneys were opened the needles in the observatories weer no longer agitated. The struggles of the volcanoes to break their fetters caused reports like the firing of cannon.

In Cordova, Alaska, the reports were so distinct that it was thought a vessel in distress was firing signals, or that a fleet of warships was engaged in target practice at sea. Speculation as to the cause of the explosion was set at rest when a shower of volcanic ashes from the northward began to descend upon Cordova. The explosions were heard even more clearly in Seward, which is nearer to the volcano.

FELT IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 8. — Earth shocks have been recorded by the seismograph at Georgetown University almost continuously since yesterday morning at 5 o'clock, the vibrations at last being of extraordinary violence.

It is estimated that the disturbance is within 2400 miles of Washington. Following heavy vibrations yesterday morning the seismograph continued to record lesser shocks throughout the day and night.

Vibrations beginning at 2:16 and at 4:05 this morning were even more pronounced than those of yesterday, and the university scientists believe the shocks must have been destructive.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—[By A. P. Day Wire.] The House voted today 72 to 47 not to include in the sundry civil appropriation bill the money necessary to continue President Taft's Tariff Board during the coming fiscal year.

BAN ON LONG HATPINS.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

CINCINNATI (O.) June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] The hatpin had the kibosh sign placed upon it by the leading clubwomen of this country when a resolution was passed at a meeting placing the ban on long hatpins. The decision came after several hours of discussion following a report made to the meeting that only a few hours before a man's face had been badly lacerated by a pin protruding from a woman's hat in a crowded street car.

DOWIE FORTUNE LOCATED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 8.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While Mrs. John Alexander Dowie, widow of the late Prophet Elija II, has been living in poverty, often in actual want, in her cottage in Zion City, watching the grave of her husband for fear his successor, Wilbur Glenn Voliva, will have it removed, a fortune in the name of Alexander Dowie has been lying idle in a bank in Edinburgh, Scotland. This information has just been made public by a confidential servant in the former Dowie mansion. Just before Dowie's death, when the money in the bank across the sea would have saved his religious kingdom, his mind became feeble and it is believed he forgot all about the vast sum that he had on deposit in the Scotland bank. Every Saturday afternoon for several years before his death Dowie would sit at his typewriter in his private office and write a letter to his foreign bankers, enclosing a check for a large sum of money. In all, it is believed he sent several hundred thousand dollars away in this manner without saying a word to his wife. Only one servant knew of these proceedings and this servant now has told the story.

Lux Orientalis.

LIGHT FROM THE EAST ON THE LIVING ISSUES.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] The following editorial comments on topics of the hour are printed today in eastern papers:

ACTION IS DEFINED. LAWS FOR AERO TELEGRAPHY.

[New York Tribune:] It is a fortunate thing that the international conference on wireless telegraphy meets so soon after the great disaster which so impressively demonstrated at once the immense utility of that device when properly employed, the annoyance and mischief which may result from its improper employment, and the lamentable results of its neglect. The cries for help which the devoted operators on the Titanic sent forth were answered in the saving of many lives. The failure of the officers of one ship to heed those cries or to ascertain what they were about was probably responsible for the loss of most if not all the lives which were lost. The confusion of messages through irresponsible operators caused untold embarrassment and distress. These items of record clearly suggest some of the chief lines on which this highly important conference should and presumably will act.

SAVED FROM REPROACH. FLYING ARTILLERY HERE.

[New York Herald:] The activity of our aviation officers has constantly saved the United States army and navy from the reproach that has been directed against the government for permitting this nation to fall behind its European neighbors in the developments of its aerial arm. Through the performance of Capt. Charles de F. Chandler and Lieut. Thomas Dewitt Milling yesterday at College Park, Md., the army—which is the first one to use an aeroplane—is the first to arm it with modern weapons of offense and to demonstrate the practicability of using artillery in actual flight.

An automatic gun invented by Col. Lewis, of the Coast Artillery, was fired from a Wright biplane operated by the officer when at an altitude of 300 feet above the ground, and the experiment was so successful that other trials will be attempted.

FLINN'S HOLY MISSION. DOWN WITH THE BOSSES.

[New York Sun:] At the request of Mr. Roosevelt, Contractor Bill Flinn, some time the errand boy and pupil of Mathew Stanley Quay and Chris Magee, has shipped to Chicago to fight and foil those sons of Belial, the "bosses," who dare to resist the superb boss.

Just before the departure of Contractor Bill on his holy mission, Mr. Roosevelt held a sort of cabinet council. He drew virtue and wisdom not only from Flinn but from another Flinnsylvanian power of righteousness, the Hon. Richard Quay, son of his "Loyal Friend," Matthew S.

The bosses must go—hell bent for Roosevelt.

FARSIGHTED POLICY. STEP NEARER INTERVENTION.

[Baltimore Sun:] To our minds the policy of the administration in regard to Mexico and Cuba has been tactful and farsighted. We do not wish to make light of, still less to attack, the sovereignty of any of the nations to the south of us. We don't wish to expand our borders by the fraction of an inch at their expense, and we wish to persuade them of that fact. Therefore, it is to be hoped that if the movement of marines be a step toward annexation, it also will be the last step.

REGULATION IMPERATIVE. CLEARINGHOUSE MONOPLY.

[New York World:] Theoretically a clearinghouse is a co-operative banking institution whose powers are as responsible and whose affairs are as public as those of the member banks. Practically the New York Clearinghouse is a private association of some banks which are responsible only to themselves and which exercise powers approximating those of life and death over other banks.

The is not only monopoly. It is monopoly without the slightest public responsibility or regulation. It is monopoly exercising powers beyond those of any officer of the government which charters banks, and powers in denial of those conferred by government under the free banking system.

They are powers too great for unregulated private control. Incorporation and public regulation of the clearinghouse have become imperative.

THE AGITATION BODY. NOT TO BE FRIGHTENED.

[New York Times:] The Democrats will not be frightened away from the tariff issue by the old cry about the disturbance of business by the "agitation" of tariff reduction.

We do not know whether the tariff can be made the controlling issue in the approaching campaign or not. It depends on the action of the Republican concention and the way in which that action is met by the Democrats. So far from upsetting the calculations of business men, it would render them far more certain, and it would put the enterprise of the country upon a basis of independence, vigor, and freedom that would give it the post it merits in international commerce.

ROOSEVELT ADMONISHED. LET LINCOLN REST IN PEACE.

[Philadelphia Inquirer:] For some days now the public has been given a rest from Roosevelt assaults upon the memory of Lincoln. This peace is blissful. May it continue.

Even through the heated term we can get along comfortably enough when Roosevelt merely quotes Roosevelt. It matters not what Roosevelt says, as Roosevelt, but if he has any love for the dead President, let him desist from profaning the name of Lincoln.

The two men are as wide apart as the moon is from the sun.

CHANGE OF MANAGEMENT.

A "Bishop's Aid For Boys" Is Appointed Superintendent of the Preston School in Ione, Cal.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, June 8.—At a meeting last night in this city the directors of the Preston School of Industry appointed Hugh E. Montgomery, of San Francisco superintendent of the institution at Ione, vice C. H. Dunton. The change in the management of the reform school was made, it was announced, for the good of the school. Montgomery takes charge July 1.

At the meeting Charles A. Swisler of Sacramento, president of the board, Rev. Father M. Lathrop of San Francisco and C. M. McKenney of Sutter Creek were present.

Hugh F. Montgomery is about 32 years old. He is at present holding the position of "bishop's aid for boys" under Bishop Nichols of San Francisco. His particular work has been the care and uprearing of boys.

Montgomery lived in Pasadena prior to going to San Francisco. He has devoted himself and part of his income for several years to juvenile work. This position draws a salary of $2000 per year.

CALLS IT "NAKED THEFT."

Roosevelt Sees Something That Really Justifies to Call the Ethical Police to Make an Arrest.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OYSTER BAY (N. Y.) June 8.—"There is one district in Alabama which represents naked theft," was all that Col. Roosevelt cared to say today regarding the work of the Republican National Committee at Chicago yesterday in deciding contests.

"I can't say anything more about it now," he continued. "It is too soon. I shall prepare a statement about it later in the day."

Col. Roosevelt indicated that the statement would be lengthy.

$10,000,000.00 A Year Wasted On Worthless Trusses

The Country is Flooded With Belt and Spring Contraptions Which Do More Harm Than Good.

Ninety-nine out of every hundred dollars spent for trusses might about as well be thrown away.

Close to $10,000,000.00 is wasted every year on belt and spring contrivances which the law should never allow to be sold.

Nine ruptured people out of ten are victims of trusses scarcely worth a paper of pins.

Nine sufferers out of ten are saddled up with good-for-nothing contraptions, which are letting them get worse all the time or which hurt so they keep a man in constant misery.

No wonder so many truss-wearers have scared themselves into thinking that an operation—in spite of its dangers—is about the only thing that can do any good.

No wonder so many truss-wearers—driven to desperation—have let themselves be hoodwinked into buying "appliances," "methods," "plasters," etc.—only to find that they were jumping from the frying pan into the fire—only to find that such things are simply the most worthless kinds of old-fashioned trusses masquerading under misleading names.

Is Your Truss Making Life Miserable?

It's a sin and a shame that so many ruptured people have had to drag through life at the mercy of trusses which are nothing less than a crime.

But the day is past when any man has to endure the curse of wearing such contraptions.

And the day is past when any man—if he takes heed in time—will ever have to face the dangers of operation.

You can easily prove that—by making a 60-day test—without having to risk a single penny.

Test This on 60 Days' Trial.

We have invented something so utterly different from everything else for rupture that it has received eighteen separate patents—something which has proved its merits in nearly 200,000 cases.

We have so much faith in this invention—we have seen what it has done for so many others—that we want to make one especially for your case and let you test it on 60-days' trial.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from bothering you—when you are working, exercising, taking a bath, and at all other times—if your rupture doesn't get better right from the start—then you won't have to pay us a penny.

Get Rid of Belts and Leg-Straps.

This revolutionary invention we offer you on 60-days' trial has no belt, no leg-straps or springs. Thousands say it is as comfortable as their clothing.

It is the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss—made on an entirely new principle.

Far more than just a truss—far more than merely a device for holding your rupture in place.

It provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture—does that by giving a soothing, strengthening, healing massage to the weak ruptured parts—all entirely automatically.

This massage (which is exactly like hospital massage) is so remarkably curative that 199 out of every 200 people who try the Cluthe Truss begin to get better right away. It has cured thousands after everything else—including operation in many cases—had done no good whatever.

The Things We Tell in Our Book.

Don't try to make up your mind from the few facts we can give you here, but wait till you get our free book of advice.

This sensational book—cloth-bound, 96 pages, 23 photographic illustrations, and 20 separate articles—is full of facts never before made public.

It explains just why operations are dangerous, and why, in case a man manages to recover from the operation, the surgeon nearly always tells him to keep on wearing a truss.

It explains why ordinary trusses simply shorten a man's life and why the law should put a stop to their sale.

And it puts you on guard against frauds and fakes—exposes the false claims and misrepresentation back of so-called "appliances," "methods," etc.

And it tells all about the Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss—just how it holds—how it gives the massage—how it is waterproof and holds when you take a bath—how you can try it 60 days without risking a penny, and how if you keep it it will cost you only a few dollars. And it gives you the names of over 5000 people who voluntarily testify to the merits of the Cluthe Truss.

"Worked Like a Miracle on Stomach and Nerves"

writes Mr. Martin Wohlschiess. Before he started using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey his stomach was all out of order and his nerves shattered, troubles that were quickly checked by this valuable medicine.

"For two years I suffered from my stomach and nervous trouble. My digestive organs were entirely out of order and all the money that I spent for relief was thrown away. I read about Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, tried it, taking four doses a day, and, like a miracle, within a very short time my ailments disappeared. My nerves are now quiet and my stomach can retain all food, and I am again in good condition. I recommend it to every sick person and will continue to do so."—Martin Wohlschiess, Neshamery P. O., Bucks County, Pa.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

WHAT IT IS—WHAT IT DOES

It is an absolutely pure distillation of clean, selected grain thoroughly malted. It is a predigested liquid food in the form of a medicinal whiskey; its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

By assisting digestion and assimilation, it enables you to get from the food you eat all the nourishment it contains. It builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles and richness to the blood. For stomach troubles, nervousness, typhoid, malaria, diseases of the throat and lungs it is wonderfully effective.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was taxed by the Government as a medicine during the Spanish-American War.

BE SURE YOU GET DUFFY'S and that the seal over the cork is intact. Sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY by druggists, grocers and dealers, $1.00 a large bottle. WINS LAURELS IN OLD WORLD.

California Girl Achieves a Triumph in Paris.

Miss Myriam Deroxe Given Prizes at Conservatory.

Crowns Work With Book on Parisian Life.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PARIS, June 8.—The latest foreigner to achieve fame in the French metropolis is a San Francisco girl of 22, Miss Myriam Deroxe. Success has smiled upon her in various ways. She has won first prizes at the Conservatory, she has been selected by the Sorbonne to expound French classical authors, and now the laurels of authorship in French encircle her own brow.

Miss Myriam Deroxe,
A California girl who has won high academic honors in Paris.

Miss Deroxe is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Derouxe of Eddy street, San Francisco. Her name is spelled differently from that of her parents, because when she was registered as a pupil of the Paris Conservatory the secretary dropped the "u" in error and the slip has remained on the books ever since. Like the late Minister Washbourne, who, when some distinguished personage added an "e" to his patronymic, was too polite to correct the error, so Miss Deroxe has suffered in silence the loss of the "u."

WINS SCHOLARSHIP.

By her mother's side the young woman is of French descent and this doubtless accounts for the wonderful way she advanced in the language and literature of France. At 17 her mother took her to Paris, where she began the study of French and elocution under the famous professor, George Guillemot. Her progress was such that after two years she won a scholarship at the Conservatory in a contest, which numbered half a thousand competitors. Furthermore, she won it by the unanimous vote of the professors.

They were impressed as well by her presence as by her attainments. For she is tall, strong-featured, with raven hair, large, lustrous, dark eyes and a bust of Venus. At the Conservatory she became a pupil of Paul Monet.

An annual prize is offered to "the most interesting pupil." Such are the terms of the deed of gift leaving the prize. By the most interesting is meant the most promising of the whole Conservatory. It is called the Poussin prize, after the name of the founder. The American girl carried it off with flying colors.

APPEARS IN "PHEDRE."

Every year also a classical play is given by the pupils of the conservatory before the most critical audience in Paris. "The most interesting pupil," otherwise Miss Deroxe, was selected to play the chief rôle in "Phedre." To win these honors she has had to excel in diction, declamation, interpretation of the passions as understood by the ancient Greeks, and in tragedy and comedy.

She won the applause of a most critical invited audience and the approval of a stoical staff of professors by her production of the most moving parts of "Phedre," and "Salome." It was Camille Saint-Saens, president of the Association of French Critics, who introduced Miss Deroxe to the authorities of the Sorbonne. So highly did he recommend her, that they did not hesitate to entrust to her the difficult task of expounding to pupils the choicest morsels of the French classics. The chief of critics mentioned, referred to her French as the highest example of the modern spoken classic.

So well does Miss Deroxe understand Paris life that Figuiere has just brought out a volume from her pen which is a vivid picture of the lighter side of the gay metropolis. The book is called, "The Love Which Wanders." It deals exclusively with French society. There are some forty characters, all of whom are so thinly veiled that a key to their names is not necessary. From a literary standpoint, it recalls the fine style of the late Jean Lorain. Ethically, an artist would be needed to defend it.

Not nomadic love, but deep grief arising from the breaking of an engagement founded upon a first devotion made an artist of Miss Deroxe. Profoundly wounded in her affections, she has given the heart intended for a husband to tragedy and comedy for the instruction and amusement of the pubi' is a strong factor in the fight for the national highway in the West. The path the pioneers chose is the path which the largest number of prominent men of the valley towns desire for this great turnpike.

COLORADO TAKES HEAD.

When our pathfinder came through this way, the wide awake men of Hutchinson, one of the largest towns in Kansas, diverted the car, and Harvey Herrick drove over the new Santa Fe trail. This has caused a controversy which was not settled until the meeting today, which proved a love feast, with men of the old and men of the new trail fraternizing one with the other and all boosting for a national highway.

ENTERING KANSAS.

With Colorado now in the lead of the road boosters of the United States, The Times car is resting, preparatory to the tour through Kansas.

Much is promised for the run between here and Kansas City, judging by the requests received from the towns this side of the Missouri River, and a triumphant tour is assured.

Secretary Frank F. Davis, of the National Old Trails' Association said tonight:

"Kansas will lead all the States this coming week. You can be sure that when the total is rolled up, at least 11,000 will have been pledged and I believe even more than that.

"Everything is planned for The Times car across the State. Meetings have been arranged and all you must do to score a success, is to keep to your schedule."

This schedule was changed tonight because of the interest shown and the fight in Colorado for the highest total. It means The Times car will be in Kansas City on Friday night, as meetings have been arranged in every town of importance along the old Santa Fe trail between here and Kansas City.

MACHINE STANDS UP WELL.

The Times car is now 1521 miles from Los Angeles and is 4050 feet above sea level. Los Angeles air is in both the front tires, and though the old machine is battle-scarred, mud-covered and is pasted all over with signs, it is good for the other half of the ocean-to-ocean tour, and success looms large on the eastern horizon.

National Organizer Potter plans to be in Chicago in time for the opening of the Republican National Convention. He has perfected a plan which is almost certain to mean a national highway plank. He expects to go there with 50,000 signatures of prominent men, Governors of States, Senators and Congressmen, and Mayors of the different cities touched by The Times car.

The names will be the argument offered by Potter for Federal aid later in Congress.

ORGANIZATION EFFECTED.

At the La Junta organization meeting, where $2500 was pledged, B. M. Spalding, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, of Otero county, was chosen president; H. C. Draper, vice-president; R. D. McClintock, secretary, and C. A. Beerbohm, treasurer.

The officers chosen at Las Animas, where $3000 was pledged, are: Frank Edbrook, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners of Bent county, president; Charles C. Hallgren, prominent sugar man, vice-president; J. L. Thompson, secretary and H. G. Scott, cashier of Bent County Bank, treasurer.

When The Times car reached Las Animas Mayor John C. Davidson greeted National Organizer Dell M. Potter and The Times crew was escorted to the courthouse where a mass meeting was held.

PLANS FOR FEDERAL AID.

At a banquet tonight given in honor of The Times car, the work in Colorado was outlined and plans for a campaign which may mean Federal aid were discussed.

This has been one of the red letter days for The Times car. The meeting in La Junta this morning proved a surprise. The pledge there of $2500 came as a bolt out of a clear sky. The good roads men of Colorado only had to learn what California, Arizona and New Mexico had done to get busy, and they at once got into action. With a total of $10,000 raised in California; $10,056 in Arizona, and $10,058 in New Mexico, the meeting in Las Animas tonight proved a whirlwind.

One speaker after another came out with pledges of large sums, and when the total was rolled up it was found that Colorado had jumped into the lead with $10,500 pledged to the good roads fund, and as one speaker put it, at least another $1000 could have been raised if necessary to beat the other States.

With the good roads banner waving high above The Times car, the total tonight is $40,614, the most that was ever raised in a good roads ocean-to-ocean tour, which is only twenty-one days old. The prophecy that The Times car will have secured $50,000 before New York is reached now seems certain of fulfillment.

Men of affairs of Colorado have shown a good-fellowship that has made the run through this State easy and interesting. It did not seem possible that such a large total could be secured until the meeting at La Junta this morning. Then, with $2500 pledged there, the mass-meeting from the surrounding towns was called at Las Animas and farmers whose homes border on the old Santa Fe trail marched into line with a slogan that spelled victory for this State. Good roads for the farmer, was the sentiment of the message given by National Organizer Potter tonight, who said this highway is not for the automobile man alone. It is also for the men of the soil.

JOHN SUCCEEDS FIELD.

APPOINTED BY GOVERNOR.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, June 8.—Gov. Johnson today appointed Warren M. John of San Luis Obispo to be a member of the Board of Trustees of the State Polytechnic school at San Luis Obispo, to succeed Thomas A. Field, whose term expired. John was formerly connected with the school as a trustee and was a member of the California Legislature in 1901, when the bill establishing the school became a law. It was through his efforts that the measure was successfully passed. At the expiration of his term as trustee of the school Thomas A. Field was appointed by former Gov. Gillett to take his place. He now succeeds the man who succeeded him.

Washington.

TRIBUTES PAID TO DISCOVERER.

Memorial to Columbus Is Unveiled in Washington.

Magnificent Fountain Built by Act of Congress.

President Taft Is Among the Speakers at Exercises.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The United States paid homage today to the discoverer of America by the unveiling of a magnificent memorial fountain, erected here by Congress to Christopher Columbus, the Genoese navigator who opened the portals of this hemisphere to civilization.

Standing at the very gates of the nation's capital, the memorial seemed a gigantic magnet drawing a representative throng from every corner of America. One hundred thousand visitors crowded within the city, according to estimates of the committee conducting the ceremonies. Half of that number were members of the give tribute to the patron of their order.

The enthusiasm in Washington today was rivalled only by the inauguration of a president. Imposing unveiling exercises were carried out this afternoon. President Taft was one of the speakers. In recognition of the allegiance of Columbus to the king of Italy, the Marqus Cusani Confalonieri, the Italian Ambassador at Washigton, unveiled the memorial by releasing two huge American flags whose folds clung to the granite shaft and marble statue of Columbus surmounting the fountain.

A mammoth pageant accompanied the unveiling ceremonies. Simultaneously with the beginning of the eexercises the parade formed in front of the White House, moved along Pennsylvania avenue and passed the Union Station, before which the memorial is erected.

Massed about President Taft on the stands surrounding the memorial were members of the Cabinet and Congress, justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, and representatives of the diplomatic corps.

Thomas Shanan, rector of the Catholic University, opened the ceremonies with an invocation; Justice Victor J. Dowling of the Supreme Court of New York delivered the initial oration, reciting the enconiums of the ages upon America's discoverer, and James T. McCleary of the Columbus Memorial Commission, followed with an eulogy, just before the Italian Ambassador, with a few words of trizute to his illustrious countryman, revealed the monument to the view of the world.

Immediately the pile of granite and marble was uncovered, there was a national salute of twenty-one guns to Christopher Columbus, whose statue faces in the direction of the United States capitol. Wreaths from the President of the United States and the Knights of Columbus were laid about the sone figure.

Following the nation's tribute, spoken by President Taft, the programme closed with the simple apostolic benediction of the Methodist Episcopal Church, pronounced by Bishop Wilbur E. Thirkield, president of Howard University.

The parade, under command of Gen. R. K. Evans, U. S. A., as grand marshal passed in review of President Taft and James A. Flasherty, Columbus.

AZUSA.

AZUSA, June 8.—At the installation of the officers of the Knights Templar of the Commandery of this valley, C. H. Lee, Leland Dodge and J. W. Calvert of Azusa were among the officers.

During May the public library purchased fifty-two books, issued fourteen new cards, circulated 1492 volumes, had 725 readers. Hereafter cards will be issued to children over eight years of age with responsible guarantor.

Frank Urkhart, who for the past years has been connected with the Azusa Citrus Association, has left for his old home in England, having come into possession by inheritance, of $10,000. After spending the summer in the old country, he will invest his money here and make this his home.

WHY CZAR?.

The Bseball Magazine loves to refer to Ban Johnson as "the czar of baseball." Why czar? Baseball doesn't need any czars, and baseball would be as big and great as it is, if there weer no Ban Johnsons, which is not to dertact from the distinguished service to the game the fat American League president has rendered. He is a brainy man and a great force, bu there are too many other great men in the business for Johnson to become a czar.

ALLEGED FUGITIVE TAKEN.

Man Arrested at Beach Said To Have Jumped From Express Train To Elude Officers.

Arthur B. Fletcher, alias Harry A. Bell, a grocery clerk employed at Ocean Park, was arrested by Detectives Browning and Ingram late yesterday afternoon on the charge of being a fugitive from justice.

The police assert that Fletcher escaped while being taken from Calgary to Vancouver, B. C., on an express tarain, and that he jumped while the train was running at a high speed. No trace of the alleged fugitive was discovered until a few days ago when the officers received word that Fletcher was working at the beach.

The prisoner declared that he would fight extradition.

Who Wrote It?

AUTHORSHIP OF "DIXIE" SONG.

MAN INTRODUCED AS COMPOSER ISN'T, SAY TWO.

An Angeleno and a Perris Woman Write Letters to "The Times" Declaring Honor Is Due to Northern Minstrel Man—How Song Came to Be Written.

It may or may not be of interest to H. L. Arnold, who was recently introduced at a Gamut Club entertainment as the author of "Dixie," to learn that at least two persons in Southern California say emphatically that Arnold did not write "Dixie."

The soul-stirring song, that has become popular in every nook and cranny of the United States and cheered the Confederate soldiers through many a long march and heart-breaking battle during the great Civil War, was written by a northern man who was a "nigger minstrel," according to Mrs. Helen K. Wood of Perris and Charles A. Post, vice-president and treasurer of the Western Malleable Castings Company, this city.

Mrs. Wood and Post have written letters to The Times in which they throw interesting lights on the famous song and its apparently little-known author. Mrs. Wood says Daniel Emmett, the composer, died two years ago and citizens of Mt. Vernon, O., his birthplace, are planning to rear a monument to his memory in the Mt. Vernon public square.

Emmett, a member of Bryant's minstrels of New York, whote "Dixie" in 1859, under the following circumstances, Post says in his letter:

"One Saturday evening at the close of a minstrel performance, Jerry Bryant asked Emmett to write a song for a 'walk around,' the chief requirement being noise and go. On Monday Emmett brought to Bryant the song 'Dixie,' both words and music complete. It was sung for the first time at the Monday-evening performance of the minstrels.

"Daniel Emmett was an American, of Irish parentage. He lived quietly at Mt. Vernon after his retirement from the minstrel stage.

"While there has been some discussion as to the authorship of 'Dixie,' I think it is conceded and agreed by the best authorities that Emmett wrote the song as stated above. There is, however, another 'Dixie,' very little known—a thrilling war song, written by Gen. Albert Pike, also a northern man, he having been born at Boston. Gen. Pike served with distinction in the Mexican War and also saw service on the Confederate side in the Civil War, having command of a force of Cherokee Indians recruited by himself. Pike seems to have adopted and adapted Emmett's refrain of 'Dixie' for the purposes of his own song.

"I venture to quote the first verse and the refrain from the war-time 'Dixie' written by Gen. Pike:

"'Southrons, hear your country call you!
Up! lest worse than death befall you.
To arms! to arms! to arms in Dixie!
Lo! all beacon fires are lighted,
Let all hearts be now united.
To arms! to arms! to arms in Dixie!

CHORUS.

"'Advance the flag of Dixie!
Hurrah! Hurrah!
For Dixie land we will take our stand,
To live and die for Dixie!
To arms! to arms! to arms in Dixie!
And conquer peace for Dixie!
To arms! to arms! to arms for Dixie!
And conquer peace for Dixie!'

"Permit me to say in closing that the above is written from memory, but I am very sure of the facts as stated. Fitzgerald, the author of the 'Stories of Famous Songs,' a work on which he spent fifteen years, gives essentially the same account of 'Dixie.'"

The name of Gov. Simeon E. Baldwin will be presented to the Democratic National Convention at Baltimore by Dean Henry Wade Rogers of the Yale law school, who will be a guest of the State delegation, and who will sit in the convention by virtue of a proxy.

CALIFORNIA HOTEL MEN END THEIR CONVENTION.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

DEL MONTE, June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] The annual convention of the California Hotel Men's Association was concluded tonight. The

They then proceeded to the hotel, where the cups were awarded to the winners in the golf tourney. Charlie Stewart, proprietor of the Stewart Hotel, in San Francisco, representing the North, defeated Carl H. Knappe of the Van Nuys Hotel of Los Angeles, who represented the South. Stewart winning by three up.

Col. John J. Kirkpatrick, of the Palace Hotel, wearing the colors of the North, defeated C. W. Holmes, manager of the U. S. Grant Hotel in San Diego, the Southerner, by three up in the ninth hole.

The South got its revenge in the two ball forsome, in which C. C. Loomis, of the Angelus, in Los Angeles, and E. P. Dunn, of the Arlington, in Santa Barbara, won from E. S. Dewolf, of the Albany Hotel, in Denver, and Louis Abern of the Crelling, Oakland. The match was a farce, breaking up in the ninth hole. The number of strokes required to make this hole would read like a United States census report.

In the evening an informal ball and vaudeville entertainment were given. The hotel men will leave tomorrow for their respective destinations.

business session today was devoted mostly to the election of officers for the ensuing year. Harry Freeman, proprietor of the Hotel Hayward, in Los Angeles, was chosen president; H. W. Lae, manager of the Vendome, San Jose, first vice-president; Asher Warner, manager of the Hotel Del Monte, second vice-president; N. W. Carson, a San Francisco hotel broker, was made secretary; N. W. Maple, a hotel porter, assistant secretary, and W. J. Baker, manager of the Union Square Hotel, in San Francisco, treasurer.

In the morning, after a golf tournament was held, the hotel men all left in automobiles for Pebble Beach Lodge, on the Seventeen-Mile Drive, where, after going around the scenic boulevard, they had a Spanish barbecue, roasting two lambs in the pit outside of the lodge. They then enjoyed a real Spanish dinner, and to complete the idea they had a dance in the lodge, with a Spanish orchestra furnishing the mus

JUNE MAY BEAT RECORD.

Valuation Total of Three Million Dollars at Least Seems Assured. Year's Figure Over Twelve Millions.

June will certainly be at least the second best month and possibly may be the greatest month in the history of construction operations in this city. From June 1 to June 7, inclusively, 437 permits, representing a valuation of $1,112,875, were issued by the chief inspector of buildings. Applications are on file in the building department for other construction projects whose aggregate valuation is in excess of $900,000.

The only permit of large size issued thus far for the month is that covering the construction of the $300,000 office block now under construction for Robert Marsh and Frank Strong at Ninth and Spring. The permit next in size is that for a nine-story wholesale building projected by Marion R. Gray at No. 752 South Los Angeles street and which will cost approximately $65,000. Permits for new homes aggregate $361,875.

To date for the year 6690 permits have been issued, these representing construction operations to cost $12,338,612. The figures for the corresponding period of last year were 4851 permits and $9,163,650 valuation. The gain is 1829 in the number of permits and $3,175,162 in valuation.

Beaver Heaver Beats Angels by Good Pitching.

Holds Dillon's Men Down When Hits Mean Runs.

Henderson Forfeits Chance to Make Good.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

PORTLAND, June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] Mahoney, the Beaver recruit obtained on the trade for Gilligan, with Sacramento, was again the hero of the Coast League game here today, his two-base swat in the sixth counting for two of the three runs scored by Portland in that inning. That swat gave the Beavers the game, 3 to 2, but Los Angeles was fighting hard every minute of the play and in a ninth-inning rally managed to shove one of the required two runs across the pan.

Klawitter, on the slab for Portland, was in fine form in all except one inning, the sixth, when he wobbled after Lindsay let a man reach first on an error. He passed the next three men, forcing in the run which gave the Angels a short lead. Slagle pitched good ball for Los Angeles all through.

Portland scored all the runs in the sixth. Chadbourne started the fireworks with a single to center. Lindsay followed with a hit and Rodgers got on when Lindsay went out at second. The double steal was then tried, but Boles let the ball slip through him and both were safe.

Then Mahoney sent out a long two-bagger which scored the two men and put the game on ice. Perfect throws by the Portland outfielders cut Dillon off at the plate twice.

The Angels made their final bid for the game in the ninth, when Fisher made a wild heave as Driscoll and Howard were working the double steal. Slagle divided honors with Klawitter, holding the Beavers to five hits and giving only one pass. Klawitter on the other hand, gave six hits and five walks, but he was more effective in the pinches, although Slagle lost only through the combination of hits and errors in one inning. Outside of that one inning he was never in serious trouble.

Benny Henderson was scheduled to pitch today, but the old trouble seemed to have overtaken him and he failed to show up at the park on this, the day he was to be given his chance to make up for his lapse off the water wagon. The score:

SENATORS PLAY HORSE.
HAVE FUN WITH OAKS.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES June 8.—[Special Dispatch.] Even if the Senators never win anoher game from the Oaks, they should be satisfied to rest on their oars and gloat over the triumph which rolled their way this afternoon. It was the softest, easiest and most matter of fact victory of the series. They picked out one inning—the traditional and lucky seventh—and when it was over, everybody was ready to respond to the call of the dinner bell.

This period was responsible for six Sacramento tallies, enough to win a couple of games and they needed only one for the downfall of the Oaks, which meant a tumble into second place. This is quite humiliating, but still the team deserves a whole lot of credit for maintaining its lead as long as it has.

The race for first honors between Oakland and Vernon has been nip and tuck for ever so many weeks past, and when one team beats the other by a couple of points, the fans along the line generally take it as a matter of course, but the leader is always lionized.

For six innings it was a regular ball game. Most of them were looking for 1 to 0, or a 2 to 1 score, or something like that.

They were not up to the task of looking into the future and they never figured on such a nightmare as that awful seventh inning brought forth. There was nothing to choose between them till Leard booted Williams' grounder in the eventful inning. This apparently did not mean much at the time, but it sure counted in the long run.

Lewis came next with a well-executed sacrifice and Sheehan hammered a pretty single to deep center on which Williams came all the way through with the initial tally.

This was only a starter. They swarmed in thick and fast in the succeeding moments. Gregory faltered and the men who were supposed to back him up, forsook him in his inning of need. They were demoralized and paralyzed by the rally of the hosts from up country.

Before Gregory had a chance to set himself, Cheek had planted a two-sacker down the first base line. This did not net a run, but it paved the way for many a one of them. The Oakland pitcher was so worried that he passed Baum, making it a full house of Senators and only one disposed of. Then the havoc was on. Irelan lifted a long sacrifice fly to Coy which was good enough to register Sheehan and to advance Cheek and Baum. Deacon Van Buren sneaked in a short single to the field garden and Cheek was in. He took second on the throw-in and Baum pulled up at the third station.

Boss O'Rourke tried hard and laid the ball down to Cook. It was a very soft grounder, but the Oakland shortstop had no glue on his mitt. The ball rolled out into the left garden and the two runners scooted to the wire. Patsy then got away with a steal of second and he made it six runs for the inning, when Cook booted the slow bounder which left Swain's bat. There was no chance for an argument after that time.

The jinks had been broken up and everybody was ready to put in with the Senators. Gregory was done for, so they sent Brooks in to do the slab honors in the eighth. Jimmy Lewis was the first man to face the newcomer and he celebrated the event by giving the ball a ride over the right field fence. The next three faded away. Baum possibly could have made it a blank had he tried, but he knew that he had things breaking his way, so he eased up a bit in the eighth. Sharp and Rohrer got away with hits, after which Brooks fanned.

Then Baum passed Leard and Hoffman went out on a grounder to Williams. While this play was being enacted, the Oakland manager popped in.

This was Oaklands first, last and only chance.

OLYMPIC RECORD BROKEN ON NORTHWESTERN FIELD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EVANSTON (Ill.) June 8.—One Olympic record was broken and two were tied in the western trials for the American Olympic team held at Northwestern University field today. N. J. Patterson, who ran under the colors of the Chicago Athletic Association, shattered the record for the 1500-meter run when he crossed the tape in 4m. 2 2-5s, one second faster than the mark established by Melvin Sheppard at the Olympic games in London in 1908.

Records were tied in the 100 and 200 meter dashes.

C. T. Wilson of Coe College, winner of the dash events in the Western conference meet last week, equalled the record for the 100-meter-dash in the first preliminary heat which he ran in 10 4-5s. C. C. Cook, of the Cleveland (O.) athletic club, tied the record for the 200-meter dash in the final heat, winning in 21 3-5s.

E. B. Linberg, the former University of Illinois runner who holds the national A.A.U. quarter-mile championship, won the 400-meter run in 48 3-5s, which is a fifth of a second slower than the Olympic record.

LONG BEACH TEAM WINS BALL HONORS.

Los Angeles High School went down to defeat in the hands of the Long Beach High School baseball aggregation, champions of the Los Angeles County League, at Long Beach, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 7 to 5. The contest, which was featured by two double plays, spectacular field catches and three home runs, was the hardest fought and most sensational exhibition of the interscholastic season.

It was the semi-final game to decide the interscholastic championship of Southern California. Long Beach now holds the championship of the city section of Los Angeles county, and by defeating Los Angeles yesterday, champions of Los Angeles city section of Los Angeles county, win the championship of that division. Downey, champions of the suburban section of Los Angeles county, is the only remaining team to be played, that contest being scheduled for next Saturday at Occidental.

In the game yesterday both schools broke even on the hits, each securing seven. Myers, who pitched for Los Angeles, fanned eleven, while Middough and Craig, Long Beach twirlers, fanned two and four respectively.

The game was all Los Angeles until the sixth inning, the score standing 4 to 0. Scoring was started by Los Angeles in the third inning, when two men crossed the plate on an overthrow by Wilcox, Long Beach catcher. Starbird, Los Angeles' first baseman, was the star with the stick for the losers. Two more runs were made by Los Angeles in the first of the sixth frame, making the total four.

With the score of 4 to 0 in favor of Los Angeles in the last of the sixth inning, Volk of Long Beach, singled. It was the first safe hit for Long Beach. Myers, Los Angeles' pitcher, then lost control, walking Wilcox and Middough of Long Beach, filling the bases. Holloway, the beach captain and heaviest hitter, then stepped to the plate and knocked a long drive to right field, making a home run, clearing the sacks and tieing the score with his four runs. Pandemonium broke loose among the 1200 Long Beach rooters, and it was some minutes before the crowd could be quieted and the game continued.

Gloom again descended over Long Beach in the next inning, however, when French of Los Angeles, walloped the ball to center for a home run, putting Los Angeles in the lead by one tally. Middough's running catch of Starbird's fly was also a feature of this inning.

Long Beach forged to the front again and cinched the game when Middough clouted a home run with one man on base, in the eighth inning. Reagan also scored this inning, making the final score 7 to 5. The batteries were Middough, Craig and Wilcox for Long Beach, and Myers and Mills for Los Angeles. Goyheunex umpired.

BADLY DEFEATED.

Young Fat Sellinger and West were badly beaten in two hard-fought bowling matches Friday, the winners being Snyder and Furon.

The game was the aftermath of a pool contest, in which Seelinger and West also lost.

Nothing daunted by their Dual defeat, the losers have now offered to box their opponents as a final test of supremacy.

WOLGAST TO BOX AT DOYLE'S TODAY.

Ad Wolgast appeared at the office of the Pacific Athletic Club yesterday morning at the weighing in of White and Thomas. Ad looked the picture of health and said:

"I am all right again. I did not have very much of a tryout with Young Jack O'Brien. He can run faster than his brother could, but I got him a good punch that landed too high. However, he went down and I walked as far away as I could from him. If I had stood over him he would not have got up.

"He is a nice young fellow and did not look strong enough to take any hard beating, but he is very clever and fast, but cannot hit hard."

Wolgast also said that if Joe Rivers did not beat him inside of five rounds that he would not have a chance to win. Wolgast seems to have all his old-time confidence. He will do a little boxing today at Doyle's training quarters and then leave for Wheeler Springs, for a week's roughing it in the mountains.

SAXON KING UNHORSED.
HIS THIGH IS INJURED.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

ZEITHHEIM (Saxony)) June 8.—King Frederick August II of Saxony yesterday suffered a severe strain of the muscles of his right thigh in a fall from his horse while reviewing troops. A passing cavalry division frieghtened the royal mount, which bolted and threw the rider before the aides could interfere. Members of his staff picked up the fallen King and he was hurried in an automobile to his villa at Wachwitz.

PREPARE FOR AMUNDSEN.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH

Could Hardly Eat. Gradually Grew Worse. Relieved by Peruna.

Mr. A. M. Ikerd.

Mr. A. M. Ikerd, Box 31, West Burlington, Iowa, writes:

"I had catarrh of the stomach and small intestines for a number of years. I went to a number of doctors and got no relief, and finally one of my doctors sent me to Chicago, and I met the same fate. They said they could do nothing for me; said I had cancer of the stomach and there was no cure. I almost thought the same, for my breath was offensive and I could not eat anything without great misery, and I gradually grew worse.

"Finally I concluded to try Peruna, and I found relief and a cure for that dreadful disease, catarrh. I took five bottles of Peruna and two of Manalin, and I now feel like a new man. There is nothing better than Peruna, and I keep a bottle of it in my house all the time."

preliminary examination, did you tell the truth?"

"I don't understand the question," said the witness.

"You mean you don't know how to answer after hearing Mr. Ford's argument, don't you," said Appel glaring at the State's attorneys.

This precipitated another heated discussion in which the original question was lost sight of.

A little later Franklin objected to the way Appel was asking his questions and turning to the court, remarked:

"Your honor, if the court does not protect me, I will have to protect myself."

During the recess, it was agreed to allow the jurors to go to the baseball game in the afternoon. When it was intimated that they might hear something about the case, Capt. Fredericks grimly remarked that it would be impossible for them to get any more than was offered in court by counsel for the defense.

A young man named Collier was linked with the defense during the session when he was asked to stand up in court.

"Do you know this man?" asked Appel.

"Certainly, he was in my employ in the McNamara case," answered Franklin.

The defense intends to use Collier to impeach some statements of the witness on the stand.

Just before adjournment, Capt. Fredericks found time to shoot in the following:

"Who paid ex-Gov. Gage for his legal services in your behalf, Mr. Franklin?"

"I don't know."

"How much was he paid?"

"I don't know."

"Did you ever relate the facts in your case to Mr. Gage?"

"I never did."

The Los Angeles Auctioneers

Perhaps it is not known to the general public that the great majority of all goods, wares and merchandise is sold by Public Auction, the world over. In some countries all real estate, live stock and merchandise, even vegetables potatoes, fruits, etc. are sold at auction. When unloading from ships or elsewhere Uncle Sam invariably sells everything at Public Auction, deeming it the fair way to both buyer and seller. We have been in the business in this city a great number of years and have sold all kinds of things, from a needle to a hay stack, and hope to continue in the same line a great many more. NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

CORNER-STONE HAS BEEN LAID.

Pasadena Polytechnic Started With Mortar.

Felicitous Speech Marks the Beginning of Work.

Water Bond Election Called for June 27.

(Office of The Times, 22 N. Fair Oaks avenue.)

PASADENA, June 9.—Sitting in camp chairs on the first floor of the partially-completed administration building, which is the principal structure of the group that will form the new Polytechnic High School, with rough cement pillars about them, and with a tile and mortar ceiling above them, and sunlight where the walls are to be, more than 1000 people yesterday afternoon witnessed the corner-stone-laying exercises. The ritualistic ceremony was conducted by the Masonic order, Judge Benjamin F. Bledsoe of San Bernardino presiding as Grand Master, and there were addresses by three different superintendents of schools—Dr. Jeremiah M. Rhodes of Pasadena, J. H. Francis of Los Angeles, and Mark Keppel of Los Angeles county. LeRoy D. Ely, who has long been principal of the Pasadena High School, and who wrote the history of that school that was inclosed in the box placed under the corner-stone, also made an address.

W. W. Ogier, president of the Board of Education, presided. The invocation was by Rev. Robert Freeman, pastor of the Pasadena Presbyterian Church. Superintendent Rhodes said in part:

"I bring to you greetings, and extend to you congratulations. This will show you something of what the group of buildings is to be. I want to express myself upon one feature, especially, and that is the location of the school. The education of a child has more to do with what a child will become than has its birth. Environment is the important element. You have selected one of the grandest school sites in America. There will come to the young men and women of Pasadena an uplift because of this setting. I pledge myself to the best of my ability to work for the education of the whole man, the entire woman. This is to be a large and grand democratic university of Pasadena."

Superintendent Francis of Los Angeles spoke next, and aroused much laughter by saying that should Pasadena annex Los Angeles it will now have something to offer in return for a harbor and mountain water.

"Education of men and women in the future," he said, "will lie more in that building yonder," indicating the manual arts building, "than in the old academic days. This nation is coming to recognize the fact that all cannot be Presidents. There is enough now of the undignified for several Presidents."

"If we were to ask," said Ely, "in what the greatest changes have been experienced in the last few years in the country, we should have to say in the political situation. But the changes in the ideal of education make a close second. Opportunities are manifold. As fine a building as this is to be, a still finer thing is what takes place in the schoolroom itself."

There was music by a Masonic quartette, a number of girls of the High School and the Pasadena municipal band. The city officials and local members of the Grand Army of the Republic attended in a body.

Inside the casket that was placed in the corner-stone was put a list of the names of members and former members of the Board of Education, a list of names of superintendents of schools and former superintendents of schools, a list of the names of the faculty of the High School and of the pupils there this year, an outline of the course of study of the school, a history of the school, a report of the school for 1911, copies of the Pasadena daily newspapers, a programme of the exercises and a brief sketch of the circumstances leading up to the bond issue that made the school possible.

EDUCATORS ARE DISCHARGED.

The Board of Education, at a special session yesterday morning, swung its official ax in silence and the heads of A. L. Hamilton, assistant superintendent of schools, and Prof. LeRoy Ely, principal of the Pasadena High School, fell. No resignations were given. The educators were simply notified by the board that their services would no longer be required.

Members of the board are now endeavoring to agree upon a public statement regarding their action, but say none may be made, after all. In the meantime they have pledged themselves to silence.

Neither a successor to Prof. Hamilton or to Prof. Ely has yet been named. The Board of Education will hold another meeting tomorrow night.

Both of the men whose services have terminated are popular in Pasadena and the chances are that their friends will seek to find out why they should have been summarily dropped, although both say they have accepted the situation and will do nothing.

Hamilton was Superintendent of Schools for several years, having been succeeded by Jeremiah M. Rhodes, who came from the East last fall to take the office. Ely has been principal of the High School for six years and is exceedingly popular both among the teachers of the city and among the pupils. He is himself a graduate of the Pasadena High School and a Stanford man. Before becoming principal of the High School he was principal of the old Grant school. He has successfully arranged many public benefits.

It is reported that the trouble in the case of Ely is a disagreement of long standing between him and Miss Charlotte Knoch, assistant principal of the High School, over matters of discipline.

"I am not whining," Ely said yesterday, "and there is nothing for me to do. I was notified by the board that my services would not be required longer. I did not resign. I would not cloak the thing that way. I have felt for some time that some of the teachers and some of the pupils were not treated as they should have been treated. I did things that caused criticism. I knew they would cause criticism and I took the risk. That is all there is to it. I acted as I thought best. Anything further that I might say would only lead to recriminations, and so I shall not say it."

"There is nothing for me to say," said Hamilton. "Since the Board of Education has discontinued the office of assistant superintendent of schools there is no further work for me in the Pasadena school system. There is no connection between my having been dropped and the dropping of Prof. Ely."

Miss Knoch was decidedly laconic. "Nothing," was all that she would say.

W. W. Ogier, president of the Board of Education, declared: "We have nothing to say now, except that such action has been taken."

Superintendent Rhodes said: "I cannot say anything about it. Members of the Board of Education are endeavoring to agree upon a public statement. Whether there will be a public statement or not I do not know."

ELECTION IS CALLED.

The City Council met yesterday in an adjourned session and formally called the water bond election on the 27th inst., as planned. The amount of the proposed bond issue is $1,250,000. The city has been divided into thirty-four precincts.

HEARING NEXT WEEK.

It was definitely learned yesterday that the State Railroad Commission will come to Pasadena on the 21st to hold a hearing in the proposed merger of the two telephone companies. The City Council has been asked to provide a suitable place for the meetings. It has suggested the Council chamber.

Long Beach.

DISAPPEARS OVER NIGHT

Long Beach Man Drops Out of Sight Suddenly.

Scotchman and Had Money; Suspicions Aroused.

Contract Is Signed for Music During Summer.

LONG BEACH, June 8.—"I never go armed, but I suppose I ought to to avoid being held up," remarked Robert T. Smith to his landlady, last Sunday morning, as he displayed a roll of bills while paying his room rent. Then he took his traveling bag and overcoat and left the house, starting presumably for Los Angeles. Since that time he has not been seen or heard of and his employers and landlady fear he has met with foul play, and this morning notified the police of this city and Los Angeles.

Smith has been employed as a representative of the Continental Casualty Company of Los Angeles for several years. He is 52 years of age, red-headed and of Scotch descent. He came to California eight years ago from Saginaw, Mich., where he has a son and daughter. He came to Long Beach several months ago and establishing a local agency, sold a large amount of insurance, and had pending the insurance of a big industrial plant, which would have netted him a good commission. Sunday morning he was busy in his room with papers. Then he went to a lunch wagon and ate breakfast, and returning, paid his landlady and said he was going to Los Angeles to see about some insurance, which he would turn in to the main office next day.

Not showing up at the local office for several days the agent in charge communicated with headquarters and found they had not seen Smith for several weeks. His business dealings are supposed to be all right, but to make sure the casualty company will send an auditor here next week. They regarded him as an honest and honorable man, and one who would not take French leave, and are inclined to the theory that he has met with foul play, for if he has been in an accident the papers on him would have disclosed his identity.

A few weeks ago Smith interfered in a street fight in Los Angeles, between two laboring men, and took the part of the weaker man, which led to a threat by the other that he would "get Smith for his meddling," and this will be investigated. Most of his personal belongings are still in his apartments.

BAND WILL PLAY.

The Long Beach Bathhouse and Amusement Company today signed a contract with Signor Nicola Donatelli to provide a band for afternoon concerts on the beach for three months, beginning June 15, Mondays excepted. Donatelli will furnish a band of twenty pieces.

This action of the bathhouse is due to the City Council a year ago passing a resolution to secure votes for a special band tax levy, that the band hereafter should be allowed to play only on city property, although the bathhouse people had been paying the city $5000 a year for the presence of the band in the shell on the beach during the summer season. Residents east of the pier objected to this discrimination and to please them the City Council erected a band stand and bulkhead east of the auditorium at a cost of $12,000, which has never been occupied, the band giving concerts in the auditorium and the city parks.

The special band tax will be exhausted July 1 and unless an election is called to provide extra funds the band will cease as a municipal organization, as other budget claims will make an appropriation impossible from the general funds.

NEWS BRIEFS.

John Craig, Sr., of Toledo, O., father of John F., and George Craig, and president of the Craig ship plant, has purchased the handsome Bassett home place in Belmont Heights and will remove this month from Toledo to make Long Beach his permanent home. The Bassett place is one of the show places of the east end, is a nine-room residence built on a two and a half acre site. The consideration was $25,000. Mr. Craig, who is a recognized authority in the East on ship building will be a valuable addition to Southern California.

The announcement of the formal opening of the beach summer season brought several hundred visitors to the beach today and they were entertained with vaudeville attractions on the beach and a parade in the morning, of the police and fire departments. It had been intended to have the entire force of city officials, employees and equipment on parade for inspection, but at the last moment the City Council decided that the expense of stopping city activities for half a day would not warrant the display at this time.

Twenty stevedores engaged on the municipal docks lost their jobs last night, when they demanded in advance payment for overtime before they had earned it. According to schedules they are entitled to overtime after nine hours. The Santa Clara came in late with a heavy cargo and the stevedores asked for the extra money. They were given their walking papers at once and their places filled with men who were willing to earn their wages before demanding it.

C. J. Daugherty received a telegram from his son today that he successfully made a twenty-minute flight at Merced in Frank Stites's biplane, and was scheduled for three more flights today. Daugherty is a licensed aviator but this is his first big flying stunt.

S. G. Marshutz of No. 704 South Broadway, Los Angeles, came to the beach last night with a party of friends to attend a function at Hotel Virginia. When he started to return he found his car, a Cadillac, missing, and also three overcoats. The machine, which is numbered 56562, has not yet been located.

FINE CHARACTER PASSES.

Sierra Madre Pioneer After a Long Life of Usefulness Goes to His Final Reward.

SIERRA MADRE, June 8.—When the final summons came at 6:15 a.m. Friday morning, and the spirit of N. H. Hosmer crossed the Great Divide, there passed from this life one who was well-beloved in this community.

"Uncle" Hosmer, as he was familiarly called by his close associates and friends, was a native of Massachusetts. He settled here thirty-one years ago on forty acres of land, which is now the business center of the town. At the time of his decease he was within a year of the three score and ten mark. For twenty-one years he held the position of school trustee. Since the incorporation of the town he has been a City Trustee.

N. H. Hosmer,

Sierra Madre pioneer whose death Friday shocked the community. The funeral will be held today at the family home.

When the First National Bank of Sierra Madre was organized he was one of its first directors and for years has been a director of the water company. He also served a number of years as road overseer. In politics he was one of the old line regular Republicans. During the years when conventions were held his attendance as a delegate was as certain as the holding of the convention.

In local politics his political enemies bowed to his supremacy. He claimed his happiest moments were when engaged in a local political strife, and he was always victorious. He was very liberal and broad in his views on both political and religious subjects. Te was a man small in stature, quaint in expression, an inveterate consumer of tobacco and had a remarkable constitution. When not engaged in his official duties he could be seen grubbing his fruit trees, planting his crops and tilling the soil. As a pioneer settler he was well known to all the older residents and he held a warm corner in their hearts for his kindness and his good neighborliness. He was of the type that is, unhappily, passing away in the stress and rush of modern life.

In the old days, before the trolley and the telephone, when sickness and trouble came to any household, "Uncle" Hosmer was always ready to do more than his share. He helped through the weary night by many a sick bed. Watched by the dying and was a strong helper to those bereaved, and no tale of trouble kept him unmoved.

As the old order changed and new people came, they fell heir to his kindliness and learned to love the quaint "Uncle." Many eyes were moist today at the news that without warning he had been called to his eternal rest.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon from the family home.

INTER-CITY COMMITTEE TALKS OF BOULEVARDS.

SOUTH PASADENA, June 8.—Plans for the promotion of better communication between the neighboring cities of Pasadena, South Pasadena, Alhambra and Los Angeles, by extensive road improvements, were discussed and set on foot last evening, at the most largely-attended meeting the Inter-City Committee of Eighteen has held since its organization. Those present were: From Alhambra Robert Jordan, R. G. Field, J. B. Sexton, G. W. Cameron, Dr. G. P. Waring; from South Pasadena, John D. Reavis, H. Hawgood, C. W. Wilson, D. C. Gates; from Pasadena, T. P. Lukens, Arthur Noble, C. W. Rhodes, J. C. Brainard and W. T. Root.

Most spectacular of the plans discussed was one for the establishing of a "lighted way" from Broadway, Los Angeles, through the tunnel, out Buena Vista street, Pasadena avenue and Mission street, by way of the new $140,000 bridge across the arroyo, now nearly completed, to Fair Oaks avenue, thence dividing north and south into Pasadena and Alhambra. It was suggested by the president of the commission, Mr. Reavis, that handsome electroliers be erected along this route, by the combined work of the Chambers of Commerce boosting in each of the various sections. It was shown that the cost would be comparatively small, and the project would provide absolutely safe travel for automobiles going back and forth on the darkest nights. A committee was appointed to study various routes, and report its recommendations at the next meeting, which will be held Friday, June 21.

Another good roads problem discussed was that of a direct route from Pasadena to Alhambra. Attention was drawn by Mr. Brainard to the fact that, although these two cities are adjacent, there are no directly connecting through streets. A commitee was appointed to investigate possible remedies of this difficulty.

Third of the traffic matters was the proposed crosstown car line on Garfield avenue, through South Pasadena, which the Alhambra representatives declared is assured by the Pacific Electric. The possibilities of having this communication [illegible] with the business center of Pasadena was discussed.

Mr. Reavis reported [illegible] progress of the Outfall [illegible] Sewer Commission [illegible] stating that now the following [illegible] had agreed to provide their [illegible] of the cost of preparing plans [illegible] ton, Rivera, Norwalk, [illegible] dena, South Pasadena, [illegible] Covina, Lordsburg, [illegible] Claremont, San Gabriel and [illegible] via practically assured. Such was the scorching [illegible] that George R. Chambers, [illegible] Councilman, fired back [illegible] that Prof. N. A. Richardson, nationally prominent as one of the national lecturers of the Social- [illegible] challenged him to cite [illegible] wherein a Socialist had [illegible] him to force through the [illegible] pet scheme.

Chambers, who stands over six feet in his stockings, has been asked to resign by his Socialist brothers because he did not vote "right" on a resolution fixing the local gas rate. He is [illegible] with recall and the ordinance fixing the rate is threatened [illegible] referendum.

"I was elected on the Democratic [illegible] ticket," added Chambers. "The Democrats have been real decent. They haven't asked me for anything, but the Socialists have been [illegible] after me seeking the adoption of some pet scheme. One wanted me to have the city condemn a right of way to open a street. I discovered that he had bought a bunch of lots which would be more than double in value if the street was opened. I didn't think he ought to secure the right of way by private funds, but that the city should pay to increase the value of his speculation."

Chambers went on to declare that since the Socialists here have gained the initiative, referendum and recall they have gone crazy. "They are like a boy with a new saw, and don't know the value of the use of these instruments. Like the boy, they are going to cut all the legs from the parlor furniture. Instead of talking referendum, why don't they prepare a gas ordinance, fixing the rate at what they think is just and present it to the City Council. I would urge the passage of such an ordinance."

Prof. Richardson replies to Chambers that the street opening project was not a secret matter, that the citizens interested in the opening of the street stated publicly in the Council Chambers that they were ready to pay whatever it cost to condemn the necessary right of way across private property and still stand ready to do so.

The latter's statement shows fully that the Socialists are determined upon Chamber's removal unless he [illegible] his tactics and recognizes his allegiance to the Socialist local for his position and is willing to follow the local's instructions in public matters.

AN ANGELENO.

That the remains of the unknown [illegible] found in the brush and [illegible] a mile and a half east of [illegible] Friday morning may be [illegible] a Los Angeles man is the [illegible] of the officers here. It is also [illegible] that possibly the deceased [illegible] to his death by his own hand, [illegible] by a strong, quickly-acting [illegible] or by strangling. This theory [illegible] solely upon the fact that [illegible] and addresses in a notebook [illegible] among his effects were carefully [illegible] or worked over with a [illegible] and one leaf has been cut out [illegible] possibly having writing in [illegible] upon it.

It is declared that the ropes which [illegible] the man's hands back of him [illegible] and that he could easily [illegible] his hands in that position [illegible]. This theory is not entertained by Coroner Fuller, who says [illegible] that the deceased was a [illegible] victim, possibly for his gold.

The remains when found were [illegible] tucked in blankets and covered with a canvas, all but the head [illegible]. If the deceased was murdered his slayers took a strange way [illegible] the body. If a suicide victim the deceased had strange notions as to how he should be left as though [illegible] having gone to sleep.

[illegible] distance from where the body was found there was discovered a [illegible] where a struggle may have occurred. By some it is believed the [illegible] was assaulted there, tortured, [illegible] forced to tell of the hiding- [illegible] of his treasure, he was finally [illegible] to death.

Among his effects are several books [illegible] and a book "exposing" [illegible]. The officers are working on the case, but so far with but [illegible] of ever unraveling the [illegible].

Mrs. Lucy Mildred Curtis, pioneer of this city, died yesterday at Los Angeles, [illegible] years old. She was the [illegible] of the late Rev. J. C. Curtis, [illegible] pastor of the Baptist Church [illegible] city and valley. They crossed the plains by ox team in the early [illegible] settling in this city. Mrs. Curtis was a sister of Congressman W. S. [illegible], who for twenty years served in the House of Representatives for the State of Indiana. For a number of years she has resided at Los Angeles and it was an annual custom for her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to go on a pilgrimage to Los Angeles to celebrate her birthday anniversary. Mrs. Curtis was the mother of two of San Bernardino's foremost citizens, Judge W. J. Curtis, dean of the [illegible] Bar Association, and R. H. [illegible], one of the valley's oldest educators. Both hurried to Los Angeles [illegible] when news that the aged [illegible] was sinking came to them, [illegible] they arrived before her passing.

AWARDED DAMAGES.

[illegible] Griffin, of Pasadena, was awarded $11,000 by a jury in Judge [illegible] department of the Superior Court this morning, in his suit against the Salt Lake Railroad for injuries [illegible] by Mrs. Griffin last November when a Salt Lake train at Grand [illegible] crossing wrecked the Griffin automobile, killing the two children of the Griffins, a sister of Mrs. Griffin, Miss Moody, and badly injuring Mrs. Griffin. Griffin sued for [illegible] and he and his wife have still another suit which will be tried November 12, in which they seek $85,000 for the loss of their children and automobile.

GRAND JURY REPORT.

It is expected that the grand jury, which has been in working trim for numerous months, will hand in its final report to Judges Oster and Bledsoe, Monday. The Los Angeles experts completed their investigation of the county records today, and early Monday morning will file their report with the inquisitors. From day to day, for weeks, the final report of the jury has been underway and most of it is now typewritten, requiring but one or two pages for its completion.

TO SECURE SHOPS.

The Chamber of Commerce Committee appointed to secure funds with which to purchase the Pacific Electric a site for shop purposes commenced work today, and within a very short time had quite a flattering sum raised. It is expected to secure $7500, and buy seven and a half acres of the Joe Brown place, on the south side of First street. Riverside and Colton are also flirting with the proposition, having an ambition to secure the shops for their own towns.

SELLS GROVE.

Dr. W. P. Burke of Highland, has sold to the East Highland Orange Company twelve acres of Washington navels in East Highland for $23,000. The orchard is part of the E. R. Annable estate. Five years ago, Drs. E. W., and W. P. Burk bought this estate, comprising 153 acres, for $23,000.

AWARD CONTRACT.

The Board of Trustees of the City of Upland has awarded the contract for asphalt pavement to be placed on some seven blocks of Second avenue, from A street on the south to H, or Eleventh street, on the north. The successful bid was made by the Montgomery & Marsh Company, of Los Angeles, and their bid was for 15 9-10 cents per square foot for the paving and 11 cents per square foot for the gutter. This bid will save the city some $2000 on the work, as a whole, as compared to the bid made by another contracting firm which has done some work for the city in the past.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The Philathea Girls' class of the Methodist Church, was successful in winning the piano recently given away here by the Upland News and the Bradstreet Booterie. The girls worked hard, and they had several hundred thousand votes to spare in the final outcome.

Roscoe Neal has sold ten acres of oranges, at the northeast corner of Euclid avenue and Thirteenth street, to Mr. Hyslip, recently arrived from England. Mr. and Mrs. Neal expect to remove shortly to their new home at Placentia, in Orange county, where they have just bought a larger ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Harwood and daughter, Miss Aurelia, have departed for a summer's visit in the East. They may possibly extend their itinerary to include points in Europe.

The Rev. George E. Swan, formerly archdeacon of the Diocese of Sacramento, is now Priest in Charge of Saint Mark's Episcopal Church, of this city. It is probable that a rector will be chosen for the local parish in the near future.

HERMIT DIES.

OXNARD, June 8.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Charles E. Hoar, nephew of the late United States Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, and known as "the hermit of Simi Valley," died here today, aged 70.

A graduate of Harvard, Hoar gave indications of having a brilliant career, but because of some alleged disappointment in love, he came to Simi Valley, near here, and lived a loney life for many years. He became possessed of valuable land holdings.

His body will be cremated and the ashes sent to his sisters in Concord, Mass., where the dead "hermit" was born.

BOND BUYERS ARE RELUCTANT.

SANTA ANA SCHOOL BONDS REJECTED BY BROKERS.

Bonds Voted Last December Possess Defects Which Cause the Men in the Bond Business to Refuse to Make Purchase—Many Applications for the Job of Principal.

SANTA ANA, June 8.—The Board of Supervisors today received word that the $200,000 Polytechnic High School bonds and the $25,000 grammar school bonds had been turned down by the bond-buyers' attorneys, O'Melveny, Stevens and Milliken of Los Angeles. J. H. Adams & Co. was the buyer of the big issue and William R. Staats Company of the small issue. Both buyers employed O'Melveny, Stevens & Milliken.

These bonds were voted last December. The report of the attorneys in February was against them. An action was brought to get a ruling of the Court of Appeals, which ruling was favorable to the bonds. The bond attorneys, in rejecting the bonds, stated to the buyers that the court was asked to rule upon but one point when there were other defects that the attorneys consider fatal. The Supervisors postponed further action on the bonds until June 25, with the hope that the defects can be remedied by some resolution of the board. The definite reasons for the unfavorable report of the attorneys is to be furnished the Supervisors in a letter to be written by William R. Staats Company.

The Santa Ana Board of Education has received a number of applications for the position of principal of the High School to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. A. Bartlett, who resigned to go elsewhere.

TO MORTGAGE CHURCH.

The First United Presbyterian Church today petitioned the Superior Court for permission to mortgage the church property, worth $40,000 for $16,000. Among the churches's assets are the old church property on East Fourth street and pledges for contributions to the building fund of the new church, totaling about $14,000.

Officer Gilbert went on duty today at the corner of Fourth and Main streets as crossings officer, to compel automobilists and other vehicles to turn the corners properly. In the last week there were three collisions, none of them serious, as the result of corner-cutting at this crossing.

MAN INJURED WHILE ON DUTY.

EMPLOYEE ON RIVERSIDE FEDERAL BUILDING BRUISED.

Teamster Struck by Car Receives Injuries Which, While Not Fatal, Are Decidedly Serious—Blacksmiths of the City Desert Forge for a Day of Pleasure.

RIVERSIDE, June 8.—Frank Nearey, a teamster in the employ of the Southwestern Construction Company of Los Angeles, was injured by a Seventh-street car today while returning with an empty dirt wagon to the site of the new Federal building. The car was on a percetible grade and could not be stopped in time to avoid striking the wagon.

The force of the impact freed the team from the wagon, and threw Nearey to the pavement. While badly cut and bruised, the teamster is not seriously injured.

BLACKSMITHS PICNIC.

Every blacksmith shop in the city was closed today, owing to the annual picnic at Urbita Springs. A feature of the gathering was a baseball game between the smithies of San Bernardino, Redands and Riverside.

Abraham Bril of Palestine, agent of the Jewish Colonization Association, supported by Baron Rothschild, is in Riverside to study the citrus fruit industry and general agriculture. Mr. Bril states that there are about 5000 acres in Palestine planted to citrus fruits. Regarding California, he said: "I think if Moses had known of California, he would have led the children of Israel here instead of into Palestine, for this certainly is the land of milk and honey."

CITY MAN IMPRESSED.

Frank Shearer, superintendent of parks at Los Angeles, was in the city yesterday and was shown the beauty spots of Riverside by H. B. Adsit, City Tree Warden. Mr. Shearer expressed himself as astonished at the development here in the way of street ornamentation, and pleased with the manner in which the playground features had been worked out at Fairmont Park.

SUNDAY CLOSING ISSUE.

Whether the petitions invoking the referendum with respect to the ordinance requiring the Sunday closing of pool halls, will be sufficient, is problematical. City Clerk Prior finds that the list of 675 names appended are about sixty short of the required number of qualified voters, when checked against the registration for the recent primary election. It is doubtful if there will be found as many as sixty of the names registered since the election.

OFF ON A LONG HIKE.

Two Boston Boys Will Leave This City Tomorrow Afternoon on Walk to Massachusetts on Wager.

Philip E. Campbell, aged 22, who lives at the Hotel St. George, and Carl Kron, No. 520½ West Sixth street, aged 20, will start from Sixth and Broadway at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon on a 5000 mile hike across the continent.

These boys are to walk from Los Angeles to Boston on a wager for $1000, which has been offered by a relative of Campbell's. They are to walk the entire distance in 180 days. They will go by way of Sacramento, Salt Lake, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, Denver, Lincoln, Omaha, Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo, North Adams and end their long tramp at Campello, Mass.

Campbell visited the City Hall yesterday to get credentials from Mayor Alexander. He is a slimly built young man of 134 pounds, with rosy cheeks and bright eyes. He says he has taken several long tramps, the last one being from Spokane to Los Angeles, he arriving in this city on January 20 last. He walked every mile, sleeping wherever night overtook him, and his "eats" cost him an average of 20 cents per day. His weight was reduced from 150 to 128 pounds on this trip.

Both Campbell and Kron are Boston lads, having been born on Massachusetts street. They were chums in that city, but each left and they had not met for three years until they ran across each other in Los Angeles.

POSTAL CLERKS SEEK CHANGES.

BETTER SERVICE IS KEYNOTE OF STATE CONVENTION.

Amalgamation of All Employees Favored at Yesterday's Session of Delegates — Southern California Secures Plums in Election—Sacramento Next Meeting Place.

The California State Branch of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks held an all-day session yesterday in a committee room in the Chamber of Commerce building and the sixty-eight delegates placed themselves on record as favoring the amalgamation into one organization of all postoffice employees whether clerks, carriers or railroad men.

Another resolution which found favorable consideration requests the department to issue an order requiring all business houses to provide proper addresses. This resolution is said to be especially aimed at the "looking-glass" envelopes which the clerks say are hard upon their eyes and temper.

The convention asks for early legislation requiring the forwarding of all classes of mail to destinations regardless of postage shortage. Under the present system all mail except the first-class is held at the receiving office pending the receipt of full postage from the addressee.

When it came time to elect officers for the ensuing year several of the plums fell to Los Angeles and the southern part of the State.

J. G. Thompson, of Los Angeles is the new president; Casper H. Magennis, of Oakland, first vice president; T. R. Chapman, of Los Angeles, second vice president; Geo. P. Feely, of San Francisco, secretary-treasurer; Geo. A. Solomon, of Sacramento, State organizer; A. L. Louder, of Alameda, the retiring president, delegate to the national convention at Boston in September; T. R. Chapman, of Los Angeles, alternate. The new finance committee is composed of W. R. Chambers, of Pasadena, J. E. Williamson, of Stockton, and John Wherry, of Riverside. Miss Carrie Swank, of Santa Cruz, is chairman of the grievance committee. Sacramento is selected as the meeting place for the next convention.

The California branch is especially interested in securing better working conditions for the postal clerks; regular hours and compensatory time off for Sunday work. The proposed extension of the eight-hour law to include the clerks met with the hearty favor of the organization.

Last evening the delegates were entertained at a banquet given at the King Edward Hotel by the local branch. Leon W. Umstead, superintendent of the University station, was toast-master. Former President Louder, President Thompson and other members spoke briefly. Today the delegates are to be the guests of the Chamber of Commerce in a trip over the Balloon route.

At the morning session of the convention Mayor Alexander welcomed the representatives to the city, President Louder responding.

IOWA ALUMNI RECEPTION.

Superior Judge Willis, president of the alumni of the Iowa State University, has issued invitations to the alumni and former students to attend a reception to be given on the 15th inst., at the Hayward in honor of Dr. J. L. Pickard, formerly president of the university. Dr. Pickard is visiting his son, F. W. Pickard, No. 807 South Coronado street.

Dr. Pickard is one of the best-known educators in the United States. He was one of the first presidents of the National Education Association and was honored by that society at its meeting in San Francisco two years ago.

There are about 200 of the alumni of the university living in Southern California. Those wishing to attend the reception are requested to notify the secretary, Harry W. Hanson, 729 H. W. Hellman building.

LENOX COLLEGE CLUB.

A dozen former students of Lenox College, Hopkinton, Iowa, met at luncheon at the Federation Club yesterday noon and informally organized the Lenox College Club of Southern California. Superior Judge Willis presided. Mrs. William Greer was made secretary. Miss Mary A. George, a former instructor of Lenox, was present. There are no dues, and the forty former students of the college now residing in Southern California are considered members. Superior Judge Houser's name appears on the roster. This is said to be the only college club in the city having two members who occupy seats on the Superior Court bench. The next meeting will be held October 18.

WEAVING A NET OF EVIDENCE.

SHERIFF HAMMEL BELIEVES HE HAS CAUGHT MURDERERS.

Men Who Slew the Japanese at Glendora a Few Weeks Ago Are Believed by Officials to Be in the Santa Barbara County Jail—Strong Circumstantial Links.

SANTA BARBARA, June 8.—Sheriff Wm. A. Hammel is weaving a net of circumstantial evidence around J. H. Osborne and Haley F. Day, whereby he expects to connect them with the murder of a Japanese, near Glendora, a few weeks ago, robbery being the motive of the crime. That they may be the safe-crackers who have been making a systematic tour of the postoffices of the southwest is also a possibility that has outgrown the stage of mere suspicion. Osborne has admitted to the authorities that he may be able to shed important light upon certain mysterious offenses against the Federal government; but his willingness to turn State's evidence in that respect is credited to his desire to escape more serious charges.

The two men are now in jail at Santa Barbara, where they have been seen by a number of Los Angeles witnesses who identify them as having been in the vicinity of Glendora on the night of the murder. Day, who is not more than 18 years of age, leaves a peculiar footprint, and this mark may be one of the strong links in the chain that will fasten the Glendora crime upon him and his accomplice.

Several other witnesses are expected from Los Angeles Sunday to have a look at the pair, and upon their conclusions the decision of Hammel to prosecute for murder will be based.

Osborne and Day are held at Santa Barbara for burglarizing a Carpinteria store, May 29th, when they opened a large safe by means of nitro-glycerine. They secured nearly $200, but most of this was recovered upon their arrest two days later. As they were taken into custody by the Santa Barbara police they attempted to kill the officers and themselves by dashing a bottle of the high explosive against a stone culvert; but the act was prevented by a shot from the chief's revolver. The bullet glanced from Osborne's skull, stunning him, but inflicting no serious injury.

UNWRITTEN LAW.

SAN DIEGO, June 8.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] The trial of F. Balastracea, charged with the murder of John Mertilia, which has been in progress for several days, came to an end late this afternoon, the jury acquitting the defendant. The defense was the unwritten law, the evidence tending to show that the defendant's wife left him for Mertilia. Mertilia and the Balastraceas came here from Santa Cruz.

Falling hair is not a trivial matter. It is cause for alarm. It tells of a condition leading sooner or later to partial or total baldness. Hair that comes out on the brush or comb is dead hair and it falls out because the follicle is diseased and the hair is not being supplied with proper nourishment. Every hair that falls out is not replaced by a new one. If the follicle is atrophied it will never grow another hair. The spot remains bare and if further loss is not checked the hair on the head becomes distressingly thin or there may be total baldness.

In ninety-nine instances out of a hundred, it is dandruff that causes the loss of hair. Scientific research now develops the fact that the distressing accumulation known as dandruff is due to a germ which burrows down into the follicle and destroys the life of the hair. This is what makes the hair come out.

There is but one way to overcome this trouble. An occasional shampoo won't do it, as that only cleans the scalp and does not reach the real cause. The dandruff must not only be eradicated, but the germ destroyed, by regular and intelligent applications of Newbro's Herpicide. Insist always upon having genuine Herpicide, the first and Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer.

By keeping the scalp free from dandruff, clean and healthy, Herpicide checks the loss of hair. Newbro's Herpicide makes the hair light, fluffy, luxuriant and beautiful. Possessing a delicate fragrance, Herpicide commends itself to persons of refinement, who have a well-developed appreciation for the good things of life.

FINANCIAL NEWS SUMMARY.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—Failures this week, 197, against 251 last year.

Iron production shows large increase in May.

Strength of steel industry most encouraging feature of business situation.

Increased confidence in favorable crops important factor.

Twelve industrials declined .39 per cent.

Twenty active rails declined .47.

The past week has witnessed a general betterment in sentiment not only in the financial community, but also in general fields of commercial and industrial endeavor. The more cheerful feeling relative to the prospective agricultural outlook has done much toward inducing the betterment, particularly as it is felt that a substantial volume of railroad tonnage is likely to do much towards strengthening the position of the several large systems which last year suffered materially from crop damage, particularly in the Northwest.

Then there has been noted a disposition, even among the most radical of the political element, to proceed rather more judiciously than heretofore in connection with the matter of assailing corporations, and while it is quite true that many investigations are now being conducted and others contemplated, still the opinion is entertained in good quarters that politicians in general have at last arrived at the conclusion in a marked degree that trade and industry should not be unduly harassed in an effort to sustain destructive radicalism.

The copper metal issues have been and for an indefinite period seem likely to continue, to be conspicuous for their strength, owing to the satisfactory condition of the copper industry, and as far as the steel and iron industry is concerned, the gradual raising of prices on finished product has done much towards improving same.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Owing to the scarcity of butter and the risk to retailers in shrinkage owing to hot weather, the price of all grades of butter to the trade will be 3 cents a pound above the wholesale price, instead of 2½ cents a pound, beginning Monday, when there will probably be an advance in the wholesale price.

The produce market was well cleaned up for Sunday. Apricots declined to $1 and $1.25 a lug box, and to $1.25 and $1.50 a crate. Edam cheese advanced to $8.50 and $10.50. Aside from these changes prices were the same as Friday.

Tomatoes were scarce. There was not enough to meet the demand, which was heavy. There will be a carload of them in from Mexico today for the opening of business Monday. This car will not relieve the pressure and unless unforeseen shipments come tomatoes will be scarce for several days.

Cucumbers were plentiful. New potatoes moved well at quotations. Peaches moved well but the supply was very limited. There was a good demand for oranges.

The first American watermelons of the season arrived, an express shipment from Brawley. The melons sold at 4 cents a pound, the top price. They will be followed this week by larger shipments. The melons grade better than the Mexican melons that have been supplying the market since the season opened several weeks ago.

Today's arrivals will include three carloads of bananas via New Orleans and a car of apricots from Coachella. This will be the first carload shipments of apricots of the season.

Receipts of cantaloupes comprised about two cars. The demand for rhubarb and sweet potatoes was limited, owing to the fact that there is so much green stuff on hand. Pineapples moved well.

Receipts of the leading produce staples were light. Eggs, 214 cases; butter, 3106 pounds; cheese, 3708 pounds; potatoes, 483, and beans, 400 sacks.

SHOWERS CAUSE SLIGHT BREAK.

WHEAT MARKET IN CHICAGO IS EASED UP A BIT.

Prices Are from an Eighth to a Fourth Lower Than at Close on Previous Night—Longs Unload on the Bulges—Professionals Buying on the Declines.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 8.—Wheat eased today because of showers in the West. At the end of the session the market was ⅛ to ¼ under last night. Week-end evening up and the fact that the government crop report comes out after the close Monday combined to keep trading in wheat at a minimum. All day longs unloaded on the bulges. Evidence that professional speculators were buying on all the breaks prevented material declines.

September wheat ranged from 105½@⅝ to 106¼, with last sales 105⅝@¾, a loss of ¼.

July corn fluctuated from 74⅝@75⅛, closing steady ⅛ up at 74¾. Cash grades were in fair demand. No. 2 yellow 76¾@77¼.

July oats ranged between 52 and 51⅛ with the close 52⅝@¾, a rise of ⅛ from last night.

Pork became dearer by 10 to 12½c and other products 2½ to 5.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., members New York and other exchanges, 118 W. Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—The following is a summary of information received from 400 correspondents from every State in the cotton belt:

Memphis, Tenn.—The cotton crop is now showing the cumulative effects of three consecutive weeks of elegant weather, soil in poor condition at the beginning is being worked to good advantage in many districts and the promise is better than the planters believed was possible three weeks ago. Rains of the week were highly beneficial save in eastern and southern sections of Georgia, and some excess felt on Thursday and Friday but since cultivation is well advanced no harm will result unless the rains continue. Grassy fields are rare in all sections. Good stands have been had in all States save Oklahoma and Arkansas where rain is needed to bring up the late planting. The plant is healthy and although small, it is thrifty and growing. Cultivation almost uniformly is as far advanced as the size of the plant will permit. This is the result of comparatively dry weather for three weeks. Moderate showers from time to time are needed to promote further cultivation as the work of putting the fields into the prepared condition is not completed. Good rains are needed in parts of Oklahoma. Warm weather and showers will also promote the growth of the plant which is small. Texas reports are uniform and average well. The whole State has a promising outlook and the sentiment of the growers is very hopeful.

North Carolina—Better week than last year. Nearly all chopped out, good stands. Plant looks fine, soil working well.

Heavy rains past week created alarm along the coast. Plains and low counties but damage anticipated small. Early rains of week beneficial. Healthy plant and all cotton up.

Georgia—Rapid growth and improvement. Cultivation delayed only by small plant. A few blooms in some places. Slight excess rainfall last two days. Small per cent. to be planted. Poor soil condition chief complaint.

Alabama—Cotton looks much better than poor planting condition promised three weeks ago. Rains generally beneficial. Excellent week for growth and cultivation. Plants small but no grass. Some cotton just up in northern and central counties.

Mississippi—Rains of the week beneficial. Some planting being done here and there. Three weeks of successive improvement, plant healthy and fields. Sentiment here hopeless. Stands on land planted after overflow. Expect to continue planting until June 15.

Tennessee—Plant very small but looks good. Early cotton worked out, rain needed in a few counties.

Arkansas—Some late cotton not come up, dry weather making stands irregular eastern and northern counties. Overflowed lands nearly all planted. No grass, plant healthy.

Louisiana—Plants in splendid condition, only complaint is of lateness and loss from floods, planting going on as waters recede.

Oklahoma—Eastern part of the State has excellent stands and cultivation is satisfactory and in western and middle parts rain needed to bring up late plantings. Some damage by high winds and drought, but nothing that could not be quickly repaired.

Texas—Northern counties have some cotton not up on the late planted bottoms but plant healthy and small. Feeling very hopeful.

Logan and Bryan say:

"Market opened slightly higher on firmer cables than expected but the advance was soon lost on liquidation of cotton bought on the recent rise that was predicted on excessive rains in the eastern States. The selling movement was induced by clearing conditions and prospects of fair weather continuing over Sunday in the Mississippi Valley and Atlantic States, where the rainfall has been rather more general than was needed for the progress of the crop, especially in Alabama and Georgia, where cultivation was being impeded.

"The market was held fairly steady however on continued dry weather in the western portions of the belt, where rains are claimed to be needed, the failure of showers that were promised for that section to materialize, checked the disposition to sell to some extent and prevented more than a moderate reaction in prices.

"Market is apparently fairly well evened up again and is likely now to work in a narrow range pending further crop developments and weather conditions."

THE COPPER INDUSTRY.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York and other exchanges, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

No London copper market Saturday.

The Anaconda Company has begun the remodeling of one section of the Washoe concentrator, in which will be introduced a more perfect development of classification, which is expected to accomplish a very much better extraction of copper along with some increase in capacity. The improved system has already been worked out in the Great Falls concentrator, and the remodeling of the Washoe will be on the lines determined at Great Falls. It is expected that the alterations to the first section of the Washoe concentrator will be completed early in the fall.

The electrification of the Butte, Anaconda and Pacific Railway, which it is estimated will effect a saving of around 35 per cent. as compared with transportation by steam power, is progressing rapidly. While the main line is only twenty-six miles long, the side tracks connecting with the various mines bring the total mileage up to 114 miles.

It will probably be the latter part of the year before the East Butte smelter will be in a position to output 2,000,000 pounds of copper a month. At the present time production is running about 1,250,000 pounds a month, and within a month, when the lengthening of the first furnace is completed, the company will be in a position to increase its production to around 1,500,000 pounds a month. Thereafter the lengthening of the second furnace will require four months. At the present time the East Butte smelter in addition to treating its own ores, is handling the output of the Butte-Alex Scott Company, the Keating Company, and some small shipments from the Butte-Balaklava Company.

The Boston News Bureau says: "The annual report of the East Butte Mining Company will be issued within a few days. During the period to be covered by this report the company produced approximately 18,000,000 pounds of copper, 400,000 ounces of silver, and about 20,000 ounces of gold. The report will cover the year ending March 31. The cost of producing copper will be shown to have averaged close to nine cents a pound on copper delivered in New York. This would indicate earnings of very close to $450,000 for the year. The company is doing considerable construction work, and remodeling its smelting plant, so that its capacity will be increased. This construction work will be paid for and leave a substantial balance for a surplus. It is possible that before the close of the present year East Butte may issue additional stock to take care of notes which were issued when the Pittsmont property was acquired. There continues to be a good buying seen in East Butte on all weak spots, and with any renewed interest in copper shares the stock should easily cross $15.

"Oneco directors will probably announce an assessment of $1 a share some time during the present month. There are outstanding 70,000 shares of Oneco stock, so that the assessment will provide the company with $70,000 when fully paid, and this should be sufficient to thoroughly explore the property and demonstrate beyond any doubt whether Oneco has the making of a profitable copper producer. The station has been completed at the twelfth level, and drifting will be started at once. The management is greatly encouraged over the showing of the vein, for as depth was attained enrichment increased. The assessment should have no depressing effect on the stock; on the contrary, will probably have a stimulating activity, for it will indicate that the management has confidence enough in the property to warrant the expenditure of additional money in developing it."

Hayden, Stone & Co., are in receipt of a night letter from the Butte & Superior property to the effect that the new mill is making an extraction of 91 per cent. of the metal value of the ore, as against an extraction of between 45 and 50 per cent. in the old mill. The ore averages 22.5 per cent. zinc, and the concentrates are running 51.8 per cent. zinc, the rate of concentration being 2½ into 1. These results vastly exceed the expectations of the management, and are nothing short of sensational compared with results formerly had in the old mill. The new mill was designed for a capacity of 500 tons a unit, but recently the plant has been treating as high as 625 tons of ore daily in each unit.

Directors of Keweenaw Copper will probably meet the latter part of the present month to consider the sale of timber on its extensive holdings. It has been estimated that the timber has a value of approximately $350,000. The sale of even a portion of this would provide Keweenaw with funds sufficient to resume exploratory operations, and it is quite probable that this work will be started before the summer is over.

NEW INVESTMENT HOUSE.

Finney & Co. Make a Start in Los Angeles—Concern Will Specialize in Local Stocks and Bonds.

A new firm of investment bankers, Finney & Co., has been organized to specialize in handling the stocks and bonds of Los Angeles manufacturing and industrial enterprises.

Charles E. Finney, the senior member, who is recently from New York, has been identified with manufacturing enterprises all his life. He was for many years manager of the Consolidated Kansas City Smelting and Refining Company at Kansas City; was founder of the Southwest Chemical Company, Kansas City, now owned by United Zinc Chemical Company; manager for M. Guggenheim's Sons, New York; member of the Operating Committee of the American Smelting and Refining Company, New York.

This enterprise is the result of appreciation of the splendid future marked out for Los Angeles as the center of manufacturing in this coast. There is an abundance of raw material within reach of Los Angeles at low costs of transportation. The supply of fuel and electrical power is not surpassed in any city of the country.

The best skilled artisans from eastern States are coming here to make their homes. These elements combined assure the future of Los Angeles as a great industrial center.

Being a coast city, with unexcelled facilities for water transportation, Los Angeles' market for its manufactured products is worldwide.

The aggregate value of products manufactured in Los Angeles last year was $85,000,000.

All of Southern California has been growing with such strides in all directions as to command the admiration of the hundreds of thousands of visitors who come here. The growth of the manufacturing industry has gone along so quietly as to create no stir. Yet these industries have expanded from small beginnings to their present large proportions and are showing splendid returns.

This new firm is handling the income stocks of many of the leading manufacturing and industrial enterprises of Los Angeles and Southern Californ

DULLNESS RULES ON THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Irregularity Turns to Heaviness in the Course of Two Hours of Business in Wall Street—Independent Tobacco Company Declares an Extra Dividend.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—Dullness and irregularity which later turned to heaviness in certain issues dominated the two hours of business today on the stock exchange. The usual market leaders were almost entirely neglected. They fluctuated within a fractional range until just before noon, when selling of Union Pacific, Rock Island, Norfolk and Western, Missouri Pacific and some of the industrials created weak closing. The only movements of interest were in the tobacco shares, which added materially to their gains of the preceding day of the week. Speculative interest in these issues is so limited that their sensational gains held little real significance. One of the independent tobacco companies which won a suit against the American Tobacco Company declared an "extra" dividend in addition to the regular disbursement. Bonds were dull, with the price movement somewhat restricted. Total sales, par value, $749,000. United States government 4's were advanced 1-4 per cent. on the week.

New York Curb Stocks.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., members New York and other exchanges, 115 W. Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, June 8.—[Exclusive to The Times.] The curb market followed the usual Saturday's dullness, though some attention was paid to the industrials, which were strong. British-American sold at 27⅝. The mining list did not show much life, except Braden and Greene Cananea, which were strong. The market closed dull.

The Boston coppers opened quiet with a firm tone. Coppers were less active but the volume of trading continues fairly large. Butte and Superior continues the feature. The metal situation predominates and brokers generally are advising their customers to pick up good coppers on all setbacks. Based on earnings with the present metal prices the raising of dividends should continue, as in the case recently of Calumet and Hecla and Quincy.

SHRINE WEEK AFTERMATH.

Dinner and Entertainment Given Patrol and Committeemen by Eddie Maier.

The Executive Committee, Arab Patrol, Arab Legion of Honor, Al Malaikah Band and Patrol and Band Committee were royally entertained at Beefsteak Hall, No. 440 Aliso street, last night, by Eddie Maier. It was an enjoyable aftermath of the great Shrine meeting of last month. The reception was in the nature of an expression of appreciation of the splendid services rendered by the men who had in charge one of the biggest and most successful events in the history of this city.

The festivities began with a beefsteak dinner which fully sustained the reputation of the host. The guests numbered 212. The hall and tables were elaborately decorated with Shrine flags and emblems and music by the Maier orchestra enlivened the dinner hour.

A souvenir bottle opener bearing Shrine emblems was presented to each guest by the host. Gifts for the wives or sweethearts were beautifully etched glass pieces.

Toward the close of the reception Perry Weidner, on behalf of the Shrine committeemen, presented Maier with a silver loving cup. An address, thanking the host for his hospitality was delivered by Oscar Lawler and informal talks were given by many others.

The important feature of the programme which was presented after dinner was the first presentation of a series of Shrine motion pictures which were made especially for the occasion. These included pictures of the big Shrine pageant and of other important spectacles of Shrine week.

The Maier orchestra and the Creole quartette, character and ragtime songs, impersonations, buck and wing dancing and other vaudeville sketches contributed to a highly pleasing entertainment, the occasion ending with informal speechmaking.

HONORED AT BANQUET.

Elks Entertain Hawaiian Yacht Captain, Who Is Lavish in His Praise of Two Clubhouses.

Capt. William H. Stroud of the yacht Hawaii was the guest of honor at a banquet given by the local Elks at the Athletic Club last evening. The affair was a farewell greeting to Capt. Stroud, who will pilot the yacht Hawaii in the coming race to Honolulu.

A toast of greeting was given by Exalted Ruler Edward B. Lovey to Capt. Stroud, extending a greeting to the Honolulu lodge. Capt. Stroud answered with the following remarks:

"It is with the greatest pleasure that I accept, on behalf of the Honolulu lodge, the honor favored me tonight. Although we are away out there in mid-Pacific, we have a very flourishing lodge and have always had a deep feeling for the Los Angeles Lodge No. 99. I have never seen a club that could equal the local Elks' quarters or the beautiful rooms of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. I came over here to win the coming trans-Pacific race and the receptions which have been extended to myself and crew are beyond comparison."

Those present were: Edward B. Lovey, exalted ruler, B.P.O.E. No. 99; M. J. Connelly, secretary, No. 99; Capt. William H. Stroud of Honolulu lodge No. 616; Tip Casselman of No. 99; E. B. Van Horn of No. 99; Dr. V. A. Goodrich of San Pedro lodge No. 966; Charles Mason of San Pedro lodge No. 966; A. J. McGill of No. 99 and Floyd Lenord, of No. 99.

AMERICAN SHIPS FREE.

Foreign Vessels Only, to Pay Tolls Through Canal if Senate Committee Recommendation Carries.

Free tolls for American ships passing through the Isthmian canal. No railway owned ships permitted to pass through the canal engaged in coastwise trade.

This is the recommendation, to be made by the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals. The news of the decision was received last night in a telegram to President Osborne of the Chamber of Commerce from Senator Perkins, a member of the committee.

The action of the committee has been awaited with interest by the Chamber of Commerce, and Capt. Osborne believes it to be of far reaching importance to this city and the Pacific Coast.

READY TO LEAD INTO SIERRAS.

John Muir Here from the North for July Trip.

Great Quiet Scientist Is Lover of Storms.

Tells of Emerson's Visit to the Mountains.

BY H. C. WARNACK.

John Muir, woodsman, mountaineer, botanist and geologist, arrived yesterday from the North at the home of his daughter, Mrs. B. A. Funk, [illegible] avenue, Hollywood, to head the big camping expedition which a large number of the 1400 members of the Sierra Club propose to make from this city into the high mountains in July.

Promise is a month of strolling, mountain-climbing and camp-fire confidences, those privileged to make the trip under the leadership of the high priest of the hills, this greatest of modern scientists and boldest mountaineer of all the world's high places may, by the process of mental absorption, tap a little of his vast store of wisdom.

John Muir is more than a person; he is an atmosphere. Curiously intermingled with the calm of twilight in his presence one also senses the majesty of the storm. It is singular that he loves a storm. His great moments seem always to have been associated with some Titan battle of the elements, and when he speaks of some raging conflict which he has fought alone upon a mountain summit with a rolling sea of cloud billows below him and the thunder batteries above him, one views the great chaos by proxy and feels the thrill of a wild, new nature at his hand.

ON SHASTA'S SUMMIT.

Once in such a storm at the summit of Mt. Shasta this grand old man of nature lay for seventeen hours in darkness, the icy winds blasting him with fury, the snow piling around him and above him, while with the [illegible] play cannon peal on peal of thunder which all but shocked the solitary figure of the watcher into insensibility. Another time he found himself suddenly plunged into a crevice of the Muir glacier in Alaska and he was drenched in its icy waters. An even more thrilling experience was his ride of five miles upon the bosom of an avalanche, traveling at a much greater speed than a mile a minute from a point near the summit of a mountain to its base.

Muir it was who discovered the living existence of glaciers in California, finding sixty-four of them in Yosemite Park. All of California was once covered with them, but that was hundreds of thousands of years ago. Of these he found not one has made any appreciable change in 15,000 years and yet he says all extant glaciers are changing with compartive rapidity because the earth's climate on the surface is modifying. Asked yesterday why this is, he said he could not tell, for men do not know where the earth is going. The earth follows its trackless path around the sun, but even that great flaming orb moves at a rate of millions of miles daily and none may say through what temperatures the colossal procession of heaven's illimitible luminaries may be carried.

DOMINATING ORDER.

One might say that Muir sees only one thing in all science. To him the whole of all nature emphasizes the one fact of order. To him rhythm and harmony constitute the Divine law. To him, evolution never misses a heart-beat. For him no syllable is lost in the cosmic drama. He reads the records of time as they slumber in stone for unrecorded aeons. To him all things created are chapters in the endless book of life, the drama of the infinite.

His conception of order, beginning with the crystal of snow which he says is a six-ray blossom from the meadows of the clouds, to the time when it is welded into the slowly flowing and all but insoluble gleaming mass of a mighty glacier, is so comprehensive and yet so gently and majestically simple, that it all but passes the limits of the finite mind. It touches the point of seeing, rather than of thinking. It amounts to infinite vision beyond the premise of logic.

Muir's attitude toward the great men of the earth is something exquisite. He has no criticism to offer for any giant of the human race, but says that when God is pleased to let one of his prophets appear, or when nature has evolved one of its masters after ages of waiting, the most that any of us can do, is to take some crumb from the banquet and speak of how it has sustained us. As a god might laugh at puppies at play, Muir smiles at the men who could tell us where Shakespeare, Hugo, Carlisle or Emerson were wrong.

When he spoke of Emerson, his eyes, always bright, kindled with a new flame. Then he told with tenderness and fire of Emerson's visit to the Sierras.

EMERSON IN SIERRAS.

"During my first years in the Sierras," he said, "I called on everybody within reach, to admire them, but I found no one half warm enough until Emerson came. I had read his essays and felt sure that of all men, he would best interpret the sayings of these noble mountains and trees. Not was my faith weakened when I met him in Yosemite. He seemed as serene as a sequoia, his head in the empyrean. Forgetting his age, plans, duties, and ties of every sort, I proposed an immeasurable camping trip in the heart of the mountains. He seemed anxious to go, but considerately mentioned his party. I said: 'Never mind; the mountains are calling. Up there lies a new heaven and a new earth. We'll go up a canyon singing your own song, 'Good-by, Proud World, I'm going Home,' in divine earnest.'

"It was too late, too near the sundown of his life; the shadows were growing long and he leaned upon his friends. His party, full of indoor philosophy, failed to see the natural beauty and fullness of promise of my wild plan and laughed at it as if it were necessarily amusing to imagine that Boston people might be led to accept Sierra manifestions of God at the price of a rough camping trip. They held Mr. Emerson to the hotels and trails, but when I was invited to go with the party, as far as the Mariposa big trees, I told Mr. Emerson I would be glad to go to the Sequoias with him if he would camp in the grove.

"He consented heartily, but when we reached Clark's station, his party dismounted saying that it would never do to lie out in the night air because Mr. Emerson might take cold.

AFRAID OF THE AIR.

In vain I urged that only in homes and hotels are colds caught, that nobody was ever known to take cold camping in those woods and that there was not a single cough or sneeze in all the Sierras. In vain I pictured the big climate-changing, inspiring fire I would make, praising the beauty and fragance of Sequoia flame and telling how the great trees would stand about us transfigured in the purple light, while the stars looked down between the great domes made by the forest giants. They would have none of my immortal Emerson night and with that strange dread of pure night air, which is only day air cooled with a little dew in it, they made Boston choice of carpet dust and unknowable reeks.

"When the poor bit of measured time was spent and the saddles were being adjusted, I again urged Emerson to stay. 'You are a Sequoia', I said, 'stop and get acquainted with your big brethren.' It was the afternoon of the day and the afternoon of his life and his course was now westward down all the mountains into the sunset. I followed his party to the edge of the grove and Emerson lingered in the rear of the train, waiting upon the top of the ridge until the rest of his party were out of sight to take off his hat and wave be a last good-by.

"That night, by my great fire, I was lonesome for the first time in those forests, but I soon took heart again, for the trees had not gone to Boston, nor the birds, and Emerson was still with me in spirit though I never saw him in the flesh again."

Muir is 74 years old, having been born at Dunbar, Scotland, and reared on a Wisconsin farm. He attended Madison University and came to California to study nature in 1868.

DEATH OF PIONEER WOMAN.

Lived Here More Than Forty Years and Was Recognized as One of Stork's Chief Agents.

Mrs. Mary Spiker, aged 77 years, died at her home, No. 215 Garey street, on Friday. She was the widow of George Spiker, who was killed by a street-car at First and Vignes streets, less than a year ago. The deceased was born in Germany, and came to Los Angeles in 1869. During the forty-three years of her residence here she was one of the chief agents of The Stork, and when she made a careful computation fifteen years ago, she had safely landed from the fireplace at the foot of the chimney, 1250 future citizens of California. She leaves four daughters and one son as her own contribution to the population. The funeral will be held at the chapel of Bresse Brothers, at 3:30 tomorrow afternoon, and the friends of the family are invited to attend.

HUNDREDS OF REBELS.

no means at hand to raise the water from the well, forty feet below.

"Unable to withstand the pangs of thirst which already had crazed more than half of the division, one of the terrified leaders threw himself headlong into the watery depths below. Then followed a scene such as was never witnessed before, as the crazed rebels fought with each other for the privilege of jumping into the gaping shaft, in utter disregard of the order of their superior officers."

The report states that five minutes later, the entire well was filled with struggling men, all of whom succumbed before their comrades were able to extend aid in pulling them out of the hole. Delirium seized the remaining members of the army and the disheartened soldiers scattered across the desert sands, only to find death under the burning sun.

ON PLAIN OF DEATH.

The report states further that "God alone knows the scenes that were registered when the debilitated men arrived at the well with high hopes of being saved, only to find that their own comrades had made it impossible to draw the life-giving fluid. Many were stabbed to death while the bodies of their fellows floated on the surface of the well, only to be pressed to the bottom by the rain of human beings that hurled themselves into the mouth. Of 1100 men in the second caravan only a few more than 400 resumed their sorrowful march across the sandy plain.

"Many of those left behind were not yet dead, but the instinct of self-preservation proved too strong in those who were able to resume the march, and their crazed companions were left to a certain death. A few days later scouting parties acting under orders of Gen. Aubert found the desert dotted with the bodies of the rebels who a short time before were giving free vent to brutal instincts aroused by fiery brandy stolen from the distillery. The valley henceforth will be known in Mexican history as the "Llanura de Muerte," or Plain of Death.

Private advices assert that Orozco is now working to obtain American intervention, in view of the fact that his treasury has been depleted and there are no longer sufficient munitions of war to carry on a prolonged battle, much less a campaign against the well-armed regulars.

Many of the citizens who are supporting the government of Madero look upon the crushing defeat at Cuatro Cienegas as a direct punishment from heaven, well merited by the rebels for their inhuman conduct while the city was being sacked.

VOICE OF DEATH.

of a sick, worn out, "busted" prospector, and his faithful wife went after him, brought him back to Los Angeles, and nursed him to health.

Rogers next formed a partnership with E. L. Allen and organized a fruit commission business, but the wanderlust was strong upon him, and after a year he could stand the strain no longer, so there came a day when he failed to return to his home. He passed into that mysterious country inhabited by the great horde of "missing persons."

For years the faithful wife mourned and searched, all to no avail. Finally, after long, anxious watching and deferred hope, she accepted the inevitable, admitted that in all probability her husband was dead, and married W. H. Reardon, soon afterward removing to Nevada. The pleasant home on Twenty-third street, a few doors from the Marlborough School, was dismantled, and the chapter apparently closed.

Of the movements of "Jim" Rogers during all the intervening years his Los Angeles friends have not the slightest knowledge. But they must have been years of thrilling adventure and travel.

The information of his death is contained in a brief, formal communication from an official source in the Congo Free State to the United States government, in which the passing of J. M. Rogers, American citizen, is related. Prior to that, according to the information received by the Mayor, Rogers expressed a desire that his wife, Lillian V. Rogers, be notified through Clark & Bryan, a Los Angeles firm.

It was with this firm that Rogers transacted most of his real estate business here, and although this partnership no longer exists, the Mayor notified Bryan of the contents of the letter. Bryan readily recalled Rogers, and the history herein briefly related.

"Rogers would be only about 42 years old now," said Bryan last night, "so his early escapades were all those of a very young man. I do not know where the former Mrs. Rogers is living or how to inform her of the passing of her first husband."

IRISH TRIBUTE TO GERMANS.

More Gaelic Than the Gaels Says Canon O'Leary.

Belfast Girl Finds a New Use for an Umbrella.

Croker May Help Develop Harbor of Cork City.

BY THOMAS EMMET.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

DUBLIN, June 8.—"German students of Gaelic," says Canon Peter O'Leary, "are more Irish than the Irish themselves." Dr. Kuno Meyer, the distinguished German scholar, evoked this tribute. Born in Hamburg, Prof. Meyer came to Dublin and founded the school of Irish Learning in this city, later returning to the German capital as professor of Celtic philology in the University of Berlin. "It is a remarkable fact," says Canon O'Leary, "that some of our very best Irish scholars are Germans. Their interest in the language should be an inspiration to Irishmen to work harder to make the preservation of Irish literature and Irish language less a matter of impulse and more a matter of fact." Prof. Meyer has been voted the freedom of the city of Cork.

A GIRL'S COMMON-SENSE.

Miss Annie McCormick, a Belfast servant-girl, may have been short on the poetic muse, but she was apparently long on common-sense and the arts of bringing beaux up to the crucial question. Miss McCormick was the star witness in an amusing breach of promise suit at Belfast which excelled, in the opinion of Judge Walker Craig, the humors of Bardell vs. Pickwick. William Nixon, a well-to-do electrical engineer, was the defendant. The lady's letters gurgled with love; the man's, like those of the immortal leader of all the Pickwickians, dealt mostly with "chops and tomato sauce." The strongest missive which injured Eve could adduce contained merely these lines: "But I am not going to say anything more about work at present, because we will get any amount of work before we die." When the blushing plaintiff, sobbingly hanging over the edge of the witness box, told the jury that "on one occasion the defendant complained of having the toothache," the judge was moved to ask what in the world that had to do with an action for breach of promise. "It came right from the heart," the witness assured the court. She was all full of heart. Thomas J. Campbell, who led for the defense, made the plaintiff admit that she kept Nixon out in the rain one evening deliberately so that she could take shelter under his umbrella and "get sociable-like." She recommended the umbrella as a help towards inducing balking wooers to "pop." Also, she approves poetry, although this was the best she could do on her own account:

"When you and I, my love, shall part,
Shall sorrow rend your loving heart?
I shall in a foreign land roam,
Lie down and die as others done."

Like Pickwick, Nixon was compelled to pay tribute to outraged Venus, the jury assessing the heart balm at the modest sum of $250 when the judge directed on the grounds that though "she did a little of the courting herself, why that's woman's privilege, and if she didn't assert it now and then, half the men in Ireland would have more sense than to marry."

A POSTCARD'S JOURNEY.

Back in 1885 a Waterford merchant sent an order by postcard to a Dublin saddler for some harness. The postcard has just been delivered by the Dublin postman with the usual official apology for delay in transmission. It seems that the card got stuck in a crevice in the letter box of the Waterford general postoffice. It remained hidden away until alterations were being made in the building, when it was duly discovered and forwarded with the stereotyped excuse. The order will not be filled, the Waterford merchant having died in the meantime.

THE GROWTH OF CORK.

Lord Pirrie, head of the big Belfast shipbuilding yard of Harland & Wolff, is now interesting himself in the growth of Cork City and is discussing with the corporation of the southern city the prospects of a new dock scheme for big ocean-going ships and a shipyard which he plans to open to assist the development of industry in the south of Ireland. Richard Croker desires to help the project and it is likely that his offer will be accepted. Cork has a wonderful natural harbor and is the center of population in the province of Munster. Hitherto, however, if one except the "Cork stout" which has gone around the world, its industries have been limited. Lord Pirrie is gathering around him the most broad-minded men in the country in efforts to stimulate the Irish people to new productive works, realizing every Irish opportunity as it comes along.

A GAELIC FESTIVAL.

Large posters have been placarded around Fermanagh announcing a Gaelic festival at Lisnaskea. The placard concludes: "Go Saorid Dia Eire agus Ri Seoirse V," which, translated, reads, "God save Ireland and King George V." Home rule, before its passage, is bearing good fruit.

WHAT ONE MAN WANTS.

"I want progress. As an Englishman to the backbone, I cannot stand sitting down," declared M. M'Keon at a meeting of the Drogheda (Meath) Rural Council during a discussion with regard to the building of a well. Thus, proving that even an English resident in Ireland cannot resist the temptation to perpetrate a "bull."

SUICIDES OF JUVENILES INCREASE IN ENGLAND.

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, June 8.—The increase of juvenile suicides in England is a subject which is attracting much attention. Two recent cases have been seized upon as instances that something is radically wrong with the system under which the youth of the country is seeking the wildest sort of sensationalism. A girl of 12 in Wolverhampton told her mother "school is stupid. I won't go any more." The mother first thought the child was joking. When she found the girl determined she asserted her authority and next morning sent her, still protesting, off to school with her books under her arm. The girl drowned herself in a near-by canal. The second case was that of a boy of 16, who hanged himself in his bedroom "because" he wrote, "life is horrid. I don't want to grow up and have to work like father." Cases are multiplying every week. The school teachers and clergy say it is vicious reading and sensational entertainments which corrupt the young mind; while others blame the weaknesses of the home authority and the severity of school discipline.

A TEMPERATE NATION.

On the unimpeachable testimony of Earl Gray, England learns that Canada is really becoming a model among temperate nations. His lordship says that during his recent tour of the Dominion he found that officers of His Majesty's Canadian guards had substituted ginger beer for champagne and Private Tommy Atkins is drinking barley water instead of beer. The announcement pleases the Church of England Temperance Society mightily, but it is not at all improbable that the British brewers will send across the water a commission of inquiry to test the brew offered Tommy and see if it is not possible to call him back to malt.

DIGNITY OF THE LAW.

This never could have happened in a United States court of law. But it is in thorough keeping with the dignity of the bewigged and begowned tribunals of Britain. While a motion was being made by counsel for Winston Churchill in his recent libel suit against a London publication a question arose which required comment by the opposing counsel. That gentleman was sitting right in front of the judge, but he dared not open his lips. He was without his wig and gown. Technically, therefore, Mr. Hogg (the lawyer's name) was invisible, although de facto he was very much in evidence this particular Mogg being a portly 316-pound person. Churchill's counsel laughingly indicated his learned friend's predicament. "I fear," he said, "my friend can not be seen." "You can see him," quoth the judge; "but I can't." And his lordship winked at Hogg.

STORY WITH A MORAL.

Here is a story with a moral to it. Sandy has ever been from Missouri, but there are times when caution is required in satisfying one's curiosity. Harry Fowler, a Glasgow man, went into a museum and heard a bra laddie on the stage announce that Miss Louisa Moore, famous fat lady, also on the stage in the full pride of her duly certified 658 pounds, was looking for a husband. Fair was this fat woman, but not anything like forty. She owned up to just twenty-six summers. When Fowler heard that she wanted a "mon" he ascended the stage to investigate. As he offered her his hand in marriage he let that member rest upon Miss Louisa's plump shoulder. Quick as a gattling gun, the offended beauty in plump plenteousness struck out with her right and sent Fowler plump into the midst of the audience. She followed him, tore his collar and plaidie into ribbons, closed both his eyes and left him in urgent need of much court plaster and a new set of teeth. And when Fowler took his indignant unreceptive love to court, the Baillie backed him off with this cold comfort: "Harry, my lad, an' ye go courtin', choose a we'un, lad choose a we'un!" And Fowler learning wisdom, responded: "A weel, Baillie, a weel."

MEMORY OF FAMOUS MEN.

Much nonsense clings like ivy to the memory of famous men. For instance, discussing the recent newspape merger in which the London Daily News figured stress was laid on the association of Charles Dickens with the early start of this organ of respectable Liberalism. As a matter of fact, Dickens edited the Daily News for less than three months. The pressure of diurnal literature was a handicap to him in the fiction which he had then under way—in March of 1846. These were aristocratic days in the literary life of Fleet street. Proofs were brought in to the editor on plated salvers; the printer's "devil" was a gorgeous being in plush and satin—Dilke called this Minos the "midnight footman of Charles the Great." Thomas Carlyle was assigned to write a slum story and he offered as "copy" part of what afterwards appeared in "Sartor Resartus." It did not get by the desk. There is so much that is really amusing and informing about great men's lives, it is remarkable that here in the very metropolis of fact, facts are the scarcest coins current.

LONDON NOTES.

It is not generally known that no crown-pieces have been issued during the reign of King George V. Considerable numbers of florins have been issued, but the crown-piece is never likely to be issued again. None have been struck for ten years!

Three hundred girls who struck work at a Bootle jute factory prevented the delivery of goods. The company sent out wagons laden with wool packs to the Lancashire and Yorkshire north goods station. The girls accompanied them, and at the station protested against the unloading. The railway men therefore preferred to handle any of the goods, and the lorries had to return with their loads.

In the early days of the automobile motorists were accustomed to sound the praises of the roads on the continent to the disadvantage of those in this country. Today the position is quite changed, for in no part of the world is motoring conducted under more favorable conditions than in England. This applies especially to the machines themselves, as the absence of the long straight stretches prevents any motor-car being driven at its full power for a longer period than a few minutes, while the roads themselves are smooth compared to those of Italy, for instance. The manufacturers of cars in that country realize this difference and consequently build their vehicles much stouter and stronger, in order that they may stand the hammering on rough surfaces, at a very fast speed seldom indulged in here in England.

MAY DUPLICATE BOURBON PACT.

FATE OF A DUCHESS AROUSES THE HUNGARIANS.

Day of Sadness Dawns for the Emperor of Austria With Death of Crown Prince and Murder of Wife. Baker of Arad Names Daughter After the Titanic.

BY EMIL VAN VASSER.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

VIENNA, June 8.—The famous family compact of the Bourbons which plunged Europe into the long and wasteful wars covering with blood patches a period which would otherwise have been fruitful in progressive civilizing movements is now threatened with duplication in the twentieth century. The storm was rekindled about the head of the Duchess Sophie, whom the Hungarian people insist upon seeing acknowledged as the lawful consort of the heir to the imperial throne, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand. It was to the people of Hungary that Maria Theresa appealed in her hour of need.

The Duchess Sophie, or Countess Chotek, as she is best remembered by Americans, has no need to appeal to the loyalty and patriotism of the Hungarians. They have spontaneously and enthusiastically espoused her cause when her enemies at the court of Vienna replied to Sternberg's book, "In the Change of Time," by denying her claims to recognition and openly suggesting that the Emperor should proclaim the illegitimacy of her children lest Franz Ferdinand should later regret and break his oath to bar them from succession to the dual monarchy. It is a sad hour for the aged monarch, who has seen so many troubles. The death of the Crown Prince under such lamentable circumstances; the murder of his gracious imperial wife, and now the state sequel to the romantic attachment of his heir to a woman who is wife and mother by the most rigid ties that laws decree

The Hungarian people approve all that Count Adelbert Sternberg writes about the legality of the marriage, and they look to the German Emperor to sponsor the cause of the injured and sensitive duchess. But, on the other hand, Austrian counsellors are urging that other means be taken to preserve the integrity of the empire and the prestige of the throne, and, they say, if Franz Ferdinand is so devoted to Countess Chotek and his children, it would be better for Franz Josef to nominate another heir and have such nomination confirmed by the Imperial Parliament. Friends of the Countess Chotek and of Franz Ferdinand say that the spiteful nature of this suggestion appears on its face. Because, they say with justice, such a nomination, even should Franz Ferdinand agree, would never be approved by the elected representatives of Hungary.

REVENGE OF TRAMPS.

The story of a boy, Mazeppa, was told the other day to the police of Bartfeld, Hungary. Two tramps appeared at the cottage of a farmer named Molnar and demanded alms. When he gave them food they abused him and insisted on receiving money. He ordered them away and they left, vowing vengeance. Next night Molnar's 6-year-old son was missed. In the gray dawn of morning the agonized father found the infant dead, and still bound to the horse upon the back of which the tramps had tied him, his head to the tail. The horse had been goaded into rage and the child's flesh was torn and gashed by thorns and some blunt weapon. All his clothing had been removed. A search is being made for the perpetrators of this terrible crime.

A baker, who lives at Arad, Hungary, on registering the birth of his daughter, told the registrar that he chose the name of Titanic, as she was born on the day the White Star liner sank. The official, however, refused to accept the name, as it is not to be found in the calendar of saints' days, and the baker had to content himself with the less topical name of Rosalia.

Archduke Franz Ferdinand May Visit America.

Chamberlain Touched by Favors in Birmingham.

Loyal Britishers to Honor Queen Alexandra.

BY LADY MARY MANWARING.

On the occasion of their return to England, the women of Birmingham made a beautiful floral presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain. The aged and feeble statesman was deeply touched and Mrs. Chamberlain was moved to tears while expressing their gratitude.

The women of England have learned to revere the helpless paralytic who was in his prime, the most hated man in English public life outside the ranks of his own immediate following. Even the butterflies of society have come to realize how true were many of his prophecies when he undertook to win, single-handed, his campaign for old-age pensions. VARYING VERSIONS.

"What is the secret of success?" asked the Sphinx. "Push," said the button. "Never be led," said the pencil. "Be up-to-date," said calendar. "Rub along somehow," said the ink-eraser. "Be sharp," said the knife. "Never lose your head," said the barrel. "Strive to make a good impression," said the seal. "Make the most of your good points," said the compass. "Find a good thing and stick to it," said the glue. "Turn all things to your advantage," said the lathe. "Oh, do shut up, you people!" cried the door, petulantly—and there was silence.

CARUSO HOARSE AGAIN.

Doctors Tell Him to Give Up Cigartetes and Smoke a Pipe—"Bah!" Says Tenor; "It's Abominable."

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

PARIS, June 8.—Enrico Caruso, the tenor, is again troubled by hoarseness, and may have to undergo an operation here. Two of the most eminent doctors in France have been treating him and both advise him to give up ciagrettes and if he must smoke, smoke a pipe.

"Bah," the singer exclaimed. "Smoke a pipe! It's barbarous—German, English—everything that is abominable."

Caruso says the only thing not wrong about the English is their mutton. He takes four lamb chops every morning for his breakfast. German wines he says are as execrable as Wagner's music, which was written for shouters to roar through the lovers of noise to rave over.

He denies indignantly that he is anxious to sing "Tristan," or "Lohengrin."

"Even to look at such scores gives me the headache," he says.

DEFIES THE CANNIBALS.

Japanese Druggist Ignores Threats of Man-Eating Monarch, and Will Return to Spread Civilization.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

PARIS, June 8.—Cannibalism is still rampant in southern Formosa, and when Gori Nakano, a Japanese druggist, visited the county, eleven years ago to secure for the government at Tokio knowledge of Formosan medicinal herbs, peaceful settlements were few and the wild tribes many and ferocious. He fell into the hands of one of the most savage aboriginal chiefs and was bound to a stake, stripped for carving, when Yayutsu, daughter of the cannibal king, fell in love with him and begged for his life.

For her sake the druggist was spared, but the king ordered the pair to be wedded forthwith in native style and to leave the island. His last words to his daughter were, "If you return, bring your Nakano's skin with you."

The Formosans remove a part of the cuticule of their victims and make house ornaments with it. Dr. Nakano will return to Formosa in his own skin to help his wife bring enlightenment to her people.

MUSICIANS ASTOUNDED BY COMPASS OF GIRL'S VOICE.

BY CLEMENT J. BARRETT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, June 8.—A Florentine girl, Giulia Lorenza, said to be a grandniece of Madame Lorenza, who was one of the most brilliant prima donnas of eighteen or twenty years ago, has astounded the music masters of Rome by a compass of notes which exceeds by almost an octave that of any singer recorded in the annals of music.

The girl is little more than sixteen, but she has been under good teachers since she was two or three years old. While her lower register is rich and mellow, especially for a very young singer, she has the treble of a human canary, sweet and bell-like, as it is away above the range of any voice ever heard in Rome.

The inimitable and irrepressible Oscar Hammerstein is said to be already in touch with the girl's guardians and it is just possible that she may help to win him the success which appears to have so far eluded his efforts to make opera on a relly grand scale pay in London.

"COUNT" AN IMPOSTOR.

The Italian count who was lionized by many of the most exclusive hostesses in the British capital, later to prove but a mercenary adventurer making free with the contents of their jewel caskets, successfully played the same role in Palermo, the city of his birth.

He was valet to an Italian nobleman of eccentric disposition, who frequently got him to masquerade as the real thing in Roman aristocracy. The valet took so well to this diversion that one day he vanished with his patron's most cherished trinkets, a complete wardrobe and a well-filled wallet. Later, he turned up in St. Louis, Mo., where he managed to run foul of the police and then fled to London.

NEW CABLEWAY PROJECTED.

A cableway connecting the Port of Savona to San Giuseppe, an important junction on the lines from Savona to Milan and from Savona to Turin, is shortly to be put in operation. It is said to be the largest of its kind in Europe with regard to the length of the line and the capacity.

It starts from a loading station in the Port of Savona, where important ferro-concrete depots holding about 10,000 tons of coal have been constructed, and crosses the mountains on lattice-poles, having a maximum height of 32m. anchored in concrete foundation blocks. The maximum span between the posts is 355 m. At the discharging station at San Giuseppe, the wagons are taken by two overhead cranes of 75m. span, traveling along a suspended track over 900m. long and supported by a number of ferro-concrete columns 1.50m. in diameter, placed 12 m. distant from each other and 16m. in height. Parallel to this elevated line, depots have been provided to receive as much as 600,000 tons of coal. They are connected to the Italian State Railway system by means of a ferro-concrete bridge of 150m. over the Formida River.

The work was begun in March, 1911, and completed within about fourteen months, in spite of the great difficulties which had to be overcome owing to the necessity of conveying the materials for the foundations and the poles by mules and of building roads to give access to the stations. The scheme is of great importance for the Port Savona, where considerable improvements are to be carried out, including the erection of a large breakwater and the extension of the quays at an estimated cost of £7,800,000.

GAME OF BASEBALL APPEALS TO THE CZAR.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, June 8.—The Czar Nicholas is the latest notable to succumb to "ball fever." In his youth, His Imperial Majesty was very fond of athletics and practiced boxing and ball punching until his health failed and physicians prescribed milder exercise. Then he took to rowing and riding, and for a time was an enthusiast in the English game of cricket. One of the gifts received on his birthday, a little over a week ago, was a baseball set handsomely mounted and with the imperial monogram done in gold on the handle of the bat. Next day the Czar had a diamond laid out within the palace grounds and tried his hand batting and pitching. He did well for a novice and enjoyed the play immensely. The son of the Gaekwar of Baroda, who learned baseball among other things while at school in the United States, got up a team here when he was in St. Petersburg a couple of months ago. He is now carrying the fame of the game with him to Oxford in England, where he is continuing his

KAISER'S HANDS STRENGTHENED.

Prussian Debates Help Political Programme.

Germans Figuring on Immunity of Aeroplanes.

Body of Lieut. Werner Is Finally Recovered.

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

BERLIN, June 8.—After all the commotion, the expected disturbances in Alsace-Lorraine have not happened. The debate in the Prussian Diet has strengthened the hands of the Emperor, instead of weakening his prestige as the Socialists had hoped. When all has been said and done, outside of the conquered provinces themselves sympathy is not very strong with obstructive tactics and even the most violent critics of the Kaiser are now willing to admit that the actual menace contained in the imperial speech was well within constitutional limits and provoked by the Reichlanders themselves. The human side of Wilhelm appeals to the multitude of Germans. His so-called "breaks" would be missed by those who dearly love something out of the rut of everyday routine, and his sterling patriotism is not to be denied.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

The final rounds of the international lawn tennis tournament will take place tomorrow on the courts of the Academical Sporting Club at Dresden. The entries are numerous and a host of tennis enthusiasts have gone to the great pottery metropolis to take in the meeting. The principal trophy to be competed for is the challenge cup of the Auslander Verein.

IMMUNITY OF AEROPLANES.

Whether an aeroplane is in truth immune from rifle and artillery fire, and if so, at what altitude, forms a question of importance to the designer of a military aeroplane. While British experts estimate 3000 feet a safe altitude, military authorities here incline to the greater elevation of 4500 feet. This is the altitude usually prescribed for the French scouts during aerial maneuvers, and the opinion was lately supported by an eminent Berlin expert who laid it down that at this altitude an aeroplane was wholly immune from both rifle and artillery fire. The rifle, in fact, has an effective range, vertically, of about 8000 feet; but an aeroplane speeding along at somewhere about half this height, but at sixty miles an hour, forms so difficult a target to hit as to be practically invulnerable.

THE KAISER'S UNCLE.

The Kaiser has an "uncle," who does not appear in the "Almanach de Gotha." He recently included among a list of guests "Uncle Hermann," a name which puzzled the Grand Chamberlain into asking who was meant. The mysterious "uncle" proved to be the well-known painter, Saltsmann, who once told him a funny story in which the chief party was played by one "Uncle Hermann," and has been his nickname ever since.

BODY IS RECOVERED.

The body of Lieut. Werner, who disappeared some months ago, while making a balloon ascent from Salsburg, has been discovered near the Bahngang See. It was lying in the snow. No trace of the missing balloon has as yet been found.

BARGAINS FOR A CASTLE.

James B. Duke, American Tobacco King, Has his Eye On Picturesque Ruin and Makes Bid.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, June 8.—James Buchanan Duke, the tobacco king, has madean offer for old Someries castle, near Luton, a picturesque ruin. His bid is a generous one and likely to be accepted.

Duke will build his future English house on the demesne adjoining the old Norman keep, which he will preserve for the British people. The people of Luton hope that the trustees of the property will sell to the American millionaire, of whose generosity they have heard much.

A poll taken among Americans now in London, but who will be home in good time to vote at the November elections, showed 3 to 1 in favor of the renomination of President Taft. The President's supporters were business men mostly. The colo: most of the bords of passage who spend little of their time in their own country.

Among Englishmen general amazement is expressed that Roosevelt should even be considered a candidate in view of his pledges made in 1904 and 1908, never to seek a third term. If any British statesman made such a pledge and broke it he would at the same time break his political career beyond possibility of repair. A far less glaring breach of tradition robbed the greatest living British statesman, Joseph Chamberlain, of the premiership when it was almost within his grasp ten years ago. It is the bitter disappointment which followed the blasting of his hopes to head a Cabinet which his friends think led to his breakdown and severance from public life.

RULERS TO MEET.

The Czar and the King of England to Hold a Conference During the Summer.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

ST. PETERSBURG, June 7.—The Czar and King George of England will meet during the summer and will personally discuss a possible alliance btewen England, France and Russia. These three countries, form the present triple entente, and for some time past it has been rumored that the entente would be converted into an alliance.

occidental studies. The Indian Prince is a good all-round athlete. In his first Oxford cricket match he knocked up 92, "not out" in little more than an hour, thus proving that a baseball player can handle an English cricket bat with little trouble. The ball set now being used by the Czar was the gift of the Gaekwar's son.

THE OLD REGIME DEAD.

The old regime of petty despotism is dead and gone forever in Russia. While some of the St. Petersburg correspondents still fill their dispatches with accounts of outrages committed against peasantry, industrial operatives and others, they are curiously silent when it comes to the swift punishment meted out for all such offenses. Usage always dies hard, and the Russian government deserves some credit for the earnestness and consistency with which it is endeavoring to protect the hitherto oppressed and convince the local authorities that the regeneration of Russia on a liberal and constitutional basis is real.

Here in an incident which shows both sides of the medallion. Col. Lilie, of the military staff at Kieff, took a party of friends after supper to a local Apollo music hall. They had a private room and engaged a pianist to amuse them. At a very late hour, when the pianist had worn his wrists and fingers out playing all the pieces he could think of, the colonel demanded that a certain march which he described should be given. The musician regretfully explained that he did not know it and so could not play it without having the music. The colonel drew his sword and ran the pianist through the neck, killing him instantly. The party then left the theater. Owing to the rank and influence of the perpetrator of this crime the local authorities tried to hush the matter up. But it was reported to the officers of the Duma and so to the Russian Minister of Justice. At once an investigation was made. The colonel was arrested, tried and condemned to death, and the officials who had tried to screen him were removed from office and punished as they deserved to be. Cases of this sort are giving the Russian people a confidence in the justice and power of the new regime which promises well for the empire.

AWAKENS IN COFFIN.

Awaking in his coffin as the earth was about to close on him forever, a wealthy Polish landowner named Masny had a narrow escape from being buried alive at Zuravica. He had fallen down in a fit three days before, and as there is no doctor in the neighborhood a veterinary surgeon was called in, who pronounced him dead, and gave a certificate of death from apoplexy. A large number of his relatives were present at his funeral, and, in accordance with the local custom, after the coffin had been lowered into the grave and the final blessing given by the priest, they began themselves to shovel in the first spadeful of earth. This apparently roused the supposed dead man from his trance, for faint cries of help were heard from the coffin. Most of the bystanders ran away in a panic, but the more sensible immediately helped the priest to open the coffin. Mansy was conscious, and after he had been given a restorative and been helped out of the coffin, was able to walk home with a borrowed overcoat over his grave clothes.

BANDITS IN GERMANY.

Outlaws From France Are Causing a Reign of Terror in the Suburbs of Berlin.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

BERLIN, June 8.—Driven out of France, the auto bandits are now turning their terrorizing tactics on the environs of Berlin. During the last three weeks the police have had three brushes with these outlaws, and rigorous methods are being resorted to, with the aim of driving them across the frontier. At Nauen and Bredow two outrages were committed by masked bandits using a fast racing auto. Soldiers and police pursued them after they had murdered an innkeeper and his daughter, and robbed a bank at Bredow. Driven to bay, the outlaws made a desperate defense and when two of their number had been so seriously wounded that their capture was assured, the third turned his pistol on them, shooting each through the brain and then made his escape.

THE TIGER AS A STALKER.

His Feet Are Shod With Silence as He Creeps Upon His Prey and He Quickly Takes Alarm.

[New York Sun:] Most wild animals may, in a sense, be termed "specialists" with reference to the manner in which they approach their prey. The tiger is great as a stalker. His feet may be said to be "shod with silence." As illustrating the proficiency of the tiger in this respect, there may be cited the experience of an English resident of India.

He had been much annoyed by tigers and at last tied a bullock in a clearing and took up his own position in a tree to wait until the big cat should come after the bait. The ground was covered with dried leaves, which in hot weather, are so brittle that even the walking of a bird over then can be heard for some distance.

In a short time a large tiger slipped out of the forest and slowly edged his way toward the bullock. His method was so elaborate and painstaking that the man watching was fascinated to a degree.

So carefully did the big beast put down each paw, and so gradually did he crush the dry leaves under it, that not a sound was to be heard. Between him and the bullock was a stump about four feet high, with long, projecting surface roots. This, plainly, the tiger regarded as a fortunate aid in his operations.

He got upon one of the roots, balanced himself with infinite care, and so was able to walk quickly and silently as far as the stump. He approachabed so gradually and noiselessly, and his color against the brown leaves was so imperceptible that he was close upon the bullock before the latter perceived him.

Then instantly the bullock charged. The tiger eluded him, and in a moment had his paws on the bullock's neck, ready to pull him down. Then, like a flash, he caught sight of the rope by which the bullock was tied and turned and sprang into the forest so quickly that the man in the tree had no opportunity to fire.

WOMEN PLAN CAMPAIGN.

Take Preliminary Steps Toward the Formation of a Democratic Organization of State-Wide Scope.

Democratic women voters of the city are taking the initiative in the formation of an organization which shall work as an auxiliary to the Democratic State Central Committee and which shall have for its special purpose the bringing out of a large Democratic vote at the polls.

The movement is already well under way and is expected to take definite form at a meeting to be held the 20th inst., probably in Blanchard Hall. Women Democrats from every county in the State are expected at that meeting. County organizations will first be formed and these will be amalgamated into a State organization. The founders of the movement assert emphatically that the organization will be nonpartisan so far as Democratic candidates are concerned. The organization will be an open forum for candidates and will be a medium through which Democratic women voters can be reached and addressed.

Among those at the head of the movement in this city are Miss Mary E. Foy, Mrs. I. W. Huey, Mrs. Ernest E. Wood and Miss Musa Rawlings. In the recent campaign the two first-named were workers in the Wilson ranks, and the others were for Clark.

Miss Foy, representing the new organization, has been in correspondence with William J. Bryan and recently tendered him an invitation to speak in this State. She received a letter from him yesterday in which he stated that he would be unable to come here. In his letter he says that he believes most Democrats are in sympathy with Jeffersonian principles and defines his idea of a Jefferson Democrat.

Miss Foy stated yesterday that woman Democrats from every corner of the State are taking an active interest in the plans for organizing and that every county will probably be well represented at the meeting June 20. A preliminary meeting of local women Democrats will be held in this city next Tuesday night. This meeting can only take the necessary steps toward holding a general convention. The real work of organization will be done when the State delegates assemble.

All who are interested in the movement believe that the proposed organization will be an effective political body and will do much toward bringing out a full party vote in September. Most of them believe that the Democratic woman vote will be particularly heavy if Roosevelt is nominated because of the strong prejudice held by California women against him.

THE CITY HALL STORM.

New Member for Utilities Board and Possible Appointment on Works Board—Rumor of Charges.

Mayor Alexander said yesterday thta he expects to appoint a member of the Board of Public Utilities early this week, to take the place made vacant by the resignation several weeks ago of C. E. Warner, now head of the Aqueduct Investigation Committee.

No inkling of the name of the prospective appointee was given by the Mayor, he simply stating that the offer of the position had been made to a man well qualified for the work and that he expects to have definite information today as to whether the position will be accepted.

The report was current yesterday that the Mayor had decided to appoint W. A. Roberts, a realty dealer of this city, as a member of the Board of Public Works to take the place to be vacated by A. A. Hubbard.

Another report current at the City Hall yesterday afternoon was that President Gibbon of the Harbor Commission is preparing specific charges against the Board of Public Works in general and Commissioner Humphreys in particular.

A Permanent Cure For Chronic Constipation

Although those may dispute it who have not tried it, yet thousands of others, who speak from personal experience, assert that there is a permanent cure for chronic constipation. Some testify they were cured for as little as fifty cents, years ago, and that the trouble never came back on them, while others admit they took several bottles before a steady cure was brought about.

The remedy referred to is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been on the market for over a quarter of a century, and has been popularized on its merits, by one person telling another. The fact that its strongest supporters are women and elderly people—the ones most persistently constipated—makes it certain that the claims regarding it as a permanent cure for constipation have not been exaggerated.

It is not violent like cathartic pills, salts or waters, but operates gently, without griping and without shock to the system. It contains tonic properties that strengthen the stomach and bowel muscles so that in time medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with and nature is again solely relied on. It is a reliable laxative for all the family from infancy to old age.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy, before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents, or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 405 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

RED MEXICO AS I SAW IT.

Americans, fearing that in his chagrin he would perhaps not countenance movements against them, but still might not punish offenses against Americans, have left Chihuahua and the vicinity of the rebel stronghold.

The rebel detachment which has been marching toward the west coast, is supposed to have as its objective point, Guaymas or Empalme, where a harbor with railroad communication northward would be available. Empalme is the railroad town. Some such point, as available to Northern Mexico as possible, is now Orozco's hope, and if he does not succeed in obtaining it, he is apt to be at his wit's end for ammunition. His supplies were considered ample in the early part of the revolution, and through his impressment of bank funds and financial help from more voluntary sources, he then had plenty of money to buy munitions in the United States and ship the supplies in through Juarez.

The Federal troops are, of course, better supplied. The government has a factory near Mexico City, where thousands of cartridges are made and hurried to the front. Other ammunition is quickly manufactured, or obtained as is necessary. This is Orozco's great problem, and the one that is likely to disperse or disorganize his army. In the beginning his forces greatly outnumbered the Federals and they were better supplied. But when the regulars could be concentrated and reinforced, the advantage was the other way, and among the first reinforcement were strong artillery—a large number of cannon.

Orozco now has two hopes. One is to secure a seacoast port where he can bring in munitions, and the other is to force the fighting south of Mexico City and call off the burden of attack on his own men. He has an understanding with Zapata to that effect, and Zapata, from now on, will make a show of attacking the capital city. He has been absolute master of the States of Puebla, Morelos and Guerrero, and his men are well equipped with supplies. A confidential representative has been conferring with Orozco regarding the plan of attack from the south. It seems probable that the threats on Mexico City will be made, if possible, in conjunction with the attack on the west coast designed to pre-occupy Madero.

With the northern revolutionists it is mainly a question of holding out. The Federals had believed that the campaign would be much shorter and that the rebel general would have been a prisoner of war ere this. While with the government army at Mapimi, Bermejillo and Torreon, I frequently saw Pancho Villa and his men drink with smiles of utter confidence to the annihilation of Orozco's army, and all from President Madero down were sure that the revolution would not last long.

Both Federals and rebels afford strange contrasts, typical of the Mexican's changing and volatile nature. I do not know whether to call them cowardly or brave, for I have seen many striking instances of both sides of human nature. There is a strain of intense fatalism running through the Mexican, inherited from his Indian forbears, but remarkably original. And yet, at times just the opposite nature obtrudes itself in a [illegible] fashion that would lead one to believe that the Mexican has no bravery at all, if the contrary had not been witnessed. The officers are no exception. Some are men of remarkable courage and strikingly large stature, finely educated and good soldiers. I met a number of such types—fine men to know and value as friends.

Opposed to these are others quite of inferior mentality and no soldiers at all, generally boasting how they saved the day and how much the army owes them personally. These great cowards, and a good many are found as officers of the "volunteer" regiments—so many that the officers of regular troops look down upon the volunteers and refuse, usually, to mingle with them. I saw two of these bombastic saviors of their country riding in pompous dignity at Torreon, a colonel and a captain, and another officer of the opposite type, a very brave man, told me an amusing incident about these two comedians.

They were in the battle of Rellano, where the firing of the American gunners, who manned Orosco's cannon was quite accurate and deadly. The colonel and captain were in the regular artillery, and became frightened and panic-stricken when they heard the wierd whir of the Gatlings. Their battery was on the bank of an arroyo and both colonel and captain lost no time in descending to the bottom of the ravine, where they crouched as low as possible, their knees trembling every time a bomb exploded. Finally the colonel mustered enough bravery to ask the captain if he would be kind enough to give orders to the sergeant in charge of the battery above. The men had been left exposed with the cannon.

Sergeant, how far away is the enemy?" asked the captain, from below.

"I think about five kilometers, my captain," said the sergeant. "Shall I fire?"

"Fire four kilometers and a half," said his commanding officer, who then dropped to the ground again.

Again the colonel, waiting until a lull occurred, gave polite orders to the captain, who shouted up, "Any damage?"

"I cannot say, my captain," said the sergeant, from the top of the bank.

"Can you see them anywhere?"

The sergeant took a field glass and scanned until he reported that he thought the rebels were moving to the left.

"What distance?" asked the captain.

"I should say, my captain, four to five kilometers."

"Well, then, fire at four and one-half."

And both colonel and captain took good care that they were not exposed to the enemy's fire. A week or so afterward both went to Mexico City, where they were received by the Minister of War and reported to him their version of the part they took in the battle. It was not at all as related to me by the artillery officer who fought in the same battle. The captain was introduced and recommended for promotion to the Minister by his colonel, who said:

"My general, I have the pleasure of recommending to you Capt. ———, who fought with bravery and total lack of fear at the battle of Rellano. His courage could not have been excelled, and it is my hope that you will promote him."

The captain listened to this praise of his exploit in the arroyo with an easily-assumed modesty. He said to the Minister: "My general, I am very proud to have fought under the leadership of my colonel. He is certainly the bravest man I have ever seen. Always with a total disregard of danger, he constantly exposed himself to the fire of the enemy, and his courage was inspiring to other officers and to the men. The colonel is he who saved the army from annihilation by the enemy's overwhelming force at a critical moment of the battle."

In case Uncle Sam should deem it necessary to intervene, it is that type of officer in Mexico who will be the first to flee. Others will stand up and fight to the last as bravely as officers of any army. The Mexican, however, will not withstand a greater and better-organised force, and while he would meet the "gringo" in the opening battles, his fight would soon shift to the mountains. Men of the fighting type, like Gen. Trucy Aubert, Gen. Joaquin Tellez and Gen. Pancho Villa, would not retreat until there could be no other recourse; on the other hand, there are others, like Gen. Gonzalez Salas, who, when Minister of War, fled from the battle of Rellano while it was raging and took the only train, leaving his army to any fate. Salas completed his cowardice by committing suicide in the train, shooting himself shortly after forsaking the battlefield. Men of his type would demoralize the army when fighting a foreign foe.

The private soldier in Mexico is about as volatile a type as are his officers. The regulars are disciplined by brutal treatment and severe beatings, and they know that any infraction of duty or regulations will mean cruel punishment. Hence they learn to obey, and obedience in a blind fashion becomes second nature with them. But the volontarios are undisciplined and treacherous, criminals at heart as well as by sentence in large numbers, and the others are pelados, or peasants, who have been forced into this "volunteer" service. They are not to be trusted by the government, and their officers do not trust them. The rurales have great respect for their bandit leaders, and yield excellent obedience, and so are usually well disciplined. War is not out of their line, for most of them foraged through the mountains before they went into the war campaigns.

The Federals have the most guns and ammunition, but Orozco has manned his cannon with American gunners, and they make their shots count better than do the Mexican artillerymen. The Federal army has French cannon, seven-inch St. Schaumont and five-inch Schneider and Canet guns. Their horses and mules are often ill-fed and can hardly pull the guns across the arid stretches of desert and over the mountain trails. In comparison with a well-equipped and up-to-date army Mexico's artillery would not make much of a showing.

One outcome in connection with the preparation for possible intervention of especial interest is Mexico's meeting of the interest on the gold loan bonds of $10,000,000 which Madero placed with Speyer & Co., the New York and London bankers. This was bitterly opposed by the parliamentary members who disliked Madero, but was nevertheless authorized, ostensibly for the increasing and equipping of the army to a total strength of 60,000 men for the purpose of quelling the present rebellions. The real purpose, however, as admitted by men in high authority, is to prepare for American or other foreign intervention. That this is so may be seen by the haste with which the government of Mexico has been storing enormous quantities of ammunition and arranging to form volunteer corps of the rebel forces when the dreaded intervention comes to pass. In case intervention should occur, it is a question whether Mexico will refund the bonds, which mature one year from date.

The financial situation in time of any war naturally is a tremendously complicated problem for the ruler of a country; and this rule does not find an exception in Mexico. Madero, coming into power with a complete change of policy, and having his own expenses as well as extraordinary features in the government routine to adjust, was confronted by an uprising that demanded an immediate military outlay of large proportions, and also contracted his sources of revenue to a considerable extent. A little study of this situation will give a comprehension of "what he was up against," to borrow a popular expression. When Mexico's aged statesman, Porfirio Diaz, accepted one of the inevitable swirls of popular clamor and marched bravely and patiently away from the capital city, he left in the treasury of his country sixty-two million pesos, and now something like thirteen million remain. The balance was used to cover the expenditures of Madero's revolution and to meet the exigencies occasioned by Orozco's revolt.

Men in Mexico City who are versed in financial affairs have been studying this situation. I have had recently—within a few days, in fact—confidential reports from a man in business in Mexico, and whose family occupied positions of trust when Diaz was President. This man a few months ago scoffed at any idea of intervention, and, like President Madero himself, estimated that the troubled and restless condition would be overcome in a very short time. That was then the general attitude in Mexico City, even among the foreigners who reside there. The man I refer to was a Mexican of the Mexicans, and he pronounced any idea of intervention to be preposterous.

Now, however, he admits that the situation is quite different from his former estimate, promising grave consequences. While he would not say openly in his letter that he feared intervention, it was easy to read between the lines and see that he had often discussed its possibility with his friends. No doubt his financial position and interests, and the effect upon them of a war condition, had depressed him greatly and colored his viewpoint; but his position is typical now of business men in Mexico City. They are discouraged, and not in the same frame of mind that prevailed at the capital when the Federal concentration began against the uprising in the North.

Probably if a vote were taken among all the Americans whose work or business interests are in Mexico, it would be adverse to any intervention by the United States. Many Americans, even those who have been privileged to know and admire the great work Diaz did for his country, are loathe to forward the policy of stepping into another country's dooryard. Admirable patience has been exercised by the Americans who have seen their workmen impressed and intimidated or shot, their animals and supplies taken, and their business almost if not entirely suspended—all, of course, under the fortunes of war. But they have taken the stand that it is Mexico's fight, and have expressed the hope that it will be settled by the Mexicans as an incident in the administration of their own affairs. Hence, the attitude of the American with business interests in Mexico has been strongly in favor of letting Mexico settle her own quarrels. There has been an admirable absence, also, of an intermeddling and trouble-making set among the Americans in Mexico—most of that ilk have kept safely on this side of the border, and talked socialism at long range.

If intervention comes, at least under President Taft's administration, it will not come through any rattle-brained work of Americans, for that has occurred on the part of few residents of this country. Nor will it be taken except as the only step left to preserve progress on the American continent and for the good both of Mexico and the outside countries. President Taft has kept very closely in touch with affairs in Mexico, and it is evident that he has done not a little to be ready should the emergency arise. Yet it is a momentous step to break into a sister country's matters and a disagreeable one. There are more things at stake that need immediate protection—even the Panama Canal problem is somewhat involved—and undoubtedly the President and his associates have discussed all of these things.

In America, however, we must have an occasional national "talking match" to see who is best fitted to be our President for four years more, and that delectable occasion is now on, or just about to be staged. In Mexico City the general opinion is that it will make for delay in intervention, and that in any event no step men of Mexico, it is not improbable shall have recovered from his political sore throat. Then, say astute observers and level-headed business men of Mexico, it is not probable that that the country will have some attention from the bigger country on the north.

[One more sketch in this Mexican series will appear in the Illustrated Weekly of next Saturday, June 15. It will describe the Mexican army.]

AMERICAN INTERESTS IN CUBA.

Amount to About a Quarter of a Billion Dollars Which Are Endangered by the Rebellious Negroes.

[New York Sun:] There are in Cuba today probably not far from 7000 people who were born in the United States. More than half of them reside in the city or in the province of Havana. A little more than 1000 are in Oriente, the province of special disturbance at the present time. There are some 700 or 800 in the province of Camaguey, and 400 to 500 in each of the remaining provinces, Santa Clara, Matanzas and Pinar del Rio.

There is no present ground for apprehension regarding the lives of these people. Here and there a murder may attend a robbery or some personal grudge be avenged by knife or bullet in an alleged insurrectionary movement. Any general attack on Americans or other foreign residents because they are Americans or foreigners is practically inconceivable. The Cubans, white or black, are not a bloodthirsty people; and while they may not be in all ways the wisest of mankind, they know very well the inevitable result of any murderous enterprise of a general character. Here and there an American or a European may be killed deliberately or in the defense of his property, but the killing of a foreigner is not altogether unknown in our own country.

The danger of damage to property is greater. The most reliable information indicates an American investment in the island amounting in its total to not far from $250,000,000. Claims have been made for double that amount, but they are not reasonably supported. About a year ago Consul-General Rodgers, reporting from Havana, gave the following statement of the amount estimated as at that time invested and the nature of the investment:

Sugar mills and lands ...	$50,000,000
Other land and real estate	15,000,000
Agricultural investments.	10,000,000
Railroad equities	25,000,000
Mines and mining	15,000,000
Mercantile and manufacturing	25,000,000
Shipping	5,000,000
Banking	5,000,000
Mortgages and credits ...	20,000,000
Public Utilities	20,000,000
Public Securities, etc.	30,000,000
Total	$220,000,000

If all these properties were wiped out, their owners would no doubt present claims aggregating at least $1,000,000,000, but it is most probable that a quarter of that sum would represent a fair actual valuation. Some of this property is in no danger whatever, and most of it is virtually immune from disturbance of any kind. The danger in which any property stands could be better estimated if more was known of the aims and purposes of the present disorder.

"OVER SIXTY YEARS AGO

my father carried the Emerson Piano as a leader. As his successor I too make it my leader, not as a matter of sentiment, but rather of sound business principles. The Emerson, all through these years, has thoroughly satisfied my most exacting patronage, because in tone, touch, durability, and in artistic treatment of design, it has proved itself to be a wonderful instrument. No other make, selling at the price, has seemed to me to be in a class with the Emerson."

The judgment of both dealers and users is conclusive evidence of Emerson quality.

A little study of this situation will give a comprehension of "what he was up against," to borrow a popular expression. When Mexico's aged statesman, Porfirio Diaz, accepted one of the inevitable swirls of popular clamor and marched bravely and patiently away from the capital city, he left in the treasury of his country sixty-two million pesos, and now something like thirteen million remain. The balance was used to cover the expenditures of Madero's revolution and to meet the exigencies occasioned by Orozco's revolt.

Men in Mexico City who are versed in financial affairs have been studying this situation. I have had recently—within a few days, in fact—confidential reports from a man in business in Mexico, and whose family occupied positions of trust when Diaz was President. This man a few months ago scoffed at any idea of intervention, and, like President Madero himself, estimated that the troubled and restless condition would be overcome in a very short time. That was then the general attitude in Mexico City, even among the foreigners who reside there. The man I refer to was a Mexican of the Mexicans, and he pronounced any idea of intervention to be preposterous.

Now, however, he admits that the situation is quite different from his former estimate, promising grave consequences. While he would not say openly in his letter that he feared intervention, it was easy to read between the lines and see that he had often discussed its possibility with his friends. No doubt his financial position and interests, and the effect upon them of a war condition, had depressed him greatly and colored his viewpoint; but his position is typical now of business men in Mexico City. They are discouraged, and not in the same frame of mind that prevailed at the capital when the Federal concentration began against the uprising in the North.

Probably if a vote were taken among all the Americans whose work or business interests are in Mexico, it would be adverse to any intervention by the United States. Many Americans, even those who have been privileged to know and admire the great work Diaz did for his country, are loathe to forward the policy of stepping into another country's door-yard. Admirable patience has been exercised by the Americans who have seen their workmen impressed and intimidated or shot, their animals and supplies taken, and their business almost if not entirely suspended—all, of course, under the fortunes of war. But they have taken the stand that it is Mexico's fight, and have expressed the hope that it will be settled by the Mexicans as an incident in the administration of their own affairs. Hence, the attitude of the American with business interests in Mexico has been strongly in favor of letting Mexico settle her own quarrels. There has been an admirable absence, also, of an intermeddling and trouble-making set among the Americans in Mexico—most of that ilk have kept safely on this side of the border, and talked socialism at long range.

If intervention comes, at least under President Taft's administration, it will not come through any rattle-brained work of Americans, for that has occurred on the part of few residents of this country. Nor will it be taken except as the only step left to preserve progress on the American continent and for the good both of Mexico and the outside countries. President Taft has kept very closely in touch with affairs in Mexico, and it is evident that he has done not a little to be ready should the emergency arise. Yet it is a momentous step to break into a sister country's matters and a disagreeable one. There are more things at stake that need immediate protection—even the Panama Canal problem is somewhat involved—and undoubtedly the President and his associates have discussed all of these things.

In America, however, we must have an occasional national "talking match" to see who is best fitted to be our President for four years more, and that delectable occasion is now on, or just about to be staged. In Mexico City the general opinion is that it will make for delay in intervention, and that in any event no step men of Mexico, it is not improbable shall have recovered from his political sore throat. Then, say astute observers and level-headed business men of Mexico, it is not probable that that the country will have some attention from the bigger country on the north.

[One more sketch in this Mexican series will appear in the Illustrated Weekly of next Saturday, June 15. It will describe the Mexican army.]

AMERICAN INTERESTS IN CUBA.

Amount to About a Quarter of a Billion Dollars Which Are Endangered by the Rebellious Negroes.

[New York Sun:] There are in Cuba today probably not far from 7000 people who were born in the United States. More than half of them reside in the city or in the province of Havana. A little more than 1000 are in Oriente, the province of special disturbance at the present time. There are some 700 or 800 in the province of Camaguey, and 400 to 500 in each of the remaining provinces, Santa Clara, Matanzas and Pinar del Rio.

There is no present ground for apprehension regarding the lives of these people. Here and there a murder may attend a robbery or some personal grudge be avenged by knife or bullet in an alleged insurrectionary movement. Any general attack on Americans or other foreign residents because they are Americans or foreigners is practically inconceivable. The Cubans, white or black, are not a bloodthirsty people; and while they may not be in all ways the wisest of mankind, they know very well the inevitable result of any murderous enterprise of a general character. Here and there an American or a European may be killed deliberately or in the defense of his property, but the killing of a foreigner is not altogether unknown in our own country.

The danger of damage to property is greater. The most reliable information indicates an American investment in the island amounting in its total to not far from $250,000,000. Claims have been made for double that amount, but they are not reasonably supported. About a year ago Consul-General Rodgers, reporting from Havana, gave the following statement of the amount estimated as at that time invested and the nature of the investment:

Sugar mills and lands ...	$50,000,000
Other land and real estate	15,000,000
Agricultural investments.	10,000,000
Railroad equities	25,000,000
Mines and mining	15,000,000
Mercantile and manufacturing	25,000,000
Shipping	5,000,000
Banking	5,000,000
Mortgages and credits ...	20,000,000
Public Utilities	20,000,000
Public Securities, etc.	30,000,000
Total	$220,000,000

If all these properties were wiped out, their owners would no doubt present claims aggregating at least $1,000,000,000, but it is most probable that a quarter of that sum would represent a fair actual valuation. Some of this property is in no danger whatever, and most of it is virtually immune from disturbance of any kind. The danger in which any property stands could be better estimated if more was known of the aims and purposes of the present disorder.

INTERESTING COMBINATION.

A smoker, in appreciation of the work of the Chamber of Commerce in connection with the Los Angeles aqueduct, will be held in the State Building at Exposition Park, on Tuesday evening, June 18. One of the surprises planned for the evening, is "A Combination in Restraint of Criticism," in which Chief Engineer Mulholland and his stereopticon will play the leading role.

CHINESE HELD UP.

Lee On Hen, a Chinese employed at No. 515 Kingsley drive, yesterday asked the police detectives to assist him in apprehending a "hop head," who, he says, held him up Friday night and took $25.60 from him. Lee says the man followed him from Chinatown to rob him.

DEVELOPMENT CONVENTION.

The Southern Pacific Railway has made a regular excursion rate of one and one-third fares for the round trip to San Jose, during the convention of committees representing the different counties of the State, under the auspices of the California Development Company. The tickets will be sold on June 20, 21 and 22, good for return until June 24.

Want Name Changed.

A largely signed petition has been filed asking the City Council to change the name of Newman street from Van Ness avenue to Normandie avenue, to Lemon Grove avenue.

"OVER SIXTY YEARS AGO

my father carried the Emerson Piano as a leader. As his successor I too make it my leader, not as a matter of sentiment, but rather of sound business principles. The Emerson, all through these years, has thoroughly satisfied my most exacting patronage, because in tone, touch, durability, and in artistic treatment of design, it has proved itself to be a wonderful instrument. No other make, selling at the price, has seemed to me to be in a class with the Emerson."

The judgment of both dealers and users is conclusive evidence of Emerson quality.

LOCAL LIGHTS TO SHINE IN NATIONAL GATHERING.

Notable Part to Be Played by Los Angeles Femininity in Great Convention at San Francisco of General Federation of Women's Clubs of the United States—The Programme of Business and Entertainment.

A PART of notable significance in the most momentous event of the woman's world to occur this year will be that played by the Los Angeles delegation to the national convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of the United States, which assembles in San Francisco on the 25th inst., for a two weeks' session. Approximately 100 delegates will go from this city and about four times that number from all of Southern California.

Los Angeles club women are particularly proud of the fact that one of their number, Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, occupies the second highest office in the general federation. As its first vice-resident, she is in direct line for the presidency of the great body, but it is an unwritten law of the organization that no resident of the hostess State shall be elected its chief executive. It is characteristic of the genuine California spirit that Mrs. Cowles was one of the most enthusiastic workers to pull the biennial to San Francisco, although she knew that by so doing she would forfeit the chance of presidency.

Yesterday Mrs. Cowles received a telegram from Mrs. L. L. Blankenburg, second vice-president, stating that she would arrive in San Diego, where she has relatives, on that day. This week she will come to this city en route to San Francisco. Mrs. Blankenburg is the wife of Philadelphia's Mayor and her name, as well as that of Mrs. Pennybacker of Texas, has been mentioned for the presidency.

According to the itinerary mapped out, delegates to the biennial, who come by way of Los Angeles, will arrive here two weeks from tomorrow and will remain here until 5 o'clock p.m. Monday, the 24th. Owing to to the brief stay of the visitors, Los Angeles women have planned for no formal receptions, but instead all the clubhouses will keep open house, and delegates will be whisked about the city and suburbs in automobiles.

The delegates will arrive over the Santa Fe, in a special train designated as the "Southern Official Special," which will be a replica of the luxurious California Limited. Stops will be made at various scenic points along the way—at Santa Fe, Laguna and the Grand Canyon.

AT SAN FRANCISCO.

The biennial meeting of the general federation will incorporate a wide programme of events. Not only does the convention aim to accomplish much work of lasting value, but the committees having arrangements in hand, seek to insure a delightful visit to the delegates.

The biennial will be the result of untiring efforts of three of San Francisco's most active and efficient club women, Mrs. J. W. Orr, recently elected president of the State federation; Mrs. A. P. Black, recently elected president of the California Club, and late president of the San Francisco district, and Mrs. E. G. Denniston. The idea was fostered by Mrs. Orr and Mrs. Black who have since taken an active part in preparations for the notable event.

THOSE IN CHARGE.

The San Francisco local biennial board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, are in general charge. Of this board, Mrs. E. G. Denniston is president, Mrs. A. P. Black, first vice-president; Miss Eva Powell, second vice-president; Mrs. Annie Little Barry, recording secretary; Mrs. Frank Fredericks, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Emily Hoppin, treasurer; Mrs. Wallace R. Pond, auditor. Directors, Mrs. J. W. Orr, Mrs. E. L. Baldwin, Mrs. Thomas E. Haven, Mrs. Henry Payot, Mrs. C. B. Connor, Mrs. John E. Gardner, Mrs. S. L. Wylie, Mrs. J. H. Baldwin, Mrs. O. P. Clark, Mrs. Henry Sahlein, Mrs. Robert Potter Hill, Mrs. A. E. Osborne.

The Palace Hotel will be official headquarters for the biennial. Practically all conferences will take place in the Sutter-street Pavilion, a huge auditorium, at Sutter and Pierce streets.

ELABORATE ENTERTAINMENT.

The provision for the entertainment of the delegates and club women has been carried out to a nicety of detail in which nothing has been spared to impress the visitors with the qualification of the Bay City, in the matter of amusement. To this end a Programme Committee has for its head, Mrs. J. W. Orr. She has named sub-committees on music and art; chairmen who will see that the best talent is displayed during the progress of the biennial. The musical programmes are to be a marked feature of the convention, as this is a new department recently adopted by the federation. Art will also be given a prominent place. The newly reorganized San Francisco Society of Crafts and Art will hold a continuous exhibit of handiwork at No. 220 Post street during the biennial. Mme. Emilia Tojetti, chairman of music, will be assisted by Mrs. David Hirschler and Miss Henrietta Stadtmuller. Mrs. Edwin Stadtmuller is chairman of the Art Committee.

A symphony concert will be given at the pavilion at the informal opening of the convention on the evening of June 24.

Two informal receptions will be held at the Palace Hotel. On the evening of June 25 the San Francisco biennial board will receive the officers, delegates and visitors and on the evening of July 4 the same guests will be entertained by the California Federation of Women's Clubs as hostesses. At the Greek Theater in Berkeley a concert has been arranged for Mystery Message.

VOICE OF DEAD REACHES AFAR.

Stirs Memories of Living in Los Angeles.

Strange Career of Former Resident at End.

Faithful Wife Long Since Married Another.

Speaking across two hemispheres a voice came from the dead yesterday that stirred the memories of several Angelenos and recalled the story of an interesting character of fifteen years ago.

From the far-away Congo Free State was the message of J. M. Rogers, "Tell my wife that I am dead," is all it said. It was a deathbed utterance, put in writing by South African officials after the end, and came through the State Department at Washington by letter to Mayor Alexander, and from the Mayor it fell into the hands of E. P. Bryan, of the Bryan-Bradford Company, No. 204 Trust and Savings building, who years ago knew "Jim" Rogers and had many business dealings with him.

The career of Rogers was brilliant, meteoric and sensational. He came to Los Angeles before there was much of a city, and with keen foresight happily married and invested in real estate which afterward netted him handsome returns.

Then came the call of the North—the time when the eyes of the world were turned upon the Klondike, where, it was reported the riches of a Croesus were to be plucked from the unresisting hills. Rogers heard the call, and turning his holdings into cash, bade good-by to his wife and fared forth.

The gods of luck were not marching under his banner, and for a long time nothing was heard from him. When the news came it was only Tragedy of Insurrection.

HUNDREDS OF REBELS DIE IN A DEEP WELL.

Horror of a Kind Probably Never Before Seen in the World Follows the Battle of Cuatro Cienegas, Where Orozco's Forces Revert to a State of Savagery and Meet Awful Fate.

DETAILS OF THE RECENT battle of Cuatro Cienegas, which was characterized by horrors even surpassing Gen. Sherman's famous characterization of war, filtered thrugh the strict censorship maintained by the Mexicans rebels and reached this city yesterday.

According to these advices, corroborated in a meaurse by the official report of the battle, the army of Orozco reverted to a state of savagery unequalled in the annals of modern warfare.

Driven from the city in which they had committed the most unspeakable atrocities, his forces became lost in the desert of Bolson de Mapimi, and more than 600 terrified soldiers perished from thirst and exposure to the elements.

The opening scene in the awful tragedy that followed, as related in the official report of the Mexicans themselves, took place when the army of Monclava, numbering about 1800 men, encountered a large brandy distillery a short distance from Cuatro Cienegas and preceeded to "calm their dipsomania," as a Mexican correspondent naively asserts. Continuing the report declares that the entire army was reduced to a state of inebriety followed by a "fever of crime," which resulted in an orgy in which hundreds of defenseless women and young girls were the victims.

"Before the army was driven from the city by the arrival of the Federals we could hear the clamor of the victims who were being mistreated before their suffereings were ended by the bestial executioners," says the report. "Private houses and stores were soon in criminal hands and were horribly sacked by the crazed soldiers, many of whom were half dead with hunger and thirst.

"In the midst of this jubilee of rapine, the Federals under Gen. Aubert and Col. Gonzales arrived on the scene made desolate by the rebels and soon restored order among the survivors."

HUNDREDS JUMP TO DEATH.

"The fugitive rebels divided into two parties and in the confusion that followed the arrival of the Federals, instead of taking the road which led to the rebel headquarters at Escalon the men were soon lost in the desert. In their precipitate flight, all provisions were abandoned and a few days later the vanguard discovered that it was in the very center of the Mexican arsenal, surrounded on all sides by desolate sand hills, and men were falling like flies when the leaders suddenly came upon an old well known as the Noria de los Americanos.

"After satisfying their thirst, the fugitives decided that the Federal army was still in pursuit and it was decided to destroy the pump so that the regulars would be unable to slake their thirst. Six hours later the second division following the tracks of its predecessor staggered into the little valley in hopes of obtaining life-giving water and the leaders were horror-struck to find that the pump had been destroyed and that there was

PREPARE FOR BIG TALK.

Forty-seven Participants in Try-Out at Polytechnic Auditorium—Eight Selected to Be Cut to Four.

Polytechnic Auditorium overflowed with youthful eloquence, Friday afternoon, when the candidates for the honor of delivering orations at the eighth grade commencement exercises, to be held at the Auditorium on the afternoon of June 18 held their contest.

There were forty-seven participants, sent from various schools in the city, and all the speeches, according to W. F. Hughes and E. E. Hitchcock, the committee appointed to choose the best eight were excellent. Many had been memorized, and were well delivered.

The final decisions involved several questions, such as variety of style, length, and the necessity of choosing only one on each subject. The only exception to the latter consideration was in the case of the two on "Child Labor," the committee being unable to decide that either was better than the other.

The successful orators, and their subjects are as follows: Madaline Whitaker, Normal Training School, "Immigration;" Hugh B. Evans, Jr., Vermont-avenue school, "Wireless Telegraphy;" Ardell Yeager, West Vernon-avenue, "Child Labor;" Martha Elsey, Normandie-avenue, "Outings of Today;" Eva Campbell, Grand-avenue school, "Panama-Pacific Exposition;" Jepsie Tingley, Euclid-avenue school, "Child Labor;" James Boyle, Hoover-street school, "The Disadvantages of Advantages;" Helen Matthews, Fifty-second-street school, "Conditions in China."

Final decision on the names of two boys and two girls will be made by the superintendents, to be announced later.

YOUNG ZIONIST OFFICERS.

The following officers have been elected by the Young Zionists: Harry A. Goldman, president; Mr. Fisher, vice-president; Miss Fisher, recording secretary; Mr. Isenstein, treasurer; I. T. Privulsky, correspondent; Harry Frank, M. Rubinand, I. T. Privulsky, directors.

IF UNCLE SAM INTERVENES.

[A further exploitation of the vital subject discussed in The Times of June 6, 1912.]

SOME 27,000 men are engaged in fighting or brigandage in Mexico today, and the warfare there has reached almost a crucial point. From the city of Torreon to the desert battleground, toward Chihuahua, the Mexican government has in the field about 9000 men. Orozco's revoltosos number about the same. Zapata, in the south, has a following of about 6000, which is opposed by a very much smaller Federal force because of the necessity for concentration of the regular troops in the north. There are on the west coast, and elsewhere, independent roaming bands of brigands who loot, burn and kill with greater impunity since the rurales are needed in warfare instead of putting down the robber outbreaks.

The contour of the country in Northern Mexico favors the rebels, and this will be especially true in case of their dispersal by Madero's army. If that occurs, it will not by any means signify the crushing of the rebellion, but merely its transfer from open combat to a guerrilla warfare. And therein lies the reason why it is practically impossible for Madero to entirely put down the rebellion. He is likely to force the revolutionists to give up Chihuahua, and his forces may be victorious almost continuously in case the rebels cannot secure a west-coast port and bring in more supplies. But if he does that, the revoltosos will retreat into the mountains and divide into bands of brigands, now here and now there, and the evil effects of rebellion will still menace the populace and business interests.

On the other hand the government forces are favored by the superior ability to secure munitions. At the outset Orozco's men were not only well armed, but had plenty of ammunition. Their stores have been dwindling, owing to inability to bring in new supplies. They could not smuggle arms across the border, although some of this has been done by the rebels and their sympathisers at isolated points on the border. The watchfulness of the United States soldiers has prevented any appreciable smuggling from this country, even though there are long sections of the border that can hardly be watched night and day. Orozco has been confined to a section of Mexico which has given him no ingress from the ocean.

He did not think a port would be necessary at first, because he and his aides were more than confident that the capture of Juarez would give them a border entrance. They never dreamed of any other event than that the United States would recognize their belligerency, and the refusal of the United States to do this has embittered Orozco exceedingly. He sent emissaries to Washington, and at the time of their departure from Juarez the rebels were confident that all that would be necessary was for the delegates to state their case to President Taft and then return and report favorably to Orozco. To do this would have been equivalent on President Taft's part to taking sides for Orozco as against Madero, and, naturally, this he could not do.

This failure of the rebel plans was almost a checkmate for Gen. Orozco, for it lessened the importance of the taking of Juarez, since the other side of the border was still closed. Orozco has expressed himself very bitterly against "Dos Estados Unidos," because his bidding has not been done, and many Americans and other for-

HUSKY MEN'S HOUSEWARMING.

Athletic Club's Ornate Pile to Be Thrown Open.

Public Will Be Entertained for Three Days.

Finest of Its Kind in the United States.

The formal opening of the Los Angeles Athletic Club's new building, the largest and most palatial athletic club quarters in the United States, according to William M. Garland, its prophet, will be on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

The building, which represents an investment of $1,500,000, occupies the northeast corner of Seventh and Olive streets, and rears eleven stories of architectural excellence skyward. Every feature of modern club life is found within its walls, and many unusual features as well.

Naturally especial emphasis is laid on the athletic features of the club, and it is in the magnificent marble-lined plunge, 100x32 feet, and in the perfectly appointed gymnasium, locker rooms, running track, squash courts, boxing departments and other athletic features that the pride of the 2000 and more members finds its fullest expression.

In the events of this week an opportunity is to be afforded the people of Los Angeles to see for themselves what has hitherto been available only for the membership, and when the full significance of the big building and the scale de luxe to which it is graduated is understood there is bound to be many surprised visitors.

The initial reception will begin at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and from that hour until 10 in the evening the structure will be thronged with the invited guests of the members to whom cards of admission and invitations are being issued. At this time every member is expected to be present to organize into a committee of one to see that the guests are properly entertained and the plant thoroughly exhibited.

There is a marked curiosity on the part of the public to inspect the new clubhouse, and not the least of this curiosity is manifested by the women. So appreciative is the board of directors of this interest that the members are now seriously considering a proposition to open the club to the wives and daughters of the members on two mornings of each week.

Chairman Garland of the committee on arrangements is endeavoring to induce Ex-Senator DelValle to make the principal address during the evening of reception day. An added interest would be felt in such a talk because the eloquent DelValle made the dedicatory speech when the little organization was formed twenty years ago in modest apartments in the Downey Block, which stood on the site of the Federal building. During the day and evening refreshments will be served, and Aaron's orchestra on the third floor and Porter's Catalina band in the gymnasium will play.

On Friday evening the particular interest attaches to the banquet and dance, the former served in the dinner room, and the dance to follow in the gymnasium, which is admirably adapted to such a form of entertainment. Many of the city's most prominent men will be present, and several brief addresses will be made. In arrangment and execution of these events Chairman Garland promises a surprise. The committee is endeavoring to accommodate all of the members making application for places at the dinner.

A smoker for members and their invited guests is planned for Saturday evening. Each member is privileged to bring two guests to this function, which will be for many the culminating event of the week. A dinner will precede the smoker, and afterward there will be a varied entertainment including vaudeville features, gymnasium exhibitions of prowess and skill, boxing, wrestling, swimming and water polo.

A feature of the gymnasium, swimming pool, and athletic department generally lies in the fact that they are located on the seventh, eighth and ninth floors, the lower floors being devoted to the library, smoking, lounging, dining, and other departments of the organization, while above the ninth floor are 140 rooms for the accommodation of members desiring to make their permanent or temporary home at the club.

"This magnificent and fully equipped building," said Chairman Garland in discussing the coming opening, "is a tribute to the enterprise and energy of the citizens of this city who have caused to be constructed and maintained such a club, and the members are as anxious to have their friends see the culmination of their endeavors as the friends are to participate in the formal opening of Los Angeles' finest club home."

Don't Drink Impure Water

Try Puritas Distilled Water This Summer—For Your Health's Sake.

Maybe you try to take precautions about the drinking water you use.

Maybe you have a filter attached to your faucets.

Maybe you boil your drinking water.

Filters simply form a trap into which all the impurities go, and through which the water you drink is forced.

Boiling water helps a little, but boiled water isn't pure, after all.

Moreover, it is "flat" and unpleasant to drink, and the minerals remain in it.

There is only one process—distillation—that really makes water pure.

And there's only one best way of making distilled water sparkling and palatable — aeration by electric current, through filtered air.

Puritas Distilled Water undergoes both of these processes, in the most carefully sanitary surroundings.

Yet Puritas is inexpensive — only 40 cents for a five-gallon demijohn, delivered to any point within the old city boundary lines. Beyond those points Puritas cost a trifle more, because of the long haul.

You ought to be drinking Puritas—so ought your family — lots of it—this summer. Telephone your order.

If you live out of town, you can still have the pure water, for Puritas can be obtained through dealers in most towns in Southern California. If you cannot get it, write us and we will see that you are suplied. Home 10053; Sunset Main 8191. Los Angeles Ice and Cold Storage Company.

RAPID GROWTH OF SUFFRAGE.

WOMEN EXPECT TO GET THE BALLOT SOON.

Visitors at Pau Are Now Enjoying Some Good Fox Hunting—Likelihood of Lower Postal Rates Is Indicated—Efforts Making to Get Money for an ex-King.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

PARIS, June 8.—When a French cabinet minister predicts that the next Presidential election will probably be the last conducted without the assistance of women voters, some idea can be gained of the rapid growth of the suffrage movement here. Recent American and British women visitors to Paris have been astounded at the change in official feeling towards the French suffragists. Lady Aberconway, who is one of the leading members in the Lyceum Club of London, adds her testimony to that of the Minister of Justice, saying that she will be greatly surprised if Frenchwomen do not win the vote before their English sisters. "As a matter of fact," says Lady Aberconway, "the women leaders in England derive a great deal of encouragement from the activity and success of the women of France. The French suffragists, like their American sisters, have avoided many of the mistakes made by the organization in England. They seem to have much in common—French and American women—and while their methods are not so dramatic, they are certainly getting better results. In London, it is a prevailing idea that the dot lowers woman's prestige in France. But the fact is that it strengthens her position in the family. In France and in the United States, the girl is considered before the boy. Her position is better assured. It is natural, therefore, that she should be able to seek her rights upon a higher plane, and without having to confute the absurd arguments so often raised by male critics of the sex in England."

GOOD FOX HUNTING.

Visitors at Pau are enjoying some good fox-hunting. The Pau hounds have been an institution for some years, but not until this season have the peasantry regarded foxes as other than vermin to be shot or otherwise destroyed on sight. The club is now offering rewards for help in conserving Reynard and the result is that covers are readily started and the sport lively where last year foxes were scarce and shy. The pack has not the speed of the average English shire string but they hold well to the scent and give good hunting. It is nothing like trailing moose or American mountain game, but it puts ginger into cross-country riding. A day with the Pau pack is an opportunity which no equestrian tripper through France should willingly miss.

POSTAL REFORMISTS.

While postal reformists have not yet succeeded in securing penny postage between France and England, the Minister of Finance is studying the possibility of reducing the rate to fifteen centimes. M. Chaumet says he is confident that this reduction will be feasible. The convention recently signed between France and Great Britain provides for a considerable reduction in the telephone rates. The price of a three-minute conversation between Paris and London will be reduced from 10fr. to 6fr., and the rate between London and Lyons from 12fr. 50c. to 7fr. 50c. It is also proposed to establish a public telephone call office service between Paris and London. In order to deal with the increase anticipated in the telephone traffic, new cables have been laid between Cape Gris-Nez and Abbott's Cliff, and the reduced rates will be put into force as soon as the new lines are ready for operation.

LOAN FOR AN EX-KING.

Efforts are being made to obtain a loan for the ex-King of Portugal; the amount of £100,000 is mentioned, which sum is to be spent in furthering the scheme for the recovery of the monarchy in Portugal. The repayment is to be secured by the guarantees of some of the leading and wealthy members of the ex-King's State officials and followeds, and as an inducement for the loan it is proposed that the firm or individual finding the money, shall, in the event of the efforts for restoring the King Manuel to his former throne proving successful be appointed financial agents to the government of Portugal.

HIS GREWSOME CACHE.

Elderly Man Steals Tools and Hides Them in Grave—Says He Was Hungry, Couldn't Find Work.

A grave in the old Catholic cemetery on North Broadway was used by Charles Berger, 62 years old, in which to hide tools as he stole them from machine shops in different parts of the city, according to admissions he made when arraigned yesterday before Police Judge Chambers.

Berger told the court it was impossible for him to obtain work in any of the local shops because of his age "and lack of pull." He began stealing tools from other workingmen, he said.

"He'd carry them up to the old cemetery, your honor," testified Detective Fitzgerald, "and with a spade open an old grave. There he'd hide 'em until he got ready to pawn the tools. When that time came, he'd open the grave, always at night."

"I was hungry, and didn't know what I was doing," Berger told the court.

The detective testified that Berger stole about $500 worth of tools from shops at No. 128 Wilmington street, No. 707 North Main street, No. 925 North Main street and No. 1646 San Fernando street.

"In each instance," Fitzgerald said, "Berger took all the tools belonging to a man, throwing him out of employment until he could procure others."

The court will pronounce sentence tomorrow morning.

HAS HE GOT 'EM AGAIN?

The Mayor's Assailant Is Removed From Jail to Receiving Hospital When He Becomes Obstreperous.

While Ambrose Gallagher, who assaulted Mayor Alexander in the latter's office last Thursday, did not attempt to emulate Ajax to the extent of defying the electricity that operated a rotary fan in the City Jail yesterday morning, he did declare he could make the fan run backward by blowing into it.

He tried it, failed, grew angry and raised such a racket in the prison that Jailer Shand had to remove him to the Receiving Hospital. There Dr. Kidder found it necessary to shackle him hands and feet to a cot.

Gallagher insisted it was Monday—wash day. Taking off his shirt, the dipsomaniac tried to wash it in the bathroom. To dry it, Gallagher took off his hat, and fanned it for a few moments. When he grew tired of that he looked around for other means, when his eye caught the electric fan. He declared he could make it turn backward.

A score or more prisoners gathered around Gallagher to see the sport. He drew in a deep breath, puffed out his cheeks and blew into the face of the revolving fan. It didn't stop, and the crowd laughed and jeered at him. He tried it again. The more he tried the madder he became. Finally Jailer Shand found it necessary to send him to the hospital.

INVITATIONS OF TIN.

Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Steely celebrated their tin anniversary Tuesday evening at their home on St. Andrews place. The invitations were unusual, having been painted upon note-size sheets of tin.

DEFINED.
Whenever an ambitious individual has the props knocked from under him by a force he can neither dodge nor stop, he calls that force a steam roller.

FINE THEORY.
California hotel men are considering the evil of tipping. It is funny how we all agree that tipping should be stopped and then don't stop it.

POOR SYSTEM.
Going on a strike on account of the high price of beef, several Brooklyn housewives wrecked two or three butcher shops. This is no way to make both ends "meat."

HIS VIEW.
"This campaign has been a fight by the rank and file against the bosses," says Roosevelt. That is what all politicians say in all campaigns, and it is a singular fact that they themselves are always with the rank and file.

UNSOUND.
It is to be hoped that the managers of the Olympic contests at Stockholm will deny competitors the right to carry oxygen bags from which to take whiffs as they run. Oxygen in this form is an unsportsmanlike stimulant.

UP IN THE AIR.
New Yorkers are increasing the Woolworth Building to fifty-five stories. When it is completed it will be 750 feet high. We suppose the elevators will be equipped with sleepers and dining-car service and that people will spend their summers on the roof garden of the new skyscraper and will go to the top when their health demands altitude and change of climate.

THE MONEY BARREL.
So it is as we suspected. Zapata and Orosco couldn't dip as deep into the money barrel as they expected to. Hence the present fireworks. Yet Mexico needn't lose hope. When you come right down to it all the great wars of the world have had much the same origin. And the world has recovered from them. For, if they last long enough, they are bound to settle themselves. That is to say, the money barrel runs dry. Mexico may prefer this way for working out her salvation. It often costs money to be saved.

CLEAR FOR ONCE.
Ladies and gentlemen take off your hats to Henry James. He has made a speech in English that could be understood by those who never learned the tongue in Dublin, Oxford or Boston. To cap the climax, he made his speech about Robert Browning. He did not talk of Browning the poet, but of Browning the inventor of plots fit for the development of novels. "The world of expression at any cost is the world of poetry," he said. "Browning was not aloof. He walked on the same side of the street with us all. Shelley was a light, Swinburne was a sound, Browning was a temperature. It was his nature to prompt one to think of fine things at every point and his generous wings are covering us still." Of course, the press of the world is still echoing with the demand that Browning societies shall agree to make no public effort to arrive at Browning's meaning for the next ten years. Meanwhile, let us all return thanks to find Henry James intelligible at any point.

DISCOVERED.
Most persons at some time in their unusual careers have been children and it has been the lot of many of those who had the luck to be born very young to at some time encounter parental displeasure. A few avoided this by being orphans and some may have done so by being good, but the latter is unlikely. Those little boys and girls who were sometimes bad were told by their parents that the punishment inflicted hurt the father or the mother much worse than the child. Our skepticism on this point hurt some of us much more than the event which followed. At last, however, this time-old assertion of the fond parent has been demonstrated. An Oakland mother broke her hand in spanking her daughter. There is some truth therefore in the assertion, but it has taken a long time to have it proved.

FREEDOM FROM MALARIA.
One of the reasons why Southern California is practically free from malarial diseases is because that at no period of the year is there decay unaccompanied by new growth. Miasma is given off by decaying vegetation. It is arrested and absorbed by growing vegetation. The exhalations of vegetable death furnish nutrition to vegetable life. There is no malaria in the bogs of Ireland or the Dismal Swamp of Virginia and North Carolina because their surfaces are covered by perpetually-growing mosses and other vegetation.

When a forest is cut down and the balance is destroyed between growth and decay miasma has no resting place and the malarial germs poison the air.

The Roman campagna in the days of Dometian and Hadrian was covered with forests and gardens. Now it is a pestilential and uninhabited desert. Two miles from the outskirts of Rome there will not be seen a human habitation to break the solitude.

The eucalyptus tree is especially an absorber of malaria. It ought to be planted on the borders of every stream and pond and slough.

Secretary Frank Wiggins is mountain-climbing in Switzerland. While there he will take a look at the Swiss navy.

A LEGLESS STATE.
There is blood on the face of the moon in progressive Arizona. The State Senate has been antagonizing, and discouraging, and sneering at, and in divers and sundry ways misusing the House of Representatives until forbearance has not only ceased to be a virtue but has become a legislative crime.

The Senate set a time to adjourn, and the House refused to sanction it. The Senate passed a bill to provide for the appointment of a State purchasing agent, and the House threw it upon the table with a dull, sickening thud. The House passed a board-of-control bill, and the Senate indefinitely postponed it. The House passed the law to provide for an election of State and county officers next fall, and the Senate rejected it.

Worsley, the Socialist Senator from Tucson, announced that the camel's back was broken. He resented equally with members of the House the repeated legislative outrages perpetrated by his fellow-Senators. He introduced a bill providing for an amendment to the Constitution of sun-kissed Arizona by striking out so much of article 4, section 2, as refers to the State Senate and providing that hereafter but one house shall do the business of the State.

"Thar ain't a goin' to be no Senate no more. We've done got tired of them Senators interferin' with the wishes of the people's house, and of the press a tryin' to tell us what we ought to do here," said a hayseed legislator from an outlying county.

Senator Worsley has illustrious precedent for his proposition. Catiline tried the same trick in Rome of old, but he failed, for Cicero "et him up alive," and the Roman Senate, instead of abolishing itself, abolished Catiline. Lord Randolph Churchill argued in favor of a measure abolishing the House of Lords and succeeded in getting six peers besides himself to favor the bill. But hundreds of peers, hitherto voiceless, turned upon "Randy" a flood of uncomplimentary adjectives, and the Duke of Argyll—to speak metaphorically—"clove him from chin to chine."

Yet the Arizonans may succeed in doing what ancient Romans and modern Britons failed to do. They may send "the Constitution as it is" to the scrap heap, and who can say that the innovation may not be an improvement?

What is the use of a State Senate, anyhow, except as a theater for the oratorical efforts of sucking statesmen who part their hair in the middle—with towels—and beat the air with orotones projected from the pits of their stomachs? What, if you come to questioning the wisdom of existing institutions, is the use of a House of Representatives? Under the beneficent operations of the initiative cannot a majority of 30 per cent. of the voters pass laws for the government of the other five-sixths? They did that the other day in Los Angeles, and what is done in a city of 400,000 people may be done in a State containing half that number.

Let Arizona amend her Constitution and keep on amending it. Let her plaster its upper side with recall of judges, and its under side with popular reversal of court decisions, and lop off the leg which represents the Senate, and amputate the other leg which represents the House. She can get along without legs and with a poulticed and bandaged trunk.

THE CHRIST IN LITERATURE.
Despite the fact that the critics are crying out that this is a materialistic age, and notwithstanding the great sweep of realism which is running through much of our literature, there are numerous indications which point to a Christward trend in our modern fiction.

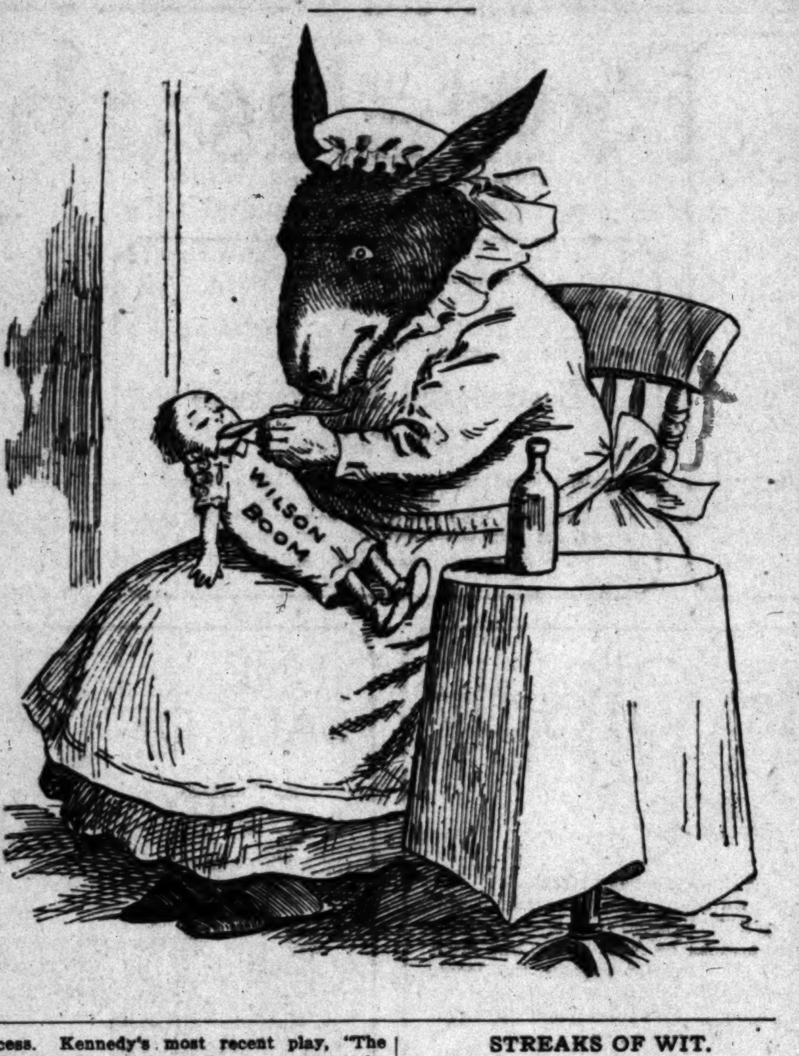
It is not merely among the lesser writers that we find this indication, but in the works of many of those authors who stand in the foremost rank of contemporary novelists. It is indeed significant that in recent years many of the acknowledged masters of fiction have produced works with Christ Himself as the protagonist, or with a thinly-disguised figure of Christ as the central figure. A fact which gives this movement an added significance is that these writers have worked separately and independently. The works in which the Christ spirit is materialized emanate from widely separate countries. In Germany both Sudermann and Hauptmann have given us books of this character. The latter's "The Fool in Christ" is one of the most powerful of this kind of novel and shows no influence of Sudermann. Fogazzaro, who died a short time ago, and whose books were interdicted by the Roman Catholic church, produced a powerful interpretation of the Christ spirit. Rostand, in France, has added his contribution to this movement. Andreiyev and Dostoievsky have both personified the Christ spirit in literature. Pontoppidan, in Denmark, and Selma Lagerlof, in Sweden, have turned to Jesus of Nazareth for their theme and in each instance their works have been popular successes. In fact, in nearly every recent book of this nature more or less popularity has followed.

There may be some who claim that this popularity has been due to the author and not to the subject-matter of his book. But this theory is immediately killed by the fact that numerous obscure writers whose works have heretofore been little known and read have attained great prominence by novels which have had as their basis the personal interpretation of Christ. Perhaps the most glaring example of this is to be found in Gustav Frennsen. In 1905 Frennsen, a retired German, was unknown. In that year he issued his book, "Hilligenlei," in which Christ was his inspiration; and since its publication over 100,000 copies have been sold. Frennsen's name today is well known in every country where his book has appeared. Elsa Barker will be remembered by many as the author of "Mary Bethel"—a first novel—much longer than if she had chosen fictitious characters instead of biblical ones.

Not only in the novel-writing field do we find indications of this tendency to re-create the Christ spirit, but also in many of our most recent plays. George Moore's "The Apostle" was one of the most discussed dramas of last year and its popularity in this country led to its importation by an American firm. Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House," and Jerome's "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" are two examples of the popularity of this theme. Both plays were a decided success. Kennedy's most recent play, "The Terrible Meek," is another example of the dramatic personification of Christ. All of these plays have been published in book form, which gives added significance to them.

There has been much discussion in all parts of this country as to the propriety of thus representing Christ in plays and in novels. In New York the Mayor even went so far as to prohibit their public performance; and in many libraries throughout the country such books have been barred. Perhaps the question of their propriety or impropriety is wholly an individual one. But surely in many of these books, written by acknowledged masters of modern-day literature, where the subject is kept on a high plane of sincerity, their influence should be for the good. There are many persons to whom a moral precept cannot be brought unless it be through disguised media; and many, no doubt, have read "The Fool in Christ" who would not have spent their time on a mere hortatory treatise.

Such a Little Thing!



TESTS OF PERSONALITY.
A man instinctively stamps his personality on the house in which he lives, the team he drives and the clothes he wears. He is known by the books he reads as well as by the company he keeps. You may pass along a highway and tell the nationality of each farmer by a glance at his front yard. Lilacs, pansies, sweet peas and a sugar maple are certificates of New England origin. A yew tree, black currants, box borders and Covent Garden stocks show that the owner has not forgotten the old England where he was born. Balsams and crape myrtle by the door, and melons and gumbo in the vegetable garden, afford information that Keyurnel Kassius Kearter of Kearolina has here his home.

Dogs also betray the characteristics of their owners. Daniel Webster was fond of mastiffs and Gordon setters. Henry Clay never owned or tolerated a rat terrier. Abraham Lincoln made a pet of an affectionate and loyal collie. Ben Butler had a bulldog lying on a mat in his private library.

You can tell something of a man's disposition and character by noting what newspaper he reads in the trolley car on his way to his work. Courtesy forbids that we should analyze the characters of those who are not ashamed to be seen publicly perusing our steamed contemporaries. But when you see a man with a high forehead, a resolute but genial face, a strong nose and "A combination and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal
To give the world assurance of a man" you may be sure that the journal he is reading is the widely-circulated, ably-edited influential Los Angeles Times.

ALSACE-LORRAINE AND THE EMPEROR.
Alsace-Lorraine is still sulking over the Franco-Prussian war of nearly half a century ago and her allegiance to Germany is of the must perfunctory order. Nevertheless, a short time ago Prussia conferred a measure of self-government upon the alien province and gave it a constitution. Considering that Alsace-Lorraine bore much the same relation to Germany as Ireland does to England, it was admittedly a generous piece of legislation for Germany to concede.

But Alsace knows no gratitude and one of the first uses she has made of her constitution is to reduce the vote for the Emperor's allowance to nearly half, besides taking other small revenges of a most irritating and perverse nature. And then the Emperor, who is still impulsive and very human, lost his temper and, very much more in anger than in sorrow, he metaphorically shook his fist at Alsace and threatened to revoke her constitution if she did not desist from her knavish tricks.

It is all very sad, for, of course, Alsace metaphorically puts her thumb to her nose and shouts "Garn—like to see yer do it!" or words to that effect, whereupon France, who is naturally delighted at the exchange of impertinences, indulges in one of those ribald national laughs that can even be heard in the hidden recesses of courts.

It would certainly seem that a good deal of the dignity has gone out of the King and Emperor business, and that nations can be quite as ill-behaved as the worst baby.

STREAKS OF WIT.

Likes Being Buoyed Up.

[Washington Herald:] "I am going to learn to swim this summer."

"I thought George taught you last summer."

"But I am no longer engaged to George."

The Truth Did It.

[Washington Star:] "I made all kinds of excuses to get off to see them play ball this afternoon."

"Wouldn't any of them work?"

"Yes. Finally I touched the boss's heart by telling him I wanted to go to the ball game."

Makes Him Squirm.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] Mrs. A.: Do you ever scold your husband?

Mrs. B.: Not now. I"ve found something more effective—I ask him for money.

Beginning Early.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] "What makes you think the baby is going to be a great politician?" asked the young mother, anxiously.

"I'll tell you," answered the young father, confidently; "he can say more things that sound well and mean nothing at all than any kid I ever saw."

A Summer Flirtation.

[Catholic Standard and Times:] "Have you really broken your engagement to him?" asked the giddy girl.

"Yes," replied the other. "He was no fun at all. I simply couldn't make him jealous, no matter how I tried."

A Fearful Revenge.

[Judge:] "Don't you think it is dastardly to send a man an infernal machine?" asked Jones, while motoring with Brown.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Brown, as the car gave a dying groan, half-way up the hill. "If I had an enemy, I'd send him this one."

A Candy Kid.

[Catholic Standard and Times:] "See here!'" cried the boy's father, "if you don't behave I'll whip you."

"I wisht you would," replied the bad boy.

"You do, eh?"

"Yes, 'cause when it's all over ma will gimme some candy."

Like Other Chauffeurs.

[Houston Post:] "Your Honor," said the arrested chauffeur, "I tried to warn the man, but the horn would not work."

"Then why did you not slacken speed, rather than run him down?"

A light seemed to dawn on the prisoner. "That's one on me. I never thought of that."

A Saint.

[Detroit Free Press:] "He never kicks on the umpire's decisions."

"Doesn't, eh?"

"No, and what's more, when his wife calls him down for staying out late he even admits that she's right, too."

The Figures Prove It.

[Life:] "Suppose coal is $6 a ton, and you gave your dealer $30, how many tons would he send you?"

"Three."

"Oh, that's wrong."

"I know it's wrong, but that's what is done."

National Roads Projects.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] A system of "national highways" having an aggregate length of 51,025 miles is proposed by the National Highway Association. The project is for three East and West transcontinental main highways and a similar number North and South, with numerous feeders and link highways. Primarily the roads are to be for automobile traffic.

Commenting on this project, which is typical of a number being put forward nowadays, Engineering News says that "every engineer who has studied the road problem carefully and intelligently agrees that expenditure on highway improvements should be concentrated first of all on the roads radiating from the centers of population." This is sensible from a general as well as a technical point of view. The roads radiating from cities are traveled by farmers going to and from markets very largely. They should be improved before grandiose "national projects are considered, and next to them in importance are roads connecting cities.

It is estimated that the projected system would cost $763,000,000 for construction and $92,000,000 a year for maintenance. The nation may properly spend money on highways, but it should not become committed to extravagant schemes merely because they make a pretty appearance on paper and would benefit pleasure tourists.

THE DARLING DOCTOR.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

How he dominates the world, the darling doctor! It will be a thousand pities if Christian Science and patent medicine vendors ever succeed in supplanting him in our allegiance. Ah, but they won't. We could never do without the doctor. He is the first man we send for when the baby sucks the sulphur off the matches, when mother overeats, when father shaves a shade too deeply—and he is the last man we pay.

Nothing else could ever give us that exquisite feeling of essential importance that the doctor conveys as he holds our wrist tenderly the while he gazes at his watch with thoughtful brow. And that intimate little thrill of anxiety as he concentrates all his great learning upon the state of our tongue. I am a disgustingly healthy person myself, but one of my most triumphant memories is that of a delicious illness which required the darling doctor's urgent attention no less than three times a day. As he dashed up in his automobile (oh, the automobile has greatly added to his charms) and arranged his face nicely into the correct bedside expression as he came into the room, I felt the most superior person on earth. My pulse, my temperature, my feelings, my sensations were all important, and the fact that every visit meant $2.50 (which might or might not get eventually paid) lent me a prestige with my relatives and neighbors that I could have secured no other way.

Nearly every lady friend I possess assures me that her doctor says she is very highly strung, superlatively sensitive, quite unusually temperamental; that it is quite wonderful how she has succeeded in existing in this vulgar unfeeling world for so long. Nothing but her indomitable courage and her sweet desire to live could ever have pulled her through.

And in case you don't happen to know it—the darling doctor does, bless his heart—being "highly strung and unusually sensitive" is a most desirable attribute in the modern female. It sort of suggests that you are above the common herd, that you have to be treated with greater respect and consideration, that you must always have the most comfortable chair and the best cut of the chicken, that nothing, in fact, is quite good enough for you in a world of lowly-strung, thick-skinned dullards.

The medical profession is very rightly regarded as a sort of superior aristocracy. Any girl will readily marry a doctor, and there is no device remote enough for the match-making mamma to scorn in her efforts to secure a doctor son-in-law. The vulgar-minded might suggest that this was because of the great economy of having a doctor in the family, but that is not the reason. For, after all, very few people pay their doctors. They are so dignified, so impressively the ruling class that one feels it almost an insult to pay them for their condescensions. No, the match-making mamma appreciates the advantage of the prestige—and the title. In a country where titles are none too numerous the doctor enjoys a peculiar distinction above the clotted masses—second only to something in the navy.

The darling doctor is permitted a long series of prerogatives that no other profession can claim. He may see us in all hours and under all circumstances, hold our hands, gaze into our eyes, nay, into our very in'ards, listen to the beating of our fluttering hearts at close quarters, and see more pretty nightgowns in the course of a day than an ordinary man could see in a lifetime—and all without the slightest aspersion on his character. He is above suspicion. One thing that always commands my slavish admiration of doctors is the magnificent way in which they will refute their own doctrines, revoke their own edicts, five minutes after they have been given authentically to the world. Only an all-powerful despot would dare do that. For instance, a short while ago we must not drink water with our meals, it diluted the digestive saliva, etc. Now we can drink water by the quart at any old time. Then whole wheat bread was essential to health—white bread lacked nutrition and caused dyspepsia and goodness knows what else. Now the United States army, the navy, and likewise the British army and navy, are to be fed on white bread exclusively, as it has just been discovered that all the nutriment is concentrated in white bread, that the whole wheat gives the digestion too much useless work!

Then, again, the superior way in which they will agree to disagree—"my profession, right or wrong." One doctor will send a consumptive to a desperately cold climate in a high altitude and freeze the frisky T.B.'s (tuberculosis bacilli) out of the poor wretch. Another will send him to an 'ot-az-'ell climate out on the desert and grill 'em out of him, while yet another will send him to the sea to salt 'em down.

We had an instance of it in the recent tuberculosis-test ordinance for cows. Half the doctors were for it and half against it—but they are all solid against osteopathy.

Then there is the recent anesthetic ultimatum. After carefully chloroforming us, ethering us, cocaining us for years, the American Medical Federation now sitting at Atlantic City hurls forth the information that these things are deadly and criminal. That the only safe and respectable anesthetic is nitrous oxide—and before another medical convention takes place that, too, will probably have lost its character.

But they can get away with it, these darling doctors. What though Capt. Amundsen does say that his South Pole expedition carried no doctor along and that they all enjoyed buoyant health. Well, all we have to say to that is, it is not our intention to join any expeditions of Amundsen's. Personally, we find a little illness very interesting—life would be dreary, indeed, if it held no jolly complaints, no festive fevers, no coy chills, no frolicsome nerves, no neuralgia, no sick stomachs.

No, the darling doctor is indispensable. Apart from anything else, he has such a cultured bearing, such an impressive presence, such an air of royal condescension. With consummate dignity he will charge you a most flatteringly fabulous sum per visit (for his charges, you must remember, are largely based upon your degrees of affluence—and it's just lovely to be mistaken for a millionaire) or he will dispense patronage like a veritable king and place you under very complete obligation by attending you for nothing.

A word, therefore, to the wise. Nothing, positively nothing, can so well establish your social prestige as the fact that you promptly and ungrudgingly pay an exorbitant doctor's bill. You show the world that you regard no fee too high for the proper care of your person, that no doctor can be too well rewarded for restoring such as you to health. And the world accepts us at our own valuation.

SENORITAS GIVEN DAYS OF GRACE.

COURT SEEKS TO AVOID UNDUE PREJUDICE FOR MAGONS.

Contempt Proceedings Against Girls to Be Heard When Present Neutrality Case Is Finished. Financial Higher-ups Suggested. Much of Testimony for Defense.

Affidavits against Lucille Norman, Dolores Figueroa and Helen Luvano, charged with contempt of court in making a verbal assault on Peter Mar[illegible], the Arizona cow-puncher who is a witness in the Magon neutrality case, were presented to Judge Wellborn of the United States District Court yesterday.

After a full consideration of the matter, the court concluded to hold the proposed prosecution of the young women in abeyance until after the case pending, so as not to prejudice the defendants before the public.

The part played by Antonio de P. Araujo, the ex-convict, who was to be Secretary of War in the Magon republic to be established in Lower California, is prominent in the testimony taken. Araujo came to Los Angeles within two weeks after his release from the Federal prison at Leavenworth and was one of the close advisers of the Magon outfit. He disappeared from this city about ten days before the seizure of El Regeneración plant at No. 519½ East Fourth street, June 14, 1911, and went north. He was traced as far as Portland, Or., and is supposed to be still in that vicinity, or in the City of Mexico.

It is expected that the testimony in the Magon case will be about completed by the close of the week. A number of the government witnesses have been dismissed and allowed to go, sufficient testimony, in the opinion of Asst. U. S. Dist.-Atty. [illegible], to prove the guilt of the defendants has been given and it will not be necessary to fortify that information with confirmatory testimony.

The defense asserts that more than [illegible] witnesses have been summoned, but it is not believed that one-half will be placed on the stand. By stipulation, the evidence given by Ricardo Flores Magon on the occasion of the trial of Gen. C. Rhys Pryce and others will be used in the present case, and it will only be necessary to read the transcript.

A significant stipulation has already been made on the part of the Magons admitting as evidence a copy of a manifesto issued by the Junta on Fourth street to Pedro Solis, who was indicted with the Magons, but has not been seen since their arrest. The communication was delivered in person by Ricardo Flores Magon and the document bears the signature of Magon and Librado Rivera, the latter as Secretary of State of the proposed republic.

When the Magons were arrested a year ago there was considerable talk about the "higher ups" who were supposed to have contributed to financing the revolution, but nothing has since developed along that line. It is said that persons whose names have not appeared in connection with the case gave money to the organization.

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Members of the City Council stated yesterday that they will ask for an accounting of the expenditure of funds by the original Los Angeles Aqueduct Investigating Commission.

The Board of Public Works was notified yesterday that the War Department has been asked by the Outer Harbor Dock and Wharf Company for permission to extend and maintain its bulkhead for a distance of 1250 feet.

The fate of 15-year-old Frank Yanes, who killed his father near Compton last April, is in the hands of the jury, which received its charges from the court yesterday.

At the City Hall.

ASKS HUBBARD TO RESIGN.

MAYOR WANTS PUBLIC WORKS HEAD TO QUIT.

Chief Executive Says "Interests of Public" Demand Change, While His Reappointee Considers that the Request Is Unjust—Accepted Place Only at Urging.

Mayor Alexander yesterday forenoon asked for the resignation of A. A. Hubbard, president of the Board of Public Works. The request was made personally, the Mayor visiting the office of the board and stating to Hubbard that he felt it his duty to ask for the resignation, as he believed Hubbard was not active enough in the duties of the board.

Hubbard asked that the Mayor place his request in writing, but this was refused. Hubbard stated yesterday that he does not expect to act upon the Mayor's request until tomorrow, as he wants to confer with friends.

"I did not want the office when I was first appointed, seven years ago," said Hubbard. "It will be remembered that I took the position at the request of representative bodies of this city, in order to break an existing condition that prevented any progress in the business of this office. When the Mayor asked me if I would accept a reappointment, I stated that I was not anxious for the place and would only accept it if this were his desire. Previous to that, however, I had received a communication signed by a large number of the most representative business men and concerns of this city, asking me to consider a reappointment.

"The particular reason I had in accepting a reappointment on this board was that the Los Angeles aqueduct work had been started while I was a member, and naturally I had a pride in helping to carry this to its completion. I will say that I expected to resign as soon as the aqueduct work was completed."

Hubbard said that he does not consider it just to be asked to resign while an investigation of the board is in progress.

The Mayor, before leaving his office yesterday noon, stated that he knows he will be criticised for asking for Hubbard's resignation while an investigation is in progress, but that he has determined that in the interests of the public a change should be made as speedily as possible.

"It is a well-known fact," said the Mayor, "that the Board of Public Works is weeks behind with its work, and that Commissioner Humphreys cannot do it all. I am to blame that I have not taken this step before. I know that I will be criticised for asking for Hubbard's removal at this time, but I believe it is for the best interests of the city."

The Mayor stated that on Tuesday he will ask the City Council to provide for a reorganization of the Harbor Advisory Board, whereby the Board of Public Works, the Harbor Commission and the Mayor shall constitute this body.

"I want to be in a position where I will know exactly what arises on points of difference in matters that will come before this board," said the Mayor, "and I am confident that the Council will adopt the plan which I suggest for reorganizing this board."

Last Tuesday the Mayor asked the Board of Public Works to prepare and submit to him at the earliest possible date, a complete report on the extent and character of the work accomplished at the harbor and of the work projected and in immediate contemplation, explaining the reasons of delay, street improvements in progress etc. The board has had its clerical force engaged on this work for several days and expect to have this ready for presentation to the Mayor within a very few days, in order to assist him in obtaining material for his investigation of the Board of Public Works. Members of the board feel that no member of that body should be removed until this investigation has been completed.

The report was current about the City Hall yesterday that the Mayor may ask C. E. Richards, now a member of the Harbor Commission to succeed Hubbard. It is understood Richards has said he would serve on any board the Mayor might desire.

Richards is a member of the Richards-Neustadt Construction Company. Since his appointment on the Harbor Commission he has given considerable time to the work of that office. A good salary is attached to the office to be vacated by Hubbard.

The rumor was also current that the Mayor would ask the other members of the Harbor Commission to resign, but he gave no indication of this, saying that with the organization of the Advisory Board, so as to include the Harbor Commission, the Board of Public Works and himself, he believed the way will be open for harmony.

Protests Against Feed.

N. W. Zimmer, superintendent of the Los Angeles Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has returned from a trip up the aqueduct and yesterday sent to the Board of Public Works a statement that at Del Sur, one of the aqueduct camps, he found hay used that was unfit for feed, it being about 90 per cent foxtail, and that complaints were made to him from drivers about the quality and quantity of grain allowed the animals.

Want to Be Heard.

The Rose Hill Improvement Association has sent to the City Council a protest against that body granting to the Pacific Electric Company, a franchise for crossing Mission street and other streets until the association has had an opportunity to present matters that have a bearing on this subject. The proposed franchise will include the 5-cent fare provisions to Schuetzen Park.

At the Courthouse.

BOY'S FATE IN JURY'S HANDS.

YOUNG PATRICIDE WILL HEAR VERDICT TOMORROW.

Prosecution Asks that He Be Found Guilty of First-Degree Murder — Moving-Picture Testimony Ruled Out as Immaterial. Brother Awaits Trial.

The fate of 15-year-old Frank Yanes, on trial in Department Eight for the killing of his father, George Yanes, near Compton on the afternoon of April 1, last, is in the hands of the jury. After the charges by Judge Wilbur yesterday, the court instructed the jury to report tomorrow in the new courtroom on the eighth floor of the Hall of Records.

Deputy District Attorney McCartney, who conducted the prosecution, asked the jury, under the evidence, to bring in a verdict of murder in the first degree. He declared the shooting of Yanes was cold-blooded and premeditated. He said that Frank who held the gun, laid in wait for his father, and according to his own testimony was only twenty feet distant when he pulled the trigger.

Benson and Perkins, who defended Frank, endeavored to show that the shooting was accidental, that it was only a bluff and that Frank never meant to fire the gun. The boy was abnormal and not responsible for the deed, they declared. He had been inflamed by scenes depicted at a moving picture theater, and on the afternoon the shooting occurred, he was demonstrating one of those scenes, according to the defense.

This was contradicted by J. R. Commock, general manager of the General Film Exchange, which furnished the films for the theater Frank is alleged to have attended. On April 1., Commock, testified, no films were furnished showing border life or deeds of violence. This testimony was ruled out by Judge Wilbur, as immaterial.

Roy, the 13-year-old brother of Frank, is in the County Jail, awaiting trial as an accessory to the shooting.

JURIES' GOOD WORK.

CAREFUL SELECTION SHOWN.

The care with which juries trying felony cases are selected in the Superior Court is exemplified in the results obtained by striking an average of 154 cases tried, covering a period of three years. The figures were compiled by Judge McCormick for statistical purposes and show 59 per cent. convictions; 29 per cent. acquittals and 11 per cent. discharged.

This is considered a remarkable showing, demonstrating how thoroughly the cases are prepared in the District Attorney's office, and ably presented to the juries, and the clearness of the criminal judges in their instructions.

On the verdict depends the life and liberty of the prisoner. A competent jury listens attentively and judiciously, is not swayed by prejudice or sympathy, and arrives at a verdict after carefully weighing the evidence for or against the accused. In arriving at a verdict, the court's instructions in the law are potent, for if he errs the jury will err and there will be a reversal on appeal to the Appellate or the Supreme Court.

Judge McCormick has not been reversed on an appeal. The soundness of Judge Willis when he presided in Department Eleven is proverbial and, like Judge McCormick, he considered the caliber of jurymen of first importance.

The average struck is evidence of the intelligence of the juries which try these felony cases. The eleven disagreements indicated that they had weighed the evidence, had decided opinions of their own, and were not coerced by reason of business engagements, weariness, or other things, into giving up those convictions in order to be relieved from duty.

EVERYTHING IS NEW.

JUVENILE WORK EXPANDS.

The expansion of the Juvenile Court work from sixty-six hearings in 1903 to more than 100 a week for the five months of this year, makes this department one of the most interesting in the Superior Court. It has led to a steady branching out, the latest addition to the force of workers being the extension of the work through voluntary probation officers throughout the county.

Department Eight was moved yesterday afternoon to the eighth floor of the Hall of Records, Judge Wilbur selecting the southwest corner. The four courts on this floor are large, airy and equipped with modern furniture. They are considered the finest courtrooms in the West.

The new things provided for the Juvenile Court include the courtroom, Detention Home, probation office, offices for the deputy District Attorney attached to the court, quarters for the Probation Committee and the physician assigned to the court, adult department in the probation office, juvenile department of the police, advisory committee of women at Whittier, organization of the trials and hearings in court, departure in hearing all girl cases at the Juvenile Hall.

A new problem confronts the court, that of dealing with persons between 18 and 21 years of age. No civil cases will be tried in Department Eight, the work being strictly confined to hearing juvenile cases.

TAKES CASE HIGHER.

INVOLVES JEWELRY MYSTERY.

The Berlin Dye Works will take an appeal to the Supreme Court from the judgment of Judge McDaniel for $900 in favor of Mrs. Marie R. P. Copelin, who brought suit to recover the value of two diamond ear rings she alleged had gone to the laundry in her husband's trousers and had not been returned. The bill of exceptions was up before the court for settlement.

According to the testimony, Mrs. Copelin turned over to her husband her jewelry on their return from an entertainment. This was her usual custom. Copelin placed four rings and the ear rings in a piece of tissue paper, deposited the package in a small canvas bag and carefully tyin the neck, put the bag in his watch fob pocket. As further security he fastened the pocket with a safety pin. The trousers were put over the back of a chair.

The following day Mrs. Copelin gathered up the trousers among other articles and sent them to the dye works. Later she was asked over the telephone whether she had missed some jewelry. It appeared that the jewelry had been found by an employee. It further appeared that the trousers had passed through the hands of four employees, the fourth making the find. The company denied responsibility for the alleged loss. The court found, however, that it was bound by the acts of its employees and gave judgment against it.

PENS OWN WILL.

NOTED LAWYER'S ESTATE.

The holographic will of Cyrus F. McNutt, one of the best-known lawyers at the bar, who was connected with the McNamara defense and when overtaken by his last sickness, with the Darrow defense, was written December 6, 1906, making careful provisions for his family. The will was filed for probate yesterday. The estate is valued at $30,000.

With the exception of the McNutt residence, No. 1339 West Fifth street, all the property is community. All his right and title in the residence is devised to the widow, Eliza G. McNutt. She is named executrix without bonds, and is given power to sell all of the property and invest the proceeds, the income to be applied for the support of herself and her daughter, R. Eloise McNutt.

The residue of the property is bequeathed to the widow for life. At her death it goes to the children, share and share alike. McNutt desired that the home library shall be kept intact during the life of his wife, and at her death it is to be disposed of among the children, as Eloise shall determine. The heirs stated in the petition filed by Attorney Hannon, McNutt's law partner, are the widow; Eloise, the daughter; Finley, the son, and a son of John G. McNutt, deceased.

SHE'S WISER NOW.

ROMANTIC MARRIAGE PALES.

At 16, Ruby A. Duncan, No. 459 South Flower street, married Ralph A. Duncan, an electrician, without the consent of her parents. At 23, she confessed her mistake in the divorce court. Mrs. Duncan is an attractive young woman. Her sorrows have made her grave, and before Judge Willis she related two incidents of many that gave her a decree.

She said her husband left her without a word of explanation on March 16, 1911. She had been downtown shopping and on her return waited in vain for Ralph. She has seen him once since. It was at Ocean Park. Judge Willis asked if she had spoken to her husband.

"No," she replied, "there was another girl with him."

"And was that the reason why you did not speak to him?"

"Yes, I didn't want to bother with him," was the declaration.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

SUIT NOT DISMISSED. The suit of Mrs. Lighthart against her husband, Henry Lighthart, for separate maintenance will be heard before Judge Monroe next Friday, not having been dismissed, as was erroneously stated on Thursday. Mrs. Lighthart has now brought a charge of attempted poisoning against her husband, and he has been held to answer in the Superior Court. She makes the most sensational charges in this connection, and says that he repeatedly uttered threats against her and that her father came here from Michigan for the express purpose of protecting her against her husband.

GETS ONE-FIFTH. Judgment for the plaintiff in the sum of $2000 was given by a jury in the suit of Mrs. Sarah Idella Stelle against the Pacific Electric yesterday. Mrs. Stelle asked $10,000 damages for injuries received while she was alighting from a Pacific Electric car at Third and Pine streets, Long Beach, August 12, last. She alleges the car started before she could step off and that the accident was owing to the negligence of the crew. The company alleged negligence on the part of the plaintiff.

IN THE INFERIOR COURTS.

Man Collects Garbage for Hogs, is Haled Into Court—Third Offense, Receives Suspended Sentence.

"It was a case of kill our stock or let 'em starve," said Mrs. Mary Day yesterday in defense of her son, Clark Day, who had been arrested at the instance of Inspector Patrick Doyle of the Street Department, for the collecting of garbage.

"That's the same story she told twice before when they were arrested for doing the same thing," volunteered Doyle.

"A man promised to buy our hogs, and came almost every day for a week to see them," Mrs. Day told Police Judge Chambers. "Finally he changed his mind, and that left us with the stock on our hands and no money to buy feed. Then Clark collected garbage. What could I do? Let the hogs starve?"

Before the court could reply Clark made the defense that he had read in the papers that it is no longer unlawful to take garbage, from Los Angeles into an incorporated city. He said he lives in Vernon.

The court fined him $10 or ten days, but suspended sentence.

To Try Woman For Assault.

Mrs. J. D. Drake, No. 1927 South Burlington avenue, was arraigned before Judge Williams in the University Police Court yesterday on an assault complaint sworn to by J. W. Wert, No. 1720 South Los Angeles street, father of the man she shot. Her preliminary examination was set for June 17, at 10 o'clock in the morning. Bail was fixed at $1500.

Depy.-Dist.-Atty. Shannon decided yesterday morning to prosecute after he had examined a number of witnesses in his office. Prior to that he had refused a complaint to the elder Wert, the impression being then, he said, the shooting was warranted.

Changes Mind and Escapes.

"I don't want to go to jail all the time for nothing. I'm tired of pleading not guilty, getting a court trial and being found guilty. I want a jury trial."

Tobe Wilson said all that when arraigned before Police Judge Chambers yesterday on a vagrancy charge. When he found he couldn't have a jury trial until sometime in August, Wilson changed his plea to guilty and received a suspended sentence of thirty days.

Difference of Opinion.

One person may disturb the peace of another, even though the general public is not annoyed, according to a ruling yesterday by Police Judge Frederickson in the case of H. Johnson, who was arrested at the instigation of Mrs. J. Finkelstein, No. 337 Echandia street.

The complaint accused him of having made "a loud and unusual noise by tumultuous and offensive conduct, and by then and there taking hold of affiant, forcibly pushing affiant's hands behind her back, and biting and kissing affiant on the arm and neck."

Johnson secured entrance into the house, it is said, under the pretense of showing Mrs. Finkelstein a carpet cleaner. Johnson demurred to the complaint, contending it is impossible to disturb the peace of one person, that the general public or immediate neighborhood must be involved. The court overruled the demurrer and set Johnson's trial for the 22nd inst.

His Winks Offend Her.

James Davis, who lives in a barn near Seventh and South Los Angeles streets, pleaded guilty before Judge Chambers yesterday to having sat in front of Mrs. Winifred Thatcher's home, No. 524 East Eighth street, where he annoyed her by winking and nodding his head at her.

The court postponed sentence until Monday morning.

Jury Recommends Mercy.

Dr. C. W. Lawton, arrested for having turned in three false alarms and having telephoned six others on the night of May 8th, was found guilty by a jury in Judge Rose's court, and sentenced to twenty days in the City Jail. The jury, which was out more than two hours, recommended clemency, contending the physician was not in a normal condition through an excessive use of intoxicants.

Alleged Masher Arraigned.

Ed Sampson, accused by Miss Dorothy Watson of having attempted to flirt with her at Fifth and Spring streets, pleaded not guilty before Judge Chambers yesterday, and demanded a jury trial. His case was set for July 6. Bail was reduced to $50, which was given.

Demonstration Costs Money.

J. K. Erisman was found guilty yesterday of having entered a woman's room at No. 125 Temple street, while intoxicated and of having attempted to strike her. He was fined $10 or ten days. Erisman was recently released from the County Hospital, where he suffered from delirium tremens.

For Accosting Women.

Edward Gomez, arrested by Patrolman J. J. Officer, for having followed women on the street and asking them to walk with him, was fined $20 or twenty days by Police Judge Chambers yesterday.

Would Extend Bulkhead.

The Board of Public Works was informed by United States Engineer McKinstry yesterday that the Outer Harbor Dock and Wharf Company, has applied to the Secretary of War for permission to extend and maintain its bulkhead. The proposed extension is 1250 by 300 feet.

Who-o, Who, Whoo!

DOES BUSINESS TWENTY YEARS.

OWL DRUG COMPANY CELEBRATES LONG PROSPERITY.

President Miller Inaugurated the Idea of Putting Drug Stores on Mercantile Basis Instead of the Mysterious Professionalism Formerly Hedging It About.

The Owl Drug Company has just completed its twentieth year of business life on the Pacific Coast and this week will celebrate its birthday.

The concern has grown in twenty years from one store to eighteen stores—and from eight employees to more than 700. Last year this concern waited upon 6,000,000 people, and did a gross business of more than $3,000,000.

"The Owl" is the development of an idea. And the man who conceived it is still at the head of the company, and has seen in two decades the working out and full blossoming of the basic principles he was the first to apply.

The first Owl drug store was opened in San Francisco by R. E. Miller, now president of the Owl Drug Corporation. In the early days drug stores were operated upon different lines than now. The druggist considered himself a professional man—and the light of publicity was never turned on the inside workings of the business. Prescriptions were compounded in private. None of the down-to-date merchandising service now observable was offered the public. The trademark of the drug store was the colored lamps in the window. In fact, these constituted the window display in most drug stores.

Miller conceived the idea that the drug business could be operated to tremendous advantage upon the same lines that any modern mercantile business is run. His idea was to develop the modern drug store as it is known today—to put the drug business in the open, with full publicity, and to give the public the kind of service that had never been dreamed of at that time by the average druggist.

"The Owl" management claims it was the first drug store on the coast to compound prescriptions in public, to provide and train a large force of sales-people under the direction of competent sales managers, to install modern down-to-date cash systems, to provide comforts and conveniences for women.

ALASKA'S REINDEER QUEEN.

One Eskimo Woman Owns a Herd of Over Thirteen Hundred Which She Manages With Good Judgment.

[Christian Herald:] When a woman in an enlightened country makes her way to a front rank in the industrial world the fact soon becomes known and folk are eager to learn something of the conditions that brought it about and of the character of the one who accomplished it. That a woman with a brown skin should also successfully compete with the men of her race is less generally understood. Out of 260 Eskimos who own reindeer in Alaska two are women. One of these, Mary Arisarlook Andrewnk, has received the title of Reindeer Queen of Alaska.

"Queen Mary" owns a herd of 1303 deer, which she manages with judgment and intelligence. According to the usual contract made with the government she is required to train three apprentices and to give to each the customary number of deer. She has done better than this. She has trained and rewarded eight or ten apprentices and at the present time has another under her care. She long since discarded the "igloo," or native hut, half underground, in which she was born, and is now comfortably housed near Nome in a cabin of logs. She speaks seven or eight Indian languages and this has enabled her to be of considerable service as an interpreter.

"Queen Mary" has brought up a number of helpless children, and having none of her own, has not only cared for them physically, but has also give them a place in her heart. Surely, according to her light, "she hath done her part."

CHINESE VICE-CONSUL HERE.

Kee On Yang, Vice-Consul of China at San Francisco, is at present the guest of C. E. Ferguson and John B. Jeffery at the Hotel Guirnalda, Pasadena, and he will lecture before the Y.M.C.A. of that city on Wednesday evening. He is a graduate of the University of California and is a bright and interesting representative of the race. Mr. Ferguson, who has spent several years in China, says that there is no nation on earth so popular there as the American.

FROM PUBLICITY FIELD TO BUNGALOW BLISS.

Engaged in More Than Business.

Harry F. Harker and Miss Edith Newman Bahn, whose betrothal was announced yesterday.

HERE'S ONE GIRL for whom no sort of business success has any lure, when compared with domestic life. Unspoiled by flattering success in the business world, and undeterred by prospects even more brilliant, she gladly relinquishes public life for a quiet domesticity beside the young man of her choice.

On Saturday at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. W. H. Bahn, No. 222 South Marengo avenue, Alhambra, formal announcement was made of the engagement of her daughter Edith Newman Bahn, to Harry F. Harker, also of Alhambra.

Although a mere girl, Miss Bahn has for two years been at the head of the advertising department of Hamburger's, where she has made a reputation for sincerity and executive ability. She has insisted that first of all, every line of advertising must be truthful and without exaggeration. Although a born "booster," Miss Bahn's boosting is of the kind which builds for the future rather than for an ephemeral present.

Finishing her education at a very early age Miss Bahn began her business career as a stenographer in Philadelphia, and while yet a girl with her hair in two "pigtails," she took a deposition in an important law case, in the laboratory of Thomas A. Edison, being seated upon a pile of huge volumes placed by the great electrician in order that she might reach the table. After that, she was offered a better position, and finally the way opened into the advertising world. Here her genius found play and soon her "job" became a "position." Coming with her family to Califorina, she first became assistant and then advertising manager of Hamburger's.

Miss Bahn believes that business especially fits one for the care of a home, as it gives practical experience, and the running of a home upon the best lines is in itself a business.

"I believe that many times, young women in business stand in their own light because they require too many leniences," said she. "When a woman is in business, she must be strictly business-like in her attitude, leaving her drawing-room attitude at home. Working with men, shoulder to shoulder, and in a spirt of competition, I have always insisted upon hearing the fullest measure of complaint, if there were any, and would resent any lenience 'because she is a woman.' "

Expressing the highest regard for the great concern with which she is connected, and regretting to leave it, both on account of business fairness and breadth of policy, and because the friendly relations throughout the family of the big white store have become dear to her, Miss Bahn could not but show, beyond the business side of her nature, her love of home life as she talked shyly of the quaint new bungalow which has been planned and is under construction by her fiance at Second avenue and Glendon Way, Ramona Park.

Harker is at the head of the drafting department of the Los Angeles Investment Company, and has a bright future. He was first president of the Epworth League of the Alhambra M. E. Church, and is director of the Harker Mandolin Club of Alhambra.

Miss Bahn has until recently taught a Sunday-school class which had theretofore required one substitute after another. Here she found no trouble at all in managing restless boys who came to Sunday-school "just for fun." While in the East she gained a reputation in this respect, by subduing a refractory class. "It was no trick to manage the dear scamps," she said, "they simply felt neglected and unloved, and when they found some one who was really interested in them, they were gentlemen, every one of them, from the poorest and most ragged urchin to the son of the financial leader of the city."

The wedding will be on Thursday, August 29.

HOMESTEADERS' INTEREST.

Receiver of Local Land Office Likes New Borah Law—Makes Settlement Easier, Lessening Time.

The Borah law, relating to settlement of public lands under the homestead act, changing the time within which a residence may be perfected from five to three years, and allowing the entryman a vacation of five months in each of the three years, is, in the opinion of Receiver Robinson of the local land office, legislation in the true interest of homesteaders.

"There is everything to be argued in favor of the new law," said Robinson. "Three years is plenty of time to pay for the land in most cases, and it encourages settlers by giving them early title to the land they have reclaimed from the desert. Under the old law, a man could be absent from his entry for at least six months before the forfeiture clause would operate against him. This new law gives him five months in each year when it will not be necessary for him to live on the land."

Receiver Robinson is interested in a feature of the sundry civil bill pending in the House, which provides for the abolishment of his position. A telegram was received yesterday from Congressman John E. Baker, telling of the danger of the bill becoming a law. The new provision provides for the duties of the receiver being placed in the hands of a clerk in the General Land Office at Washton.

Fred Dennett, Commissioner of the General Land Office, has renewed his recommendation of two years ago, asking for the abolition of the office. He asserts it will bring about a better organization with less expense; that no business reason can be advanced for retention of the present organization of the local land office; that it originated in the era of sale when the money value of the land disposed of was the paramount consideration.

GAMUT CLUB TO GAMBOL.

Play of California's Early Days Will be Given Under Live Oaks. Ideal Setting.

The Gamut Club is planning summer gambols that, members assert, will outdo anything of the kind ever attempted in the Southwest.

Several acres in the Rancho Providencia have been secured and under grand old oaks, in vales, canyons and dells, freshened by springs and brightened with ferns, the gambols will be held. The spot selected is a mile from Oak Crest station on the Cahuenga Pass and the San Fernando Mission.

Beginning the 29th. inst., a two-day programme is to be given. Carl Bronson has written a play, "California," which depicts the life and work of Father Junipero Serra along El Camino Real. This will be given on a great stage erected under the live oaks. Automobile headlights and the stars above will be the stage footlights by night. There will be about forty persons in the cast.

In addition there will be campfires, barbecued meats, refreshments of other kinds, and sports.

F. W. Blanchard, president of the club, and C. B. McCollum are active in the work of promoting the gambols.

The following committees have been appointed to help make the gambols a success: Arrangement, Harry R. Callender; Commissary, P. B. Dougherty; Publicity, Ben F. Field; Field Sports, W. E. Wing; Field Hospital and Red Cross, Dr. G. W. Tape; Automobile, C. E. Gilhousen; stage manager, Edgar Temple; musical director, Joseph Dupuy; properties, Charles W. Hatch; organists, Arthur Alexander, Charles Demorest and William Edson Strobridge.

CLEARS THE LAST DOUBT.

Positive Indentification Made of Belongings of Woman Slain in Arlington-street Bungalow.

Miss Marie Quinn of Chicago and Norfolk, Va., the victim in the Arlington-street bungalow killing mystery, was yesterday further positively identified as the woman who posed in this city in April and May as Mrs. C. C. Dillon. It was made through two trunks, a suit case, used by Dillon and herself when they came here from the north; and jewelry she wore here. The latter consisted of a gold ring, watch, bracelet and a locket containing a small but perfect likeness of Dillon.

The jewelry was positively identified by Mrs. Glory N. Baldwin, a milliner at Hamburger's, where Miss Quinn bought a hat; and by Mrs. Thelma Najoks and Miss Inez Thompson, sisters, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson, No. 940 South Hope street, where Dillon and the woman lived until the time of the murder. The trunks were identified by railroad employees, and the suit case by landlords and others who came in contact with the couple.

This jewelry was sent to [illegible] Flammer by the Chicago police. When Dillon returned to Chicago after killing the Quinn woman, he gave the jewelry to his wife, but destroyed all the clothing of his victim. He was killed by a train soon afterward.

GOOD WOMAN CALLED HOME.

Mrs. Curtis of This City, Member of Famous Holman Family of Indiana, Dies at Great Age.

Mrs. Lucy M. Curtis, who died in this city on Friday, was a pioneer of the State and a member of a distinguished family. She was a daughter of the late Jesse L. Holman of Indiana, who was for many years a judge of the Supreme Court of that State, and United States District Judge under Andrew Jackson; she was also a sister of the famous William S. Holman, Congressman from Indiana for more than thirty years.

Mrs. Curtis passed her 93rd birthday anniversary on May 4, last. She was intellectually bright to the end of her life. She came across the desert in the old emigrant days, with her husband, Rev. I. C. Curtis, before there were any railroads, accompanied by her family, and had lived here ever since. She was born near Aurora, Ind., and married Rev. I. C. Curtis, a Baptist minister, prominent in Iowa, and later in California, and who died some years ago.

The deceased was an exceptional woman in many ways, and during her long, useful and beautiful life was a consistent Christian and attended divine worship to the last. She had a strong, womanly character; was an inveterate reader, and fond of all sorts of literature, including history, biography and the better class of poetry, and a keen sense of humor added to the delight of social intercourse with her. Her many engaging qualities of heart and mind endeared her to a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Curtis was the mother of ten children, seven of whom are living, together with sixteen grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren. The funeral service will be conducted at the residence, No. 141 West Seventeenth street, tomorrow morning.

FRENCH TOURISTS HERE.

Conductor of Party Declares Southern California Will Be Made a Chief Objective Point.

"This is the first tour we have conducted to Los Angeles and other Pacific Coast cities," said Charles Pin, manager of the Lubin Tours Company of Paris, yesterday. He is at the Angelus.

"It will not be the last one and I believe that it will be the forerunner of many and larger bodies of tourists and travelers from France coming here.

"Our party consists of eight prominent Frenchmen. We are making a tour of the globe by way of Java, Indo-China, China, Japan, the Hawaiian Islands and back through the States to New York and home.

"I think that with the completion of the Panama Canal we will conduct tours each season through the West Indies and the canal and up to Los Angeles. It will give us an opportunity to encircle the globe by water without entering any dangerous seas.

"We have greatly enjoyed our stay here, have seen scenery which compares with the best that the south of Europe can show. We will surely make Southern California one of our principal objective points for our tours."

The party went to San Pedro yesterday as the guests of local Frenchmen and inspected the harbor. In the party are three wealthy manufacturers, V. Lorentz, P. Dambricourt, and E. Agaehe of Lyons, France. They were intensely interested in the improvement of the harbor.

ARGUES WITH BOOTJACK.

And Victim Goes to Receiving Hospital for Treatment, While Assailant Is Locked in Jail.

Vincent Longo, a barber, was treated at the Receiving Hospital, and S. M. Jackson, a bootblack, was placed behind the bars at the Central Police Station yesterday as the result of an argument over a sign.

They are employed at No. 651 South Spring street. Jackson wanted to post a sign calling attention to his stand. Longo objected because it partially hid his red, white and blue barber pole. There were words, when Jackson, it is alleged, struck Longo on the head with a bootjack, lacerating the scalp.

Edward Ward, No. 1524 East Fourth street, 9 years old, was taken to the hospital with the end of a finger on his right hand partially torn off. He said he was struck by a rock thrown by a playmate.

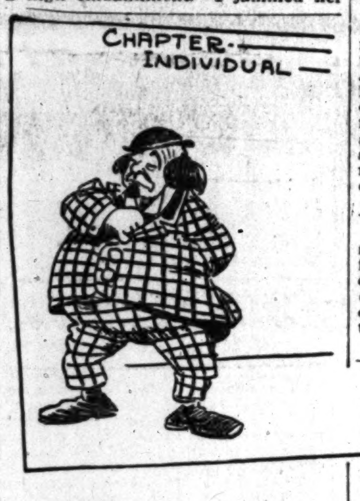
INCOMING COMEDIAN SENDS NEWSY LETTER.

Tale of the Vicious Chalmers that Nearly Gave Dill a New Partner Last Tuesday Night—How "The Girl in the Train" Came to Clarencius and Maximilian.

BY C. WILLIAM KOLB.

Fresno, Thursday, June 6; 11:30 p.m.—Tonight everyone is saying: "Only two more days to Los Angeles!" This is going through the company like a sort of battle-cry, and perhaps the Angel town, with its westerly breeze every afternoon, and its cool nights, won't be a relief after one-night stands with the thermometer fiddling around the 104 mark!

On Tuesday night I was sure that there would be a new comedian in the role of Judge Von Trump, when our company put its greeting across the foots in the Hamburger Majestic. After the show I left Stockton in my supposedly trusty Chalmers, and, in the middle of the night, was sliding along at a cool and comfortable thirty-five an hour, when I mistook a stiff and very offensive railroad track for a macadamized public highway. It was on a sharp turn. I lived through the turn, only to aviate over a high pile of stones, shave the side off a post and dive straight for the edges of a high embankment. I jammed her as hard as I could, but for at least two and three-fifths seconds I distinctly heard them all saying: "Doesn't he look natural!" Then I found that I was alive, and that the car was motionless. I got out, and saw that the front wheels had actually gone over. In the dark, I couldn't see the bottom, but it was at least forty feet away. An inventory of liabilities checked up a tire torn to pieces and a broken spring. Temporary repairs allowed me to proceed slowly to Sacramento, where I arrived not much before dawn, in fairly good shape. Last night, after the show, I ran down the valley to Fresno in six hours.



San Francisco was very kind to us. On the night of our opening we turned away more than 5000 people, and they shot posies at us until not only the stage, but most of the scenery was hidden in flowers, and the human beings who wished to show themselves, had to climb up on the furniture to get in sight.

The four weeks of "The Girl in the Train," in San Francisco, brought us a business of $32,000, while the ten weeks of our stay found nearly $63,000 in the box-office.

Though I'm not given to bragging about my own shows—preferring to let the people who put up act as an impartial jury—I think Los Angeles is going to like our opening piece.

"The Politicians," which was the biggest success we have ever had in Los Angeles, is practically a brand-new show, in people, costumes and scenery. The book has been re-written by Aaron Hoffman, the author, and the suffragette theme has been introduced as a strong leading-motive.

As I looked out into the crowded theater, during our recent Fairtown season, I thought often of our first visit to the city.

We had been having a sort of serio-comic existence around the East and through the Middle West—before meals, serious; after meals, comic. We worked for a team salary of $50 a week, mostly in the summer parks with ten per cent. out of that salary as commission to the booking-agent.

Speaking of the early days—I remember that most of my comedy consisted of kicking Dill in his rubber stomach.

Dill complained once: "Gee, I got $14 driving a laundry wagon, and now that I get $22.50 for being an artist, I have to spend $10 for doctor's repairs and liniment. Loss each week from being a great actor, $1.50."

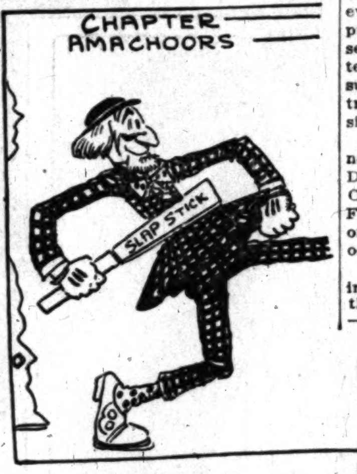
As time went on, though, my foot improved its technique, and, in the space of a few months, I was able to kick full force without dislocating his appendix more than once in every nine times.

It is ten years since we first appeared in Frisco in, "Fiddle Dee Dee," and last week Max met a German, formerly one of our most enthusiastic attendants, who now runs a grill in Oakland.

The old fellow danced around like an animated wienerwurst. "Mr. Dill," said he, "it sure is goot to see you undt Mr. Kolb again togedder I vonce go effery night to see Fiddle Dee Dee, undt if you put him on again I bring my daughter—she is now a young lady, undt she has nefer seen it!"

When Max told me that, I got a mirror and looked for the white hair.

But we're not the old fellows that story makes us seem. Nations rise and fall in ten years—to say nothing of little girls jumping up into tall and sedate young ladies. We were only kids when we came tremblingly into San Francisco—kids who had been three years in the business.



Our new vehicle, "The Girl in the Train," is quite different from the Kolb & Dill productions that the people have been used to, but nevertheless it affords us our greatest opportunities so far for real and legitimate comedy work.

"The Girl in the Train," is in its fourth season in Europe. It was brought to the United States by C. B. Dillingham, the book was rewritten by Harry B. Smith, and the principal role was played by Claude Gillingwater,, who will be recalled by Los Angeles audiences from several tours with Mrs. Leslie Carter's company, and from his fairly regular summer appearances over the Orpheum circuit.

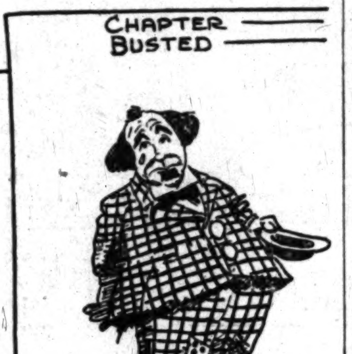
Someway, the part didn't fit Gillingwater, and he was withdrawn from the cast and the role was entrusted to Frank Daniels. Evidently Dillingham wished to go from one extreme to the other, for one can't imagine a wilder range in comedians than Daniels and Gillingwater.

Later, Dillingham asked me to take the part, but as the production was not to be sent on the road until September, and it was offered to me in June, I didn't care to be idle so long. It costs a lot of money to do nothing, especially in the show business, where folks never figure that the occasionally ample salaries of actors have to stretch over and average up a great many workless weeks in the course of a year.

I deemed the episode ended, but it wasn't.

Dillingham's representative and associate, Connor, who is a big factor in the exploitation of American musical comedy stars, said to me: "Why don't you go to Dillingham with an offer for the rights to the piece, and take it over yourself?"

The idea semed good, and I completed arrangements to annex, "The Girl," myself.



I got southern time, and played in it with success until I was taken ill. Then I got out of the train that held the girl and paid a long visit to a surgeon, who cut open the place where my brains ought to be, and charged me a fine price for so doing—meanwhile keeping me out of work for months.

The old story of the ill wind, though—during the long weeks of my convalescence, while I was wondering whether I would prefer to sell papers or shine shoes, when I got back to active life mutual friends of Max and myself got busy, and—

Well, here we are again. That's all. Except that we have no artistic divorce in sight, and hope not to have.

He will go as far as Seattle, with various stops on the way.

The Week.

COMEBACK OF KOLB AND DILL.

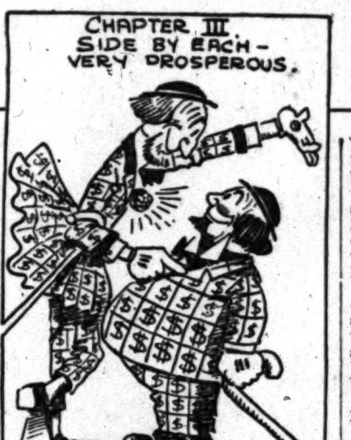
COMEDIANS RETURNING TO THE HAMBURGER MAJESTIC.

Continuances of "His Father's House," "Little Johnny Jones," "Peg o' My Heart" and Mission Play—Vaudeville at the Orpheum, Empress and Pantages.

The famous German comedians, Kolb and Dill, unquestionably the most popular funmakers that have ever delighted the local theater-going public, will, after an absence of three seasons, return to the Majestic Theater tonight, commencing a limited summer engagement in their recent tremendous success, the Viennese musical comedy, "The Girl in the Train."

"The Girl in the Train" is entirely new to local audiences. Kolb and Dill recently made the first Pacific Coast production of the play in San Francisco, where it made the walls of the Savoy Theater bulge with melody and mirth for five solid weeks.

"The Girl in the Train" comes originally from Vienna, the birthplace of the most notable musical plays the stage has known. It is the work of Victor Leon, the librettist of "The Merry Widow," and Leo Fall, composer of "The Dollar Princess," and others of this caliber. Harry B. Smith made the adaption for the American stage, while Kolb and Dill themselves had added much of their own particular brand of humor to the piece.



CHAPTER III.
SIDE BY EACH—
VERY PROSPEROUS.

It is brimful of comedy that causes laughter of a most riotous sort, while the music, an excellent specimen of the advanced art of Leo Fall, possesses a swing, a dash and a charm that is distinctly Viennese.

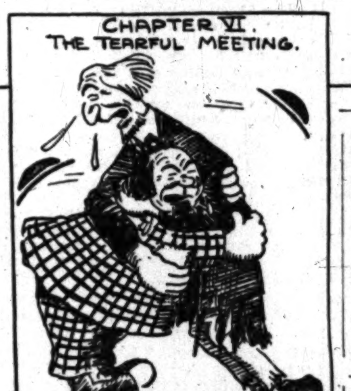
In support of Kolb and Dill will be found Florence Gear, prima donna; Olga Steck, already a local favorite, who returns after eastern successes; Edwin Wilson, William H. White, Walter Pascnal, Bessie Franklin, Nell E. Strong, Maxie McDonald, Henry Vincent, Otto Schrader and others well known to the musical comedy world and a big beauty chorus of thirty girls of a Weber and Fields type.

-o-

Belasco.

The "play with the big punch"—that's the way Witter Bynner's new play "His Father's House," has been so aptly described—will commence its second week at the Belasco Theater tomorrow night. The unqualified success of the first presentation of the piece made a second week a foregone conclusion. That the Belasco audiences have found Mr. Bynner's new play very much to their liking has been proved by the large audiences that have applauded the fine acting of Lewis S. Stone, Muriel Starr, Harry Mestayer, Robert Ober and the others of the Belasco organization who contribute so materially to the success of "His Father's House."

In making over the story, "The Road to Damascus," for purposes of the stage, Mr. Bynner has done his work exceedingly well. He has exhibited a master-hand in the upbuilding of his various situations, his element of suspense is sustained until the right moment, and in the smashing big last act Mr. Bynner has supplied a scene of terrific tenseness and thrill.



CHAPTER VI.
THE TEARFUL MEETING.

-o-

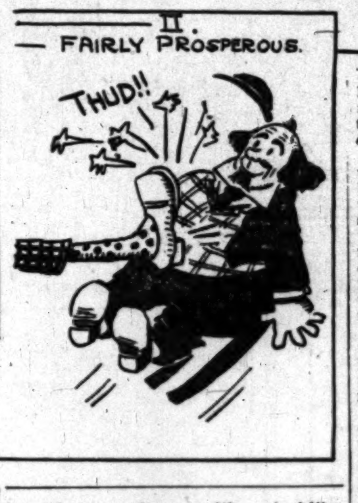
Fischer's Lyceum.

Another week of "Little Johnny Jones" is what "Pop" Fischer announces for his present big success at Fischer's Lyceum—its second week, beginning with the matinee today. No one who has seen the magnificent production of this Cohan hit ever guessed anything else. It would, in fact, be a shame to cut it short of a fortnight, for hundreds are loyal to this Cohan brand of entertainment, and this is their first adequate taste of it in many years.

Such a production as is given "Johnny" is impossible for a traveling company, and stock offers no such chance as "Pop" possesses, with the wealth of costumery, scenic ability and musical skill, embraced in his organization. It gives way a week hence to another Cohan masterpiece of merriment, "The Man Who Owns Broadway."

But in the meanwhile, there is still opportunity to see May Boley as Goldie and the Earl, and Bob Lett as the unknown; to mark Reece Gardner as Johnny and Jane Urban as Florabelle Fly; to get Herbert Cawthorne in his great Irish make-up, and Madison Smith as the gambler, Anstey; to delight in Laura Oakley, Lon Chaney and Charles Dudley, and the rest. In fact, the cast of this show is a masterpiece, and the entire company is at its very best.

The showing made by the chorus, and especially the ponies, under Harry James and Lon Chaney's skillful training, is wonderful, the numbers being given with clocklike beauty and regularity.



II.
—FAIRLY PROSPEROUS.
THUD!!

The show abounds in clever lines and song hits, Bob Lett's "Roll Me a Pill" being a classic, while everyone enjoys "Give My Regards to Broadway," "Goodbye, Flo," and "'Op in Me 'ansom.

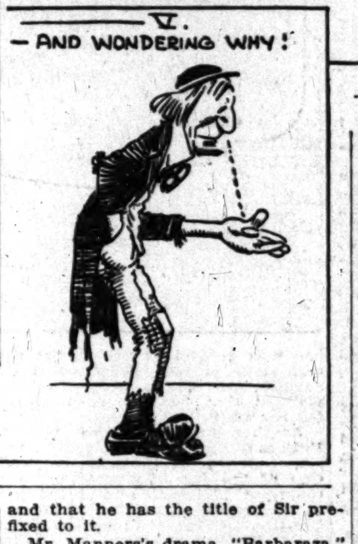
All in all, it is a worthy successor of "Tillie," and has held the crowds at Fischer's since its inception. There will be the usual matinees Sunday and Saturday and a bargain matinee Wednesday, of course. "The Man Who Owns Broadway" follows.

-o-

Burbank.

Laurette Taylor and the Burbank Stock Company's performance of Hartley Manners's comedy, "Peg o' My Heart" is one of the really notable successes of the year, and an eloquent evidence of its popularity is found in the announcement that the play will commence its third week at the Burbank Theater this afternoon.

"Peg o' My Heart" has endeared itself to everybody who has been fortunate enough to see Miss Taylor's remarkably fine portrayal of the central figure in the Manners comedy. No more alluring miss ever has been seen in a play; she is bewitching, captivating, loyal to her father and her pup, Michael, she's a warm-blooded, warm-hearted Irish girl who has been brought up in poverty in New York, is transplanted among luxuries and aristocratic surroundings in an English country house—and she still prefers her earlier penurious existence in Gotham with her father, to all the ease and comfort she finds in England, until the little Dan Cupid shoots one of his love-dipped arrows so straight that pretty little Peg forgets all about her father, all about her little dog Michael, all about everything in the world except the manly young English gentleman whom she calls Jerry, until she finds that his is Gerald and that he has the title of Sir prefixed to it.

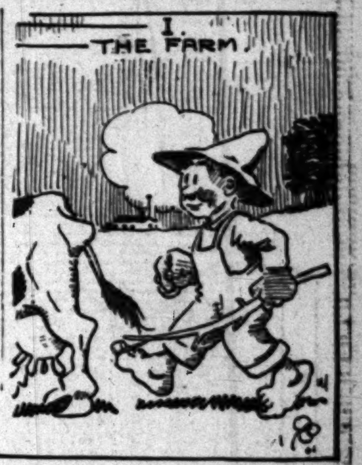


Mr. Manners's drama, "Barbaraza." is scheduled to follow "Peg o' My Heart," and is now in active rehearsal on the Burbank stage under the personal direction of the author and promises to score a success of much the same proportions that has come to Miss Taylor in "Peg o' My Heart."

-o-

Mission Play.

John Steven McGroarty's pageant drama of Southern California's early history, "The Mission Play," will commence its seventh week in its own theater at San Gabriel tomorrow afternoon, Monday, June 10.



This is a record which, under conditions, anywhere near similar, never has been approached, either here or elsewhere. The long run of this play, in spite not only of its great distance from the center of town, but as well in the face of urgent financial demands from other cities, bespeaks a very general interest in its story and subject matter, surpassing the theatrical interest to any play or star whatsoever.

In the words of a foremost California educator: "The 'Mission Play' is no longer an experiment in pageantry; it is an established California institution."

Those who have been watchng the career of the piece are now deeply interested in its fate this summer.

Arrangements were made for its removal to San Diego more than three weeks ago, to be followed by a session at Santa Barbara, after which it was presupposed that the entire production would be seen in the magnificent confines of the Greek Theater at Berkeley, per request of half a dozen prominent San Francisco men.

Now the San Diego time has been wiped off the map, and must be entirely rearranged if that trip is taken, while the same statement applies with equal force to Santa Barbara, and the northern promoters consider that the Golden Gate country has been ignominiously slighted. Motion-picture men, who had hoped to see the end of the running of the piece as an actual drama long before this, are also biting their thumbs in chagrin. And the past week—the sixth—was the largest in receipts so far, not even excepting the opening week. Lillian Burkhart and Ben Horning still remain at the head of the impressively big production.

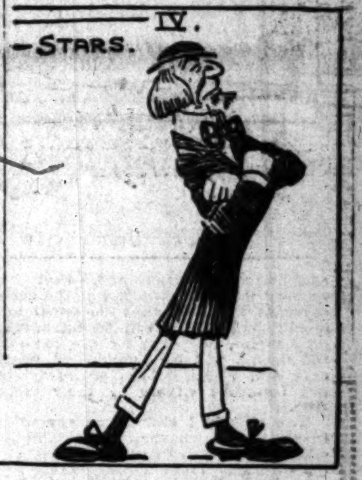
Orpheum.

Two star headliners, each of the very best, will top the Orpheum bill in the week opening matinee tomorrow—Theodore Roberts, who, with a fine company, comes to present "The Sheriff of Shasta," a highly dramatic playlet, and Ray Cox, who has deserted musical comedy to give of her best to vaudeville in the way of really good comic songs.



With two other fine acts and the four sterling holdovers, the coming bill promises to be a record-breaker.

Mr. Roberts is recognized as one of the truest and best of the legitimate stars. He is noted as the creator of the famed Canby in the original "Arizona," and he has since then added a long list of equally fine roles to his repertoire. In his present vehicle he has won unstinted praise; based on Bret Harte's "Sue" it naturally carries the western flavor, highly seasoned, and in its interpretation Mr. Roberts is at his best. He has a fine supporting company, which includes Florence Smythe, long a favorite stock actress here. The scenic investiture for the act is great, and in every way it will be found a treat.

Miss Cox has "a way with her" that gives individuality to her every effort. She is noted for writing her own songs, which are all exclusive, and one, her feminine version of a baseball game, is little less than a classic. She also has a new one, an aeroplane song, which takes her out over the audience in a fashion to make everyone sit up and take notice.

The Six Kirksmith sisters, musicians all, are really sisters, who have developed a dainty and delightful musical act, embracing both instrumental and vocal numbers. Their ensemble playing is especially notable and able, and they will be found expert in every detail.

Maxine Brothers are new style acrobats, and Bobby, their canine clown, is not the least of their attractions.

Mlle. Fregoleska, the Roumanian nightingale, will remain another week; so will "Dinklespiel's Christmas," the fine Hobart sketch with Bernard Reinold and company; the four Holloways, and Stuart Barnes, with his droll humor. The music of the usual superlative Frankenstein quality and the motion views of the day's news will complete the bill.

-o-

Pantages.

"Cinderella," a condensed version of the fairy tale of the little glass slipper, will be given an elaborate production at Pantages this week. The story is staged as a musical extravaganza, which means that all the principal roles will be presented by pretty girls, regardless of the historical sex of the characters impersonated; that they will sing and dance on every pretext, and often without any, that the scenery will be as fanciful as the artist cares to make it, that electrical and mechanical effects will be introduced ad libitum, and that all the rules of the drama will be disregarded wherever and whenever the producer can get beautiful effects by their violation.

The principal characters appearing in the Pantages version of "Cinderella" are: Ruth Bigelow, formerly of the original "Three Twins," as Cinderella; Ruth Johnson and Frances Turner, as the two stepsisters; Gypsy Wilson, the plotting valet Dandini; Irene Langford, as Prince Charming, and Gladys Baguley, as the fairy godmother.

The other acts are of notable quality, and the combination is one that should make the week one to be remembered by vaudeville patrons.

Fiscarry, hat and coin manipulator, is considered by the vaudeville experts to be a leader in his class. Walton and Brandt have a baseball travesty that has been described as "a joyful scream," and a line of conversational comedy said to fully merit the prominence given them in the announcements. Louise Gerald and company make a specialty of the tambos, and are said to keep as many as thirty of these instruments tinkling harmoniously at one time. Field and Matthews are to be seen in a comedy entitled "Lucy," which neither points a moral nor adorns a tale, but is said to be right along with the laughter stuff.

The added attraction for the week will be Nadje, "The Perfect Woman." Nadje does more than display her perfect contours, having an act that presents many novel features, besides Nadje's perfect ones.

This week's Animated Weekly will contain interesting news pictures from every quarter of the globe. This will be a regular feature of the Pantages show, appearing there in advance of its regular release.

Empress.

With the Delmar Poster Girls, a musical comedy de luxe, the Wonderful Willard and Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Voelker as the three features, Sullivan and Considine will tomorrow afternoon offer an entirely new eight-act vaudeville bill at the Empress Theater, that is at once attractive and inviting.

The Delmar Poster Girls is an organization of ten recent recruits from the musical comedy stage, headed by Eddie Harris and Estey Weir, who, during a period of twenty-five minutes offer a number of ensemble numbers, individual numbers, clever dances, an abundance of fun and, in fact, almost everything to be found in a three-act musical comedy of the present day.

The Wonder Willard possesses the marvelous faculty of being able to actually grow before an audience. At his will he may make his arm, his leg or, in fact, his whole body, grow from five to six inches, or in turn shrink back to his normal size. This he does, much to the surprise of the audience, while delivering a monologue, which, in itself, would win him success in vaudeville.

One of the most artistic musical offerings that has been seen here will be that of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Voelker, entitled "Twilight in the Studio." Mr. Voelker is a violin virtuoso who has won distinct honors on the concert stage in both Europe and this country, and is the highest salaried violinist that has yet been secured for the vaudeville stage.

Another musical feature will be Holmes and Riley, the splendid vocalists, well known to local audiences. One of the fun hits promises to be the team of Roach and McCurdy in their original skit "The Pruneville Cut-Ups." Others will be the dainty little English singing comedienne, Alma; Lawton, the juggling wizard, the news pictures and the new comedy motion pictures.

Adolphus.

Pickle Hienz, the Mustard King, is to be presented next week by Charles Alphin and his players, following the lines of genuine hits produced at the Adolphus for a number of weeks past.

Pickled Hienz, the Mustard King, can readily be placed in the same class and in many respects is a superior work, as it embraces an absolutely novel idea as well as an original plot, story and theme. There is plenty of good, clean comedy which will have the advantage of being excellently interpolated by Jules Mendel and Al Franks. Charles Alphin has furnished a charming score and there are any number of songs which will easily catch the fancy of the audience. Miss Douglas will wear one of her new, imported gowns. Walter Spencer, in a new song review, will spring some novelties that will be the talk of the town.

Tally's New Broadway.

Up-to-the-minute and progressive vaudeville, which is the new policy instituted by the "Q" Amusement Company, which has taken over the complete control of Tally's New Broadway, will reign supreme during the coming season.

Seven headline acts, besides three reels of first-run motion pictures, and the enlarged orchestra, will be the features of next week's programme. During the past week large and appreciative audiences attended the opening performances and stamped their mark of approval upon this refined and successful policy. The management sincerely hopes that the public will reap the fruits of their constant and exacting efforts.

The headline position will be shared between the well known team of Haverly and Wells, in the eccentric comedy entitled, "Mr. Piker and Miss Kidder," and LeRoy and Walters in high-class vocal and operatic selections. Other numbers on this well-arranged programme will consist of Boyce and Godfrey, comedy acrobats and barrel jumpers; Laura Martiere, a different kind of a soubrette and the special engagement of Grace Marino, in classical vocal selections.

"The Garrick Theater" which is also under the "Q" management will treat its patrons to the best first-run motion pictures besides two high-class singing specialities.

"Q" SHOWS.

The "Q's" are putting over a big one and no mistake. It is nothing less than their own private and exclusive weekly picture review of all the latest important happenings of Southern California, especially Los Angeles and vicinity. So you need not be surprised if you should step into the Garrick Theater, where these pictures will be shown, and see your own person flashed on the screen, because they are going to picture everything and everybody of importance. Each week will be shown the events of the previous week. It is to be called the "Sunset Weekly," and will be made by Mr. McClung, the well-known motion picture photographer.

O. Henry—the late Sidney Porter—seldom left the city after once having settled in New York, and there are hundreds of stories of how people tried to lure him into commuters' towns. One time he was to spend the week-end with one of the well-known magazine editors. The humorist jotted down the minute directions of the editor, who wound up with "and be sure to take the 3 o'clock train Friday afternoon, and I'll meet you at the station to drive you up home." At 10 o'clock in the morning of the appointed day, the editor in his country residence received the following telegram: "Have missed 3 o'clock train. O. Henry." Neither the editor nor the writer ever referred to the matter again.

For Teachers.

San Diego, Riverside, Ventura, Pomona, Santa Ana, Covina and Redlands are all actively interested in making the Music Teachers' Convention a success. The vice-presidents from the various cities represented evidence great interest in the programmes to be given, and the local association has doubled its membership in the last three weeks.

The Germania Mannechor have kindly offered their services, and will give the teachers some very fine numbers. It is most encouraging to see the enthusiasm among our local teachers. The general committees had an all-afternoon session the first of the week, and have their various plans all under way. Not the least attractive part of the programme will be the organ recital given at the Pasadena Presbyterian Church and followed by tea at Hotel Maryland.

Apollo Quartette.

Christ Church Organ.

The excellent new organ recently installed in the Third Church of Christ, Scientist, on Hope street, has been in use a month, and has more than fulfilled expectations in its rich tonal qualities and artistic variety.

The instrument is a three-manual electric, of forty-one speaking stops, built by the Murray M. Harris company. Although the organ has a choice of stops ranking it a superior concert medium, it is planned to use it exclusively at the church services and Wednesday night meetings.

Stanley Williams, voicer of organs from England, placed the tones of this singer of wood and metal, and this organ is the first in this vicinity to exhibit his work.

Charles H. Demorest is at the key desk of this new organ. The cost of the instrument was $13,500.

Impatience.

"Wait!" do you say? But my fairly ache for you—
Och, but the waiting is long!
Sweet, the old heart of me's break for you;
Sure, and the wish for you's more strong!
Faith, I get mad for the
the sight of you,
Ay, and the touch of your head breast,
And the feel of your hand and the kisses so light of you—
"Wait!" do you say? and the best."

"Wait" do you say? But I'm with fire for you,
Crying aloud for you nighttime day;
And my body and soul are desire for you,
Wasting me swiftly and
"Wait!" do you say? Is the you numb to me?
Where is your pity, love,
flown?
Och, but I love you; oh,
come to me!
"Wait!" do you say? But I'm ing my own!

Weariness.

Oh, the man with the weary down
And welcomes the night that is with rest.
He faces the morrow without a
For his strength is greater with test.
And he pities the man who apart,
The man who strives with a heart.

The man with the weary mind out
Where the winds of the forest and cure.
He forsakes the tumult of doubt,
To return with courage
sure.
But there's naught of pleasure or mart,
Alas, for the man with a weary

The man with the weary droop,
But his heart will call him
anew.
The man with the weary mind
stoop,
But his strength endures till is through.
But loving nature and
Despair of the man with the Santa Barbara News.

Social activities have been overshadowed during the week by commencement festivities and the Y.M.C.A. building fund campaign.

Thursday night, the commencement exercises of the Santa Barbara Normal School were followed by a banquet at the Arlington, when eighty guests sat down at a horseshoe table and exchanged felicitations and toasts. Greatest interest, however, was in the announcement made for the first time that Miss Nell F. Welles, head of the domestic science department of the Normal, and one of the most popular teachers in the school, is to apply her domestic talents to actual home building as the wife of Frank Parr, a prosperous lumberman of Des Moines, Iowa. The wedding will be held within a few weeks, the intervening time being passed by the bride at her old home near Chicago. The engagement, it is learned, has been of three years' standing, but Miss Welles's loyalty to the new State institution at Santa Barbara prevailed against her fiance's insistence until now.

Fifty-six graduates of the Normal received diplomas at the hands of former United States Senator Bard, one of the trustees.

Friday evening the commencement exercises for the Santa Barbara High School were held, with former Mayor James D. Phelan of San Francisco as the speaker. A class of forty-two was graduated. Commencement week had been one continual round—class play, junior farce, alumni banquet and other features occupying the attention of the seniors and their friends.

The visit of Bishop J. H. Johnson, Wednesday, to lay the cornerstone for Trinity Episcopal Church, was made the occasion for a delightful reception at the home of Mrs. Samuel Edwards on upper State street. The visiting clergymen were her guests at luncheon and a reception to the members of the congregation followed.

This week there have been a number of weddings, one of them taking the groom to Redondo Beach for the ceremony, Harvey T. Neilson of the Santa Barbara County National Bank having been married at that place Tuesday to Miss Hazel Venable. Wednesday evening Allen LeRoy Hunt, assistant postmaster at Santa Barbara and a Throop graduate, and Miss Winifred Hoye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Hoye, were married here. They are passing their honeymoon at Lake Tahoe. Thursday night Fred F. Rowan and Miss Mary E. Tisdel were married.

Local society has been paying homage to Mr. and Mrs. Hiram W. Johnson, Jr., who have been at the Potter for their honeymoon. In return for a number of favors, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson entertained the younger set at dinner at the hotel Wednesday evening.

Good News.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Olga Eugenie Dahlstrom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Karpen of No. 4730 Sheridan road, Chicago, to Paul Gerard Mueller of Los Angeles. The wedding will take place June 29 at the Hotel Blackstone in the eastern city.

OUT-OF-TOWN-SOCIETY.

Hollywood.

MISS MARGARET LOUIS STOLL of Serrano avenue, who will become the bride of Alfred J. Koch next Wednesday evening, has been the guest of honor at several affairs this week. Miss Bertha McGinley complimented Miss Stoll with a miscellaneous shower at her home, 149 Serrano avenue. A pink and white color scheme was used in the decorations and luncheon which was served at the card tables. Later 500 was enjoyed. Prizes went to Miss Aida Castellano and Miss Lena Burk. About thirty guests were present. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Maud Perrin of Lemona avenue entertained twenty guests with a surprise kitchen shower in honor of the bride-to-be. Maman Cochet roses and fern and fluffy tulle bows constituted the table decorations. A delicious three-course luncheon was served at 4:30. Miss Aida Castellano of 413 West Twenty-first street gave a charming box party at the Belasco Theater yesterday afternoon in Miss Stoll's honor.

Miss Ada Wickersham of 312 Tamarind avenue gave a charming luncheon Monday afternoon in honor of Miss Marie Lindenfield, who will be married to Jack Halleran of Los Angeles the latter part of June. A basket filled with pink sweet peas and maidenhair fern and tied with a pink tulle bow effected a handsome table centerpiece. Dainty place cards marked the places for ten guests.

Wilcoxon, No. 1104 Fremont avenue, Wednesday evening. Fishing tackle of all kinds greeted the eyes of the guests as they entered the dining-room, and in the center of the table was a mirrored ocean, on which was a large liner, an iceberg in the distance, and man-eating sharks visible in the water. Fishing poles with small fish on the end of the line marked covers for Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Whitmore, Mr. and Mrs. William Axtman, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Reavis, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. George Bush and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gillette. Following dinner B. F. Huntington gave a clever epic poem, written by himself, on Italy, and George P. Bush a skit on Germany, two countries which the honorees will visit. A feature of the evening was two colored musicians playing on banjo and mandolin, and just before leaving the guests sang a farewell song, to the tune of "Everybody's Doing It," composed by William Axtman.

Mrs. Mary Huffman of Neligh, Neb., who has been spending the winter in the city, entertained with a theater party yesterday at the Mason, followed by tea at the Alexandria. Pink enchantress carnations embellished the table, and hand-painted cards ornamented with the same flower marked covers for: Mrs. J. H. Seymour, Mrs. Richard Perez, Mrs. W. I. Seymour and Mrs. Horace Miller of Los Angeles, Mrs. Frank Bristol, Mrs. Albert Judd, Mrs. B. F. Huntington, Mrs. George Alfred Miller and Mrs. Howard Kelley.

A delightful innovation was the automobile "500" party given Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Hartley Packer, at their home, No. 1108 Fremont avenue. A vacation trip by auto, was the pleasure of the evening, and cities visited were Long Beach, Santa Barbara, San Dimas, Pomona, Riverside and Matilija Hot Springs. Pictures of all kinds of automobiles ornamented the home, and the back of the house was fitted up as a garage, and on the doors were signs of direction for the tourists. Score cards were numbered, and each one went to the garage where they were given a pasteboard automobile and their destination, and it was so arranged that there was a complete change of partners during the evening. Included were Mr. and Mrs. George Bush, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Manchester, Mr. and Mrs. George Adams, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. William Axtman, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Clements, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Whitmore, Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Willcoxon, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Shultz of Los Angeles and Mr. and Mrs. Clinton De Witte of San Dimas.

Mrs. J. V. Wachtel, Sr., and daughter, Markel, of El Centro, arrived in this city Tuesday, for the summer. They are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Moore, No. 1704 Ramona avenue.

The Monday Evening Musical Club was charmingly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Sweetser, at their home, No. 1950 Primrose avenue. Cecile Bruner roses and ferns were used exclusively in decorating the hall, living-room and music-room. Local composers was the theme of the evening. Prof. Carl Bronson gave two instrumental solos, California Sketches, "Indian" and "Song of the Thrush." Instrumental solos, played and composed by Miss Bertha McCray, "The Song of the Thrush" and "By the River;" violin solos, Mrs. E. A. Merritt, Prof. Edwin Clark, "Romance" and "Serenade;" Miss Frieda Peyche gave several original selections very delightfully; Frank Collier, a vocal solo; duet, Miss Harriett Vail and Miss Mason. After a delightful social hour, refreshments were served, the same color scheme

A congenial coterie of friends who have formed a bridge club were entertained Thursday afternoon with a progressive luncheon by Mrs. John Cave and Miss Clara Bosbyshell. The affair was a complete surprise, all members going first to the home of Miss Bertha Bosbyshell, No. 1910 Oak, the hostesses taking the first course with them and serving same on the porch. From there they went to the home of Miss Clara Bosbyshell, No. 1801 Electric. A mound of vari-colored sweet peas ornamented the table, and here the main part of the luncheon was served. From here the guests were taken to the home of Mrs. C. J. Balfour, Marengo avenue, for the next course, and for the last course to the home of Mrs. John Cave on Milan avenue. About 135 guests assembled at high noon and enjoyed the luncheon al fresco, which was served in cafeteria style. The shady nooks of the Japanese tea garden and the dense shades of the oaks and pepper trees afforded ideal picnic grounds, where the guests gathered in congenial circles. After the luncheon the club members reviewed the year's work as accomplished under the leadership of Mrs. Chester Paul Dorland, and her successor, Mrs. Clark Herbert Marsh, received the gavel from her hands and gracefully accepted the duties of the office, which began June 1.

"Oakleigh" was the scene of a happy luncheon party Friday, given by Mrs. C. Henry Sarwine, to the members of the Domestic Science Club. Beautiful blossoms and ferns from the gardens of "Oakleigh" were used to decorate living-room and dining-room, sweet peas being used in baskets with lively effect. The place cards and souvenirs were the gifts of one of the absent members, Mrs. Bertram C. Davies, who is in New York. Covers were laid for Mmes. Thomas Bynum, S. R. Jones, L. V. Vollmer, S. A. Whittier.

MRS. OVAL REDMAN was hostess at a charming affair Saturday afternoon when she entertained about twenty young people complimentary to Miss Myrtle Langstaff of this city, at the attractive Redman home on the county road. The affair was in the form of an announcement party for the guest of honor, whose marriage with James Hamilton of this city will take place on June 26. The afternoon was spent out of doors and strings of red hearts were used effectively everywhere. A delicious luncheon was served al fresco.

Mrs. Harry C. Holdsworth entertained a few friends Monday afternoon at her apartments in the Washington, with a Koffee Klatch, complimentary to her house guest, Mrs. Walter Folsom of Santa Monica. Sweet peas and carnations were used in the living-rooms. Five hundred was the game of the afternoon, after which a dainty collation was served.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stoddard of this city celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary Saturday evening, entertaining about fifty friends and relatives in a very delightful manner. Music and games were enoyed and dainty refreshments served.

Miss Denelda Horine was hostess to the members of the Philathea class of the Congregational Church, entertaining in honor of Miss Willma Holland, whose marriage to Orville E. Sweet of Connecticut took place Wednesday. The affair was in the form of a shower, the many beautiful gifts being packed in a suitcase and presented to the bride-to-be during the evening. Following the surprise, a delicious collation was served in the dining-room, where quantities of red and white carnations carried out the club colors.

Mrs. Will Wonders returned to this city Monday after two weeks spent with friends in San Francisco and other northern cities.

The wedding of Miss Willma Holland and Orville E. Sweet took place at the home of the bride's parents, Attorney and Mrs. W. M. Holland, at No. 147 South Friends avenue, Wednesday evening in the presence of fifty relatives and friends. Rev. W. J. Marsh of the Congregational Church performed the ceremony. The couple, unattended, marched down the stairway at 8 o'clock to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March played by Miss Neve Peel and were united in marriage beneath an archway formed between the living-room and library, and made of palm leaves studded with pink and white carnations and smilax. The bride wore a beautiful gown of Persian silk and real lace and carried a large bouquet of white carnations and ferns. After the ceremony a reception was held and a delicious collation served in the dining-room, which was very attractive in pink and white blossoms.

Twelve little maids responded to invitations sent out by Miss Ruth Aiken Wednesday afternoon bidding them to a rose party in honor of her birthday. Games and music were enjoyed on the lawns, after which they were invited to the dining-room, where a well-spread table was beautifully decorated in pink rose buds, and the center, a large birthday cake and Jack Horner pie, proved most delightful.

Corona.

SUNDAY morning at the parsonage of the First Christian Church Rev. A. L. Platt, the pastor, performed the wedding ceremony, uniting in marriage Miss Lottie Miller of this city and George Thatcher of Los Angeles. After a brief honeymoon the couple will reside in Corona, where the bride owns a millinery stock.

On Tuesday evening a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. A. Bush, brother-in-law and sister respectively of Rev. Chester Ferris of the Congregational Church. Decorations were of Cecile Brunner roses and a delightful supper was served, after an informal afternoon of needlework. Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Bartle entertained the bridal party with a dinner at the bride's home. The decorations were unusually handsome, pink sweet peas and ferns being used and candelabra with delicate pink shades adding a softening touch to the beautifully ordered dinner tables. Small baskets carrying out the color scheme of pink and green, were the favors. The wedding on Thursday evening was one of unusual splendor in Monrovia. The church had been converted into a veritable bower of beauty. The organ twined with asparagus fern made a background for the Kentia palms, Japanese cypress and stately Easter lilies, which banked the platform. The altar rail was intertwined with asparagus fern and Easter lilies and on either side of the organ were suspended flower-laden baskets, each surmounted by a white dove. Another dove with outstretched wings hovered with a benediction over the bridal couple, as they knelt for the parting blessing. The bride, on the arm of her father, preceded by the maid of honor, Miss Eva Harvey, and the bridesmaids, Misses Sophia Kubach, Ina Chess and Pearl Post, in iridescent net over green silk, with picture hats of white lace, carrying American Beauty roses, entered to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march. She looked very pretty and girlish in the heavy white satin gown, with its trimming of duchesse and rose point lace. A full court train fell from the shoulders, the veil was caught in cap effect with lilies of the valley and she carried a shower bouquet of the same delicate flowers. Mrs. Shrode, aunt of the bride, sang "Oh, Perfect Love," during the ceremony, and Miss Keller played softly as the final words were said, which made them man and wife. The Rev. R. A. Van der Las, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of which the bride is a member, performed the ceremony. Lowell J. Hart of San Francisco was best man, and Frank Belcher of Pomona, Comer Brown and Hugh Marshall acted as ushers. A reception and bridal supper at 'Leven Oaks Hotel followed the ceremony. The bride's going away gown was of tan English whipcord, with Panama hat, trimmed in American Beauty shades. Mr. and Mrs. Brown took their departure immediately after the bridal supper, their destination being unknown to their most intimate friends. They will reside in Long Beach, where Mr. Brown is in business.

Redlands.

A WEDDING of more than usual interest to society circles of Redlands was that of Miss Ruth Lyon to Dr. Sidney Locock Lacell, which was solemnized Thursday evening at the First Congregational Church, the Rev. J. H. Williams and Rev. Nathan Dushane Hynson performing the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Merritt Lyon of this city. Dr. Lasell, the groom, is a medical missionary stationed at Kachek, Hoihow, Hainan, China, to which place he is to take his bride in the fall. He is a graduate of Yale and has been in China for the past twelve years as a medical missionary for the Presbyterians. The bridal party made its appearance shortly after the hour set. The ushers looped the filmy streamers of satin ribbon and chiffon from pew to pew, catching knots of the delicate fabric in the posts of the pews which had been topped with wreaths of smilax and clusters of pink and white carnations. This formed a dainty path down the center aisle for the bridal party. The entire bridal group proceeded down this flower-lined way to the improvised altar, where they were met by Dr. Williams and Dr. Hynson. First came the ushers, Edward S. Graham, Stewart Hotchkiss, Raymond Hornby, Dr. A. C. Cameron, Frederick Hornby, and Fowler Remington. The flower girls were the bride's cousins, Doreen and Margaret Lyon. They were pretty bearers of the floral baskets, being clad in simple white frocks with pink sashes, rosebuds in their hair, and carrying armfuls of Dorothy Perkins roses. Then came the bridesmaids, Miss Anne Kitching, Miss Helen Haver, Miss Gretchen Moore and Miss Adelaide Gillis of Los Angeles. They wore white lingerie gowns, with pink sashes and hair ornaments, and carried arm bouquets of pink roses. The matron of honor, Mrs. Donald Scott, sister of the bride, followed. She wore a lovely gown, made en train, with high shirred bodice and trimmed in old point lace. Last in the party came the bride on the arm of her father.

Entrancing as a glimpse of fairyland was the brilliant scene of the Lyon grounds, sparkling with colored lights of electric globes and glowing with the dull shimmer of oriental lanterns. Guests went from the church to the grounds, and they could see the gay brightness on the hill as they rounded from the street into the driveway. The magnificent grounds had been elaborately wired under the direction of John H. Fisher, the workmen being busy there for two days. Large, vivid-hued lanterns had been strung from palms to umbrella trees and hung about the rose arbor, while smaller glimmers peered from high in the interior of the trees. The porch entrance was lined with masses of flowers. The anteroom was fragrant with great clusters of Matilija poppies, which rose in tall sheaves from deep vases in the turn of the stairway. The spindles were hidden with smilax and about the base foliage was banked. From the center of the hall hung a French basket from which drooped long stemmed carnations and the hall seat was filled with greenery and poppies.

On the landing branches of acacia were arranged in tall vases.

Mrs. K. H. Meigs and Mrs. Charles E. Ide, assisted by other friends of the bride, decorated the home interior tastefully and artistically. The home had been embowered with hundreds of delicately odorous flowers in which setting the handsome gowns of women attending the reception but increased the beauty of the colorful scheme. About the hall and other rooms were hung porcelain ower receptacles filled with pink ivy geranium and joined with festoons of smilax. In the dining-room the buffet had been banked with old-fashioned flowers, such as vari-col-

The Artigraphic Player

¶ The Artigraphic is the marvel of the Player World. It is the most artistic of all players. It combines two player instruments in one. By means of special Artigraphic rolls, it will reproduce the exact personal playing of the world's greatest pianist, or it may be played with standard 88-note rolls with personal interpretation and expression.

¶ The Artigraphic rolls are perfect recordings of the actual playing of the artist whose signatures they bear, played especially for reproduction by means of the Artigraphic Player.

¶ Every delicate shading, every personal peculiarity of phrase and touch; every idiosyncrasy of pedaling is reproduced as perfectly as though the artist himself was actually present; indeed, although not present in flesh and blood, his thought, his spiritual presence is evident throughout the rendition.

ered gladiolus, snowy giant candytuft, and smilax wreaths. Pictures were draped with the smilax which also was matted over corner tables, and draped flower-laden pedestals.

In the drawing-room were jardinieres of the yellow and white Matilija poppies, hundreds of which formed the main decoration of the wedding. Bamboo formed pretty tracery in the corners, and potted ferns and carnations were arranged about the apartment. Dashes of glowing color were introduced by means of the pink geraniums in porcelain jars on the walls.

Most brilliantly decorated was the large library where the bridal party, Mr. and Mrs. Lassell, Mr. and Mrs. H. Lyon, Mrs. Donald Scott, and Mrs. Sherwood Eddy received. Pink and white and green formed the color notes. The great fireplace and mantel were hidden with shrubbery, over which was a mantle of English laurel and loquat foliage, dotted with pink Dorothy Perkins roses. Ropes of smilax were hung about the molding and bouquets of pink and white carnations decorated the bookcases. Large brass bowls of La France roses graced the library table. The French windows in front of which stood the receiving group were draped with smilax and loops of tulle from which were suspended white wedding bells.

"SWEET CHARITY" formed the motif of one of the most delightful entertainments of the week just passed, as it has of nearly every week during the months of winter and spring. For the benefit of the Associated Charities, and under the general management of Geoffrey F. Morgan, Signor Raul Pereira and his famous sextet of stringed instruments played to a crowded house of society folk at a Tuesday matinee at the [illegible] Theater. Every box and loge was filled with theater parties of prominent people, and their guests and the proceeds resulting swelled appreciably the funds for work among the poor.

Spring showers for brides-to-be still claim a place among social events, and among them none have been more prettily appointed than was the linen shower arranged for Miss Grace Matthews, who, in the early summer, will become the bride of Mr. Hook of Perris. Miss Amy Miller and Miss Margaret Dalgish were hostesses at the happy gathering which took place Monday evening at the home of Miss Miller on West Fourteenth street. The score of friends in attendance sewed on fancy articles for the bride's chest during the early portion of the evening, and left the shower for a surprise. In order to mislead the guest of honor, the dainty packages were first auctioned off to the highest bidder, who in turn presented them to the one for whom they were intended. Decorations for the event were bowls of vari-colored sweet peas mingled with ferns, and the dainty refreshments reflected the tints of the fragrant flowers.

One of the pretty weddings of early June was that of Miss Ada Jane Ennor and Rufus Schofield Eads of Los Angeles, which took place Tuesday afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents, on East Eighth street. Rev. W. G. Geyer performed the ceremony in the presence of nearly three score friends and relatives of the young people. A profusion of roses and trailing ferns made an attractive setting for the bridal couple as they exchanged their marriage vows, and myriads of scarlet poppies brightened the dining-room, where later the refreshments were served. Following a short wedding journey Mr. and Mrs. Eads will be at home to their friends at No. 328 West Forty-eighth street, Los Angeles.

In honor of the college girls recently returned for their summer vacation especial effort had been made to make the evening a delightful one. Miss Mabel Scott presided over the after-dinner speech-making, which was participated in by Mrs. W. F. Taylor, Miss Mattie Singletary, and Miss Emma Parsons.

The ladies of section 4 were hostesses and the entire membership of the church and congregation, were their invited guests. Nearly 200 enjoyed the social hour, and the varied entertainment, which was contributed to by each of the seven sections of the church.

Mrs. E. L. Koethen of Brockton avenue entertained the brotherhood of the Baptist Church, and their wives Wednesday evening in honor of the birthday anniversary of her husband, E. L. Koethen. The affair was kept a secret for the host and proved to be a genuine surprise. A pleasing programme of readings and music had been arranged by George Swing and amusing games added their touch of merriment. About seventy-five guests were in attendance.

Mrs. William Farr of Lemon street has twice this week played the gracious hostess, entertaining on Tuesday afternoon with a thimble party and on Wednesday with a company of card lovers. Decorations for both parties were lavish and effective, profusions of sweet peas and ferns and sheaves of stately Bermuda lilies mingling their fragrance and beauty throughout the rooms devoted to the company. Whist engrossed the attion of the guests on Wednesday, and pretty prizes were awarded the winners. During the refreshments, orchestral music was enjoyed.

Mrs. Frederick Fabb and her daughter, Mrs. Richard H. Williamson, entertained a large party of friends with a thimble party at the Fabb home on Lemon street, Thursday afternoon. REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE VIEWS THE IMPERIAL.

Concludes, After Automobile Inspection of the Fertile Southern Valley, that the Half Has Not Been Told—He Finds Bumper Crops and a Prosperous People.

Frank Buren, register of the local Land Office, has just returned from a three days' visit through Imperial county, during which he covered several hundred miles by automobile, inspecting the growth of that section of California. He is most enthusiastic in his report, and declares he was surprised by the prosperity evidenced there.

During his incumbency it has been the duty of the register to sit in judgment in many contests involving land in the great valley. But his knowledge had been gained only by hearing the testimony and arguments. He had no first-hand information. When he got an opportunity to make a personal visit to the Imperial Valley to look up the improvements made by Mrs. Mary O'Brien in a contest involving the disputed ownership of a half-section of government land he went. He comes back as enthusiastic as if he owned a section of canteloupes at Brawley ready for market.

"I had an idea of the wonderful growth of the Imperial Valley, but my views were far short of the mark," said Buren yesterday. "I was prepared to be surprised with the conditions down there as they affect the people who have made that section their home, but I did not expect to see some of the wonderful sights met with on my tour. I visited Brawley, where they are shipping out the first run of cantaloupes; Imperial, El Centro, Holtville, Calexico and many other points, only to find that the country is being rapidly settled, and that the growing crops are bumpers.

"At Brawley the cantaloupes now going out will mean many thousands of dollars for the growers. The watermelon product will soon materialize, and great quantities of apricots, grapes and other small fruits are in evidence. The melon acreage is unusually large, and a record-breaking crop is expected. I rode through great cotton fields that seemed to be in prime condition, and was told that the experiments made in growing cotton were most successful, indicating that the valley will soon be one of the greatest cotton-producing centers in the country.

"I rode for hundreds of miles through alfalfa fields; fields of barley that are netting growers $1.50 a hundred pounds; hogs so fat that they can hardly walk; cattle, hundreds of them of purest breeds, and everything in abundance that goes to make up a happy, prosperous community. The great question of water for the crops in Imperial Valley is satisfactorily settled, the waters of the Colorado River flowing through the bed of what was the Alamo River to Sharp's Heading, across the Mexican line, affording a splendid supply for the various Imperial-county water systems. The homes of the settlers are cosy and pleasant, and everybody is busy working out his own salvation. So valuable is some of the land that many farmers, not caring to do the work necessary on their own account, have leased their holdings for as high as $30 an acre annually. This high rental can be had because the crops to be grown are so many and remunerative.

"Before my trip I had thought descriptions of the wonderful fertility of the Imperial Valley of the nature of a fairy tale, but I am constrained to declare that like the glory of the Queen of Sheba, the half has not been told. It will be for me to the Imperial Valley when I quit this land office position; it certainly looks good. A man has only himself to blame if he does not get rich on government land in the Imperial Valley."

EDUCATORS, CHURCHMEN.

Prof. John William Burgess, dean of the departments of philosophy, political science and pure science at Columbia University, has resigned, and after next month will retire to private life at a villa he recently purchased in Newport, R. I.

A health officer out West, Dr. J. S. Martin, has been reading the Bible. "I find," he reports, "285 verses in the Old Testament and 240 in the New relating to disease, sickness and their causes, treatment and prevention." In the doctor's opinion the Bible is the best text-book on sanitation ever compiled.

Commander Eva Booth, leader of the Salvation Army in America, has gone to London to arrange with her father, Gen. Booth, the itinerary of the American tour which he expects to make some time this year."

Prof. Howard T. Barnes, director of the physical laboratories, and the Macdonald professor of physics at McGill University, Montreal, who has just gone to England to lecture by invitation before the Royal Institution on the prevention of collision with icebergs, believes he has perfected a simple instrument which will make a repetition of the Titanic disaster impossible. He declares his microthermometer will infallibly detect an iceberg at a distance of not less than two miles on the windward side of it and seven miles on the leeward.

The Rev. Dr. Savidge of the People's Church in Omaha, has united 3000 couples in marriage, and with the fees has founded and maintains a home for old people, where fifty or more aged persons are supported in comfort. He is not only well advertised as a marrying parson, but has a matrimonial drummer to bring him custom. This agent is an attractive woman, who haunts the Courthouse, where couples go for licenses, and makes the rounds of the railway stations when trains are due.

Alexander Meiklejohn, for the last eleven years dean of Brown University, has been unanimously elected president of Amherst College. The new president will succeed to the place made vacant by the resignation of the Rev. Dr. George Harris, who retired last November, after twelve years' service.

Mrs. Florence Lyley Young, who has just won the first prize in the competition for the tile decoration of the children's room of the Forsythe Dental Infirmary, is a graduate of the Normal Art School, Boston. The Forsythe Dental Infirmary was founded by John Hamilton and Alexander Thomas Forsythe in memory of their two brothers, for the purpose of giving dental treatment to poor children.

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

Mrs. Morgan Jones,
President of the Badger Club.

The annual luncheon of the Badger Club given last Wednesday at Beverly Hills Hotel was one of the most delightful club functions of the closing year. More than seventy-five members and invited guests sat down to the handsomely-laid tables, which were gay with yellow and white flowers, yellow being the club color. Down the entire length of the long T-shaped tables extended a centerpiece of Shasta daisies and golden coreopsis, outlined with maidenhair ferns. At each plate was a souvenir place card tied with the club color and engraved in golden letters.

The president, Mrs. Morgan Jones, sat at the head of the table and at her right was Mrs. W. T. Lewis of [illegible], Wis., founder of the club, while at her left sat Mrs. William Baurhyte, and a few seats farther down Mrs. Clarence Pease, who acted as toast mistress. After the elaborate menu had been discussed, Mrs. Lewis, who is affectionately known as the [illegible] mother of the Badgers, was introduced and spoke feelingly of her deep and abiding interest in the organization which she referred to as the child of the Biennial Federation, which met in Los Angeles in 1902, from the inspiration of which this club sprang from the Ebell, "and ever since," the speaker said, "this badger born from the larger club, has been burrowing around seeking a home," and this remark led up to the subject of a permanent clubhouse which the club is now considering.

Mrs. William Baurhyte was the next speaker, introduced by the toast mistress in a witty and clever little original rhyme. Mrs. Baurhyte, who is a veteran club woman, said she had not felt so complimented in the two years she had served as district president of Los Angeles clubs as when invited to this Badger Club luncheon because she has absolutely no claim upon it and can never hope, under any circumstances, to be a real Badger, as she has never been out of the State of California since she was brought here from Maine, a babe six weeks old.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bohan spoke briefly on her pet subject of prison reform, a work to which she is devoted. She told of the good accomplished by the [illegible] in paroling deserving prisoners.

Mrs. Frank Waters, who was a delegate to the State convention at Paso Robles, gave a clear and inspiring report. "I noticed," she said, "that Los Angeles clubs were the best represented and the Los Angeles women were leaders in the discussions." A ripple of laughter went round the tables when she told in an amusing way, of an incident that occurred up there which demonstrated the eternal feminine.

"I was passing through the hotel lobby one day," she said, "and noticed two women in earnest conversation. They seemed completely absorbed in the discussion and I thought it was about the amendments to be proposed—for all the women were talking about that. As I drew nearer I overheard this: 'One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter,' and then I knew that the subject under discussion concerned that topic dearest of all to the woman's heart—home and family."

Mrs. Jones, the well beloved and popular president of the Badgers, spoke a few words of congratulation to the club on its work and increasing membership and called for the reading of the names of new members, some twenty-five former Wisconsin women having recently joined the organization.

Following the lunch a delightful recital was given in the handsome parlor of the hotel, under the direction of Mrs. Clarence Pease, participated in by a quartette of charming young girls—artists every one of them. Miss Josephine Neil sang so charmingly that she was immediately recalled by the enthusiastic handclapping. She was followed by Miss [illegible], who has recently returned from a prolonged course of study in Berlin and who played delightfully a selection from Chopin and in response to the insistent encore, Mendelssohn's "On the Wings of Song."

Miss Ida Weber, who is an artist with the saxophone, that instrument so seldom seen in the hands of a woman, played the "Hungarian [illegible]" in such a manner as to demonstrate that a woman may be an artist with a wind instrument as well as in stringed music. Miss Ione Tun[illegible] played the accompaniments in a finished style for all the artists.

Toast to Club Husbands.

Mrs. William Baurhyte, in her toast to "The Club Husband" at the Badger luncheon pronounced so [illegible] concerning the clever management of husband and home by the wise club woman that I am tempted to reproduce it word for word as it is such a fine club creed for the [illegible] woman. Here it is:

The Club Husband—may his number never grow less; may his house be a home; may its domestic machinery be ever well oiled and on the maid's day out, may there be served the best dinner of all the week, for from earliest times it has been said that a good dinner maketh a merry and contented man. Then will the wife say, "I learned these recipes at the club," and he will bid her go again and yet again.

If the husband care to smoke at home, may the presiding angel enjoy the fragrance of the weed, for a smoker of one's own at home is worth two in the bush. If there be children, may the daughters be fair and gracious, and the sons brave gentlemen like their father—then he will take great pride in them—and in himself and again be merry.

If there be no children, still let him be cheerful, for if they bring no laughter, neither will they bring sorrow and crying—and there are many little waifs and strays that need the care of all good men.

May the business cares of the husband and his pocketbook keep their correct balance—the one light and the other heavy. And at last, some evening, when he is musing by the fireside, and he hears a step on the stair, not quite so light as it was that yester-year, and when she comes close to him he can clearly see the silver threads among the gold or brown, may he be able to say, "She's still that old sweetheart of mine."

Girls in the Lead.

It is significant to note that, in the class of twenty-five who last week completed the academy course in Occidental College more than one-half—fourteen to be explicit—were girls, and also to observe that with one exception the honors of the class all went to the girls for superior grades in their studies. These honor students were Misses Dorothy Butterfield, Irma Curry, Marion Haskell, Madeline James, Jeanette Little and Samuel Prichard.

She Has Served Twenty-five Years.

It is not given to many women—or men either—to retain the presidency of an organization for a period of twenty-five consecutive years. Such distinguished honor can be claimed by Mrs. Anna S. Wolfskill, who has served as president of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies of the Methodist Church, South for a quarter of a century. At the annual meeting of these societies last week, Mrs. Wolfskill was the recipient of hearty congratulations by her co-workers.

A Woman's Pitiful Plea.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bohan, who is so deeply interested in the work of prison reform, told the other day at a club luncheon, a pitiful story which carries its own moral about a woman who for twenty-five years has been a prisoner in San Quentin for the killing of her faithless sweetheart. Some time ago, through the intervention of women interested in prison reform, this woman was paroled and sent down here to the Little Sisters of the Poor, who offered to receive her into their home. After a little time the woman begged to be sent back to San Quentin. She had become so accustomed to the prison environment that she could not be contented elsewhere. The deeply religious atmosphere and the calm, daily life of the sisters were in such direct contrast to her surroundings for the long quarter of a century past that she sobbed out her pitiful plea: "I can't live among angels any longer—take me back to San Quentin."

Averill Club's Final Function.

The Averill Club, which has been unusually active during the past week or two, hanging the Averill bell on El Camino Real last week and going out in a body on Tuesday to see the "Mission Play," at San Gabriel, will wind up its festivities for the club year next Tuesday with a picnic at Sycamore Park.

They're Coming This Way.

Prominent women from all quarters of the country are looking California-ward these days and several of the advance guard of the Biennial will be arriving within the next week or ten days. One of them, Mrs. Williams Cummings Story, candidate for president-general of the National Society of the D.A.R., will reach Los Angeles about June 17. Local daughters are planning a reception for Mrs. Story, who for years has been prominent in D.A.R. and club circles in Gotham. She was State Regent of the New York D.A.R., for some years and as president of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, saw that body increase 40,000 in membership durin- her term of office.

Women See Stars.

A California woman astronomer has been brought into the limelight again by reason of the appointment of a French woman, Mlle. Edmee Chandon, as assistant astronomer at the famous observatory of Paris. She is the first French woman to receive such official recognition by star gazers, and this brings out the fact that it was an American woman, and a Californian, who first received signal honor at the hands of the French government. Miss Klumpe of San Francisco held an official position at the Paris observatory, where she held high rank until she resigned to marry the English astronomer, Roberts.

State Regent Returns From Capital.

Mrs. W. W. Stilson was the guest of honor last week at the annual breakfast of the Los Angeles Chapter of the D.A.R., given at the Woman's Clubhouse. Mrs. Mary H. Gridley, Regent of the chapter, sat at the head of the table, where were seated thirty women, with Mrs. Stilson on her right. A brilliant touch of scarlet in the shape of a great centerpiece of carnations was the only glimpse of color in the table decorations, except the Stars and Stripes of the flag, which was draped overhead. The women were all gowned in white and white ribbon streamers ending in big bows at the corners of the table emphasized the harmony of the decorations.

Mrs. Stilson, in response to a request from the toast-mistress, Mrs. Gridley, gave a report of the recent annual conference in Washington from which she has just returned. She stated that, by an amendment to the by-laws, in future every State in the Union will have power to elect its own State Regent, a privilege which has hitherto been impossible.

Boycotting the Butcher.

The boycott of the butcher by the Housewives' League which had its inception among New York Club women when the price of meat soared skyward is as nothing to an anti-fat contest begun in a Connecticut town among a dozen prominent women who have started in to reduce their avoirdupois. As a consequence the village butcher was on the brink of bankruptcy for those women made dieting fashionable and the whole country community is watching with bated breath the result of the contest.

The women are divided into two teams—one headed by the wife of the village editor, and the other by the Baptist minister's wife and the game is to see which side will be able to reduce their weight the most at the end of six months. So interested have the whole community become that the standing of the two teams at the end of the first four weeks was posted on the bulletin in the village store along with the baseball scores.

The village butcher was in deep despair till a happy idea struck him. He installed a penny-in-the-slot weighing machine in front of his market and the profit bids fair to more than make up for his loss on sale of meat.

Hollywood Club Election.

The annual election of officers of the Hollywood Woman's Club came off last Wednesday. Mrs. Cassius Smith was elected president and Mrs. B. W. Harper vice-president; Mrs. J. F. Redhead, recording secretary; Mrs. Geo. H. Given, corresponding secretary and Mrs. H. L. Knox, treasurer. The board of directors include Mmes. A. H. Gurney, A. L. Leonard, F. M. Douglass, W. B. Wagner and Miss Theodosia Macomber.

Reports of the year's work in the different departments were given and a short letter from the president, Mrs. Calvin Smith, who has been ill for months, was read. Mrs. Schloesser presided and, after the business session, an amusing little play "The Obstinate Family" was given by the Hollywood Dramatic Club.

The closing function of the club will be the annual luncheon which will take place next Wednesday at Beverly Hills Hotel.

Stanford Woman's Club.

All Stanford women are cordially invited to a luncheon to be given by the Stanford Woman's Club next Saturday at the Woman's Clubhouse on Figueroa street at half past twelve o'clock. The secretary, Miss Edith Osborne, No. 401 West Twenty-third street, will accept reservations for seats till Thursday. The executive board of the club is as follows: President, Miss Katherine Dryer; vice-president, Miss Ethel Palmer; secretary, Miss Edith Osborne; treasurer, Miss Ray Hanna; advisory member, Mrs. Samuel E. Epler.

Eagle Rock Club Entertained.

The Southern California Woman's Press Club entertained the Twentieth Century Club of Eagle Rock last Wednesday afternoon with a programme consisting of original stories, sketches and songs from their own members. Mrs. Caro Senour gave an artistic portrayal of her child sketches in costume; Miss Rose Ellerbe contributed one of her short stories; Mrs. Sadie Bowman Metcalf read a poem, and Mrs. Bessie Thew Miller gave a monologue in the negro dialect.

Cliff Dwellers Entertained.

The California chapter of the Colorado Cliff-dwellers' Association will meet at Long Beach next Tuesday, the guests of Miss S. D. Morrison, at her home, the Colorado, one-half block from Hotel Virginia. This will be the last meeting of the club year. Members will leave Los Angeles on the 1 o'clock Pacific Electric car.

HOW I GOT RID OF MY WARTS

"I am not troubled with warts any more, because I have learned how to get rid of them," said a young lady when asked what had become of the unsightly warts that had disfigured the beauty of her hands. "It is very simple. Go to your druggist; get two drams of Traxit (triple strength.) Bathe the wart in warm water just before retiring, dip a wooden toothpick into the Traxit and touch the wart lightly. Inside of three days your warts will disappear, just as mine did."

Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Maiden: I am glad you value your youthful complexion, and if you avoid powder and rouge and use this spurmax lotion the skin will always remain divinely fair: Put 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint hot water (or witch hazel,) then add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply the lotion sparingly to the skin and rub lightly until it vanishes. Your mother will like the spurmax lotion, because it dispels that shiny, sallow condition and gives a tone and velvety softness to rough skins unknown to users of powder. The spurmax lotion is invisible when on and perspiration will not spot nor streak it.

Belle: No, glasses will not give a sparkle to dull eyes. Before you visit the oculist make up and use this harmless, inexpensive eye-tonic, and I am sure you will be saved the expense and annoyance of glasses: Dissolve an ounce crystos in a pint cold water. Putting 2 or 3 drops in the eyes daily will relieve the smart and ache, overcome the bloodshot condition and give to dull, expressionless eyes a fascinating charm and brilliancy.

Mrs. Ben: You ought not be sickly, and you won't any longer if you make up and use this good, old-fashioned tonic and regulator: Dissolve ½ cupful sugar in ½ pint alcohol, then stir in 1 ounce kardene and add hot water to make a quart. The dose is a tablespoonful before each meal. A course of the kardene treatment rids the body of all impurities, makes rich, red blood and builds up worn, waste tissue. Follow my suggestion and your health will soon return, and instead of a "muddy," oily, blotchy skin, it will be clear and radiantly beautiful.

Edith: I always make it a rule never to recommend a recipe unless I know exactly what it will do and am convinced that it is quite harmless. Parnotis will dissolve your fat quickly and gently, without present or future ill effects. To prepare, dissolve 4 ounces parnotis in 1½ pints hot water, and when it cools take a tablespoonful before each meal. This will remove every ounce of superfluous fat and leave the skin smooth.

C. Q. D.: It is distressing, I know, but if you use plain canthrox for cleansing the hair and scalp you will not be bothered further with excessive oiliness and profuse dandruff. A teaspoonful canthrox dissolved in a cup hot water is ample for a thorough shampoo, and when this is poured on the head and rubbed up into a thick, white lather it stops the itching instantly. After rinsing, your hair and scalp will be wonderfully clean and sweet, and the hair will dry quickly, with a rich gloss and even color. Occasional shampoos with canthrox will induce a luxuriant growth of beautiful hair.

Ada: Brooding will not help your complexion. In fact, worry causes wrinkles and crow's feet. Make up and use this almozoin cream-jelly and before long the oiliness will disappear, sallowness will vanish and the skin will assume a velvety texture and that youth-tint much sought after: Into ½ pint cold water stir 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine, then add 1 ounce plain almozoin. When thoroughly dissolved, apply freely to skin and rub in well. This cream-jelly is especially fine for removing pimples and blackheads and reducing large pores around the nose. Used during the heated term it prevents freckles, tan and sunburn.

May B.: Oily, sticky hair indicates an unhealthy scalp, and to correct this condition you should use a plain quinzoin hair and scalp tonic, made by mixing together ½ pint each water and alcohol and 1 ounce quinzoin. The use of this inexpensive tonic banishes excess oiliness and profuse dandruff and gives to dull, faded, brittle hair a glint and rich color and silky softness truly charming.

Nadine: Put plain pyroxin on your eyebrows with forefinger and they will grow in thick and silky. To make stubby eyelashes grow long and curly, apply pyroxin to lash-roots with thumb and forefinger. Be careful, however, and don't get any where no hair is wanted.

J. M.: Those aggravating hairs can be banished for all time with one application of a delatone paste. Mix enough powdered delatone and water to cover the hairs not wanted, then after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be soft, smooth and hairless.

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

By the Rosanna, Tyrol.

The old gray Alp has caught the cloud,
And the torrent river sings aloud;
The glacier-green Rosanna sings
An organ song of its upper springs.
Foaming over the tiers of pine,
I see it dash down the dark ravine,
And it tumbles the rock in boisterous play,
With an earnest will to find its way.
Sharp it throws out an emerald shoulder,
And, thundering ever of the mountain,
Slings in sport some giant boulder,
And tops it in a silver fountain.
A chain of foam from end to end,
And a solitude so deep, my friend,
You may forget that man abides
Beyond the great, mute mountain-sides.
But to me, in this high-walled solitude
Of river and rock and forest rude,
The roaring voice, through the long white chain,
Is the voice of the world of bubble and brain.

—George Meredith.

In the U.S.C.

The art classes of the College of Liberal Arts, University of Southern California, held an exhibition of their work in East Hall, College of Liberal Arts, last Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons.

These classes have been under the supervision of Miss Arley G. Tottenham for the past three years, and the exhibition gives proof of commendable progress. Indeed, when the small amount of time devoted to drawing and painting is taken into consideration, much of the work is surprisingly good. The pupils, even the youngest in the academic department, are earnest and painstaking. A few show talent of a high order that under further training will make excellent painters and designers of them.

The work shown consists of charcoal drawings from casts and from life, painting from the head and draped figure and still life study. The school, unfortunately, does not yet see the absolute necessity of the nude for proficiency in drawing. Some good designs for book covers, posters, etc., are also shown.

In poster work Lee Morrell, who is only 11 years old, shows remarkable strength in line and composition; the young designer's ideas, too, are fresh and original. The heads in pastels by Gladys Barlowe have refinement and feeling, and indicate a true artistic sense in the young painter. [illegible] Kettler's pastel heads and landscape studies are also good. Arthur Weatherhead, who is a student of architecture, exhibits a few good designs in his chosen field, and the drawings and lettering of Charles [illegible], as well as his charcoal drawings from the antique, are admirable. [illegible] the breadth and simplicity characterize the water color still life studies of Grace Stevenson—arrangements of books, flowers and a few pieces of bric-a-brac painted in flat washes. The big poster by Queen [illegible] is strong and effective; the figure, a girl seated at an easel, is good in construction.

International Studio.

Christian Brinton opens the International Studio for June with a fully illustrated description of the sixteenth annual exhibition of art in the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh. "Ever since their inception," writes Mr. Brinton, "the displays held in this thriving transalleghanian city have maintained a standard equalled by no organization in the country and by few abroad."

Another timely article is that which treats of the architectural exhibition in Philadelphia, with four illustrations. E. A. Taylor contributes his third paper on the American colony of artists in Paris, with half-tones from paintings by Alexander Harrison, Parke C. Dougherty, Myron Barlow and H. O. Tanner.

The paper on pictures of old Moscow by Vassetzoff has seven illustrations, that on the work of Edmond [illegible], a Swiss artist, has thirteen, and that on "An Art School [illegible] Standard" (New York School of Applied Design for Women,) eight. W. Franklyn Paris writes of the coming exhibition of the French Institute in the United States, A. Stoddard Walker of the paintings of D. Y. Cameron, and "In the Galleries," "Studio Talk," "The Lay Figure," etc., complete the number.

A Studio in San Gabriel.

Even the painters are not free from the wiles of the dealers in real estate, public benefactors quick to discover the possibilities of a "view," and equally quick in deciding who is to have the benefit of it. Generally it's the multi-millionaire, more especially when the boom is very promising. Occasionally, however, it's the painter of landscapes, whose approval of a "view" is not to be lightly disregarded. If a painter can be prevailed on to build a studio in an attractive spot on a green hillside or down in a flowering vale—he soon gives fame to a locality, and prices go up. (I refer to real estate, not pictures.)

Last summer it was thoughtfully pointed out to the artists of Los Angeles that the orange-grove section of San Gabriel was just the place for their studios. When the hills and mountains were displayed for their [illegible], and when they had seen the sunset gold tangled in the row of eucalyptus trees in the arroyo between Alhambra and San Gabriel, the artists agreed there was much [illegible] in the enthusiastic madness of the real-estaters.

[illegible] built a studio, however, till a few months ago, when Warren E. Rollins, the painter of landscapes and Indians, erected a very pleasant and [illegible] one opposite the picturesque eucalypti. Already he has laid out a garden, with a boulder-lined path that conforms to the artist's rules for the line of beauty, which leads up to the house from the road in the arroyo. Later the studio is to be converted into an abiding place for the Rollinses, a new studio is to be erected behind it, and an adobe Indian hut with an open court in the middle. The blocks of adobe will be made and burnt for him from the clay in San Gabriel, and Mr. Rollins will build the house with his own capable hands. The true artist learns to do things—and do them well.

The new studio is of redwood, and rather warm tones have been given the interior, by white lead rubbed into them by the artist. The result is a very agreeable background for the pictures—which are not numerous just now, by the way, as the artist has disposed of all last year's output.

A few weeks ago Mr. Rollins began the first of his long-projected series of panels dealing with Indian life from the historical as well as the artistic side. The first panel was finished a few days ago, and the paint was hardly dry before a Los Angeles collector made a bid for it. Selling of the series by piece-meal was not within the painter's intention, but he could not quite refuse to part with the first panel, and so he will paint it all over again.

The panel, painted in flat tones that are harmonious, is called "The Voice of the Pines," and is a graphic representation of an old Indian legend. A young brave, clad in bright colors that repeat the reds and greens of the landscape in the background, is seen leaning against one of a row of pine trees, and essaying to catch in a reed held to his lips the sighing of the trees. This song is a call to the gods for rain. The theme has been treated in a highly decorative way, and has, beside its beauty of color and composition, that beauty of feeling which always characterizes Mr. Rollins's work when he paints the Indian.

The second panel of the series, just laid in, represents a woman water-carrier descending a flight of broken steps in an adobe pueblo. Her erect figure assumes an impressive nobility against the ruddy sky of sunset.

If the artist does not go to Arizona and New Mexico this summer it is his intention to paint in the neighborhood of San Gabriel, which offers endless material to the painter. The landscape is there—and beautiful landscape it is—and so are the Indians, natives of the soil.

On Looking at Exhibitions.

In the current number of the International Studio the friends in "The Lay Figure" have a discussion on exhibitions. The Man with the Red Tie says there are too many, the Art Critic agrees with him, but the Plain Man does not.

Says the Plain Man: "I am sure there is no one more conscientious than I am in judging carefully everything in an exhibition; and I go to all the important exhibitions, too. I am quite certain I miss nothing worth seeing."

"Good man!" chuckled the Man with the Red Tie. "Why, you must spend your whole life in the study of art."

"That, of course, I cannot afford to do, as I have my own affairs to attend to," replied the Plain Man; "but art is the study of my leisure moments, and I do devote to it a great amount of attention. I can assure you I do not often make mistakes in picking out the really clever things."

"Ah, that is just it," said the critic. "You pick out the clever things. But your leisure moments are so few, and the important exhibitions are unhappily so many, that you are unable to see anything but what strikes you all of a heap as quite amazingly clever. The sober, simple things which hide in corners and do not shout at you for attention never come within your view—you do not even know they exist. And yet these are the real achievements by which art is kept alive. They represent the thought, the effort and the accomplishment of the conscientious workers who seek honestly to exalt their art rather than themselves. You, as you run around from exhibition to exhibition in search of clever things, have no time to dwell upon the real works of art. You are befogged by a jumble of impressions, and it becomes impossible for you to cultivate that quiet judgment which is the foundation of all true discrimination. You are tickled by cleverness if it is obvious enough, but you have no understanding of art."

Art Notes.

James E. McBurney will start a class in landscape sketching at Laguna Beach on June 25. There will be daily criticisms in the field, and on Friday afternoons an assembled criticism will be given, indoors, on the week's work, and on composition and methods of painting.

C. Harry Allis, the American painter who has lived ten years in Paris near the forest of Fontainebleu, is now sketching the mountains near Monrovia. Mr. Allis has been in the West for some months, and is much taken with our landscape scenery. He recently held an exhibition at Long Beach and one in Los Angeles.

During May the Montross gallery, New York, held an exhibition in oil, water color and pastel by a group of American artists—George H. Clements, Elliott Daingerfield, T. W. Dewing, Childe Hassam, W. L. Lathrop, Gari Melchers, Van Dearing Perrine, A. Phimister Proctor, Alexander Schilling, D. W. Tryon, Horatio Walker, J. Alden Weir, Hugo Ballin, Arthur W. Dow, George Inness, Homer D. Martin, Willard L. Metcalf, J. Francis Murphy and Robert Reid.

The Macbeth galleries, New York, made a group of selected paintings by American artists their last special exhibition of the season, and in this group Karl Anderson, Gifford Beal, F. C. Frieseke, Daniel Garber, Childe Hassam, C. W. Hawthorne, F. J. Waugh and several other contemporaries strike their accustomed note.

The Hackley art gallery, in Muskegon, Mich., is just completed and formally opened. The building contains five large galleries on one floor, and underneath the galleries, extending the whole length and breadth of the building, is an auditorium for lectures.

The twenty-fourth annual exhibition of American water colors, pastels and miniatures was opened at the Art Institute of Chicago on May 7.

Next Saturday and Sunday afternoons Lillian Ferguson will exhibit sketches made on her recent trip to Holland. Most of the work shown will be from the neighborhood of Volendam. Mrs. Ferguson painted under the critical instruction of Alexander Robinson, and some excellent work will undoubtedly be exhibited. The studio in which the sketches will be hung is at No. 679 West Hollywood boulevard, Hollywood. All interested in art are welcome.

Strong Character Studies Given by Players in Drama Seen at Egan Theater.

Before an audience including Mrs. Elizabeth Strong, Laurette Taylor, J. Hartley Manners and members of the Belasco and Burbank companies, as well as some visiting players—a well-nigh purely professional matinee—a number of pupils of the Egan School, last Wednesday afternoon, gave a strong rendition of "A Chinese tragedy," a story of the Celestial quarter in San Francisco.

The little drama was presented in the school's own theater at the top of the Hamburger Majestic Theater building.

Mrs. Strong was the amanuensis of the late Robert Louis Stevenson, and it is interesting to note that her decided literary talent is manifest in her son, whose latest sketch, "The Drums of Oude," is the biggest Orpheum production of the year, and was staged in New York for Martin Beck by David Belasco. It will be seen in Los Angeles later this year.

Participants in "The Chinese Tragedy," which is a saffron impressionist-sketch of long adherence and hate at the Golden Gate, included Miss Neitz, Miss Foss, Mr. Pollock, Mr. Radovich, Mr. Alexander, Miss Rose Neitz, Mr. Wood, Mr. Calhoun and Mr. Pallette.

The luminaries of this cast, however, were Patsy Calhoun in the role of Wing Shee, Eugene Pallette as Chin Fang, and Marguerite Foss as Hwah Kee.

Mr. Calhoun played the role of the sorrowing father, while in sharp contradistinction was the sullen hatchetman, an avenging demon in the humble guise of a laundry driver, impersonated by Mr. Pallette. Both these studies were commented on by the visitors as unusually perfect examples of make-up, and the studies were complete in detail, small features of excellence, bits of business and racial characteristics being especially noticeable.

Miss Foss in the role of the servant appeared with equal distinction, and won enthusiastic comment from Miss Taylor upon the character and style of her work.

Preceding the "Chinese Tragedy" the first act of "Everywoman" was done, with a cast including: Everywoman, Miss Helen Eddy; Truth, Miss Anna Jacsek; Nobody, Miss Devorah Lustig; Beauty, Miss Lucille Hutton; Modesty, Miss Consuleo Henley; Youth, Miss Curtyne Englar; Love, Stephen Jacsek; Flatter, Carl Teschan.

Miss Eddy will be remembered for her creation of the role of Wan, in "Wan o' the Wood," the premier success among the children's plays of last year.

Between "Everywoman," and "A Chinese Tragedy," Miss Curtyne Englar was seen in a toe dance.

SPORT MAXIMS RETOLD.

It is unethical to tell a client on the jump that he is in bad.

Many a deed that is lauded as noble is inspired by spite.

Ambition does not care what hardships it inflicts upon others.

It's nobody's mission to right wrongs if there's no glory in it.

If abuses are not advertised nothing hinders their getting by.

Ill fares the pastime that is played only for a business reason.

It entails a million small favors to make one grand success.

Gameness is often only a thin disguise for sheer desperation.

That which we regard and call courage may be glorified stupidity.

There's little at stake when a man will decide against himself.

Being fair does not call for an acceptance of the worst of it.

WORLD'S CHAMPIONS BEING PANNED NOW.

All teams get it handed to them when they do not win. The Philadelphia Athletics, twice winners of the world's championship, are having their troubles this year, so note this from The Philadelphia North American:

"The quicker the Athletics forget that they are champions of the world the better. Judging from their work to date the backsliding monarchs imagine they don't have to work to win games. There is something radically wrong or else the Highlanders, with a Tri-State line-up couldn't have won two straight. At the rate they're going the team is playing the poorest ball in the American League and it's up to Connie Mack to get the foolishness out of his men."

Greetings.

LOCAL MOTORISTS LAKE TAHOE BENT

MITCHELL THE FIRST CAR FROM LOS ANGELES TO ARRIVE.

Valentine of This City Has Delightful Trip to Resort—Car Runs Like Clock and Little Gasoline Needed. Now Is the Time of Year for Delightful Motoring.

A letter of interest to local motor enthusiasts from C. O. Valentine of this city was received by P. H. Greer of Greer-Robbins Company, Southern California agents for the Mitchell, which car Valentine drives, Friday morning, and he stated that they had reached Lake Tahoe June 4, driving all the way from Los Angeles in the Mitchell, the first local automobile to arrive there this season.

"The Mitchell sends greetings from Lake Tahoe," read the letter. "The first car in from Los Angeles, and the third car over the summit this season.

"We were in a stream four feet deep one afternoon and found ourselves bucking a snowbank the next. We crossed the summit on six feet of snow, but it is now rapidly melting and is expected to be entirely out of the road by the tenth of the month. The roads to San Francisco are in fairly good condition.

"The Mitchell is running like a clock, averaging over sixteen miles to the gallon over the San Marco Pass, and from Oakland to Sacramento averaging twenty-two miles to the gallon. No low-gear work was necessary at all during the run.

"This is a beautiful time of the year for anyone to make the trip. Even the run to San Francisco from Los Angeles is one of the delightful pleasures for the motor tourist."

FAMOUS OLD YACHT NOW A FISHERMAN.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The old ninety-foot sloop Pilgrim, which was built in 1893 for the defense of the America's cup, is now a fisherman.

She is equipped with two thirty-five-horse-power motors as auxiliaries to her sails. She left Portland Harbor last week under power, and, although her power is small for a vessel of her size, she moved very quickly through the water.

The Pilgrim was a finkeel boat, built from designs by the late George Stewart. She carried about seventy tons of lead, shaped like a cigar, at the end of a thin steel fin, and the hull was shaped somewhat like a canoe. At times she was remarkably fast, but she was not balanced right, and there was often trouble experienced in steering the boat. She had a habit of "taking the bit in her teeth," as a horseman might say, and going as she liked, regardless of the efforts of the man at the wheel to get her on her course. Yachtmen on other vessels would always give her plenty of room.

She took part in trial races with the Vigilant, Colonia and Jubilee, and the Vigilant was selected to defend the cup. Afterward the fin and lead were removed, a house was built on the hull and she was used for several seasons as a steam yacht. Now she has gone the way of many other famous craft and is ending her days in trade.

The Vigilant has been broken up, the Colonia is now the schooner Corona, and the Jubilee is hauled up at the Burgess yard at Marblehead. She has stood on the beach for several years and receives one coat of paint each year to keep her from rusting.

CHALMERS TROPHY CAUSES DISCUSSION.

Shall previous winners of the Chalmers baseball trophy be eligible in the competition this year? This is a question which is now interesting members of the Trophy Commission. The discussion was started following suggestions from Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers, and Frank Schulte, of the Chicago Cubs, last year's winners, that they be eliminated from all future competition and that the rules of the commission be altered so that a man who has once won the trophy shall not again be eligible.

Harry P. Edwards of Cleveland and M. F. Parker of St. Louis were the first to take a stand in the matter. Both have suggested in letters to Ren Mulford, the chairman, that Cobb and Schulte be eliminated from competition for the major prize, which is a motor car. Both Edwards and Parker feel, however, that all players should be voted upon, and that if Cobb and Schulte are judged the most valuable players in their respective leagues again this season they should get some recognition by the commission. In a letter to Mr. Mulford, Commissioner Parker says:

"The proposition to eliminate the men who have already been awarded machines is all right, but in my estimation it would be unwise to prevent their being voted upon. The Chalmers trophy is popular because it is the best method yet employed to decide the real supremacy of baseball in an individual way. To do anything to impair this feature would be to lessen its value. I would suggest that the voting be done without consideration of where machines have been awarded. Then it would be possible to award the automobiles to those receiving the highest vote, providing they had not previously won the trophy, or, in the case of their having previously won machines, the card could be given to those nearest to them. In case the choice should fall on a player who had already won a car he should get a cup, shield or medal suitably inscribed so that he would get the honor of his achievement and the machine would go to the nearest man to him. This would still leave the Chalmers award showing the real champion player of each season."

Johnson's Jump Ball.

It is not Walter Johnson's speed alone that makes him so successful, but the fact that his fast ball has a jump on it which the eye is unable to gauge.

If it were only speed and the ball came on a straight line toward the plate, he would be sure to be hit hard sooner or later, but the ball shoots and seems to escape the bats by jumping over them. This jump is created by the terrific force which those long arms put behind a ball, and when that speed is mixed up with curves and a change of pace, batters might just as well not venture near the plate so far as their chances of doing any damage is concerned.

Owing to the fact that the summer season is well on and the early fall arrivals are even now due, we have decided to close out

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Additional Teachers' Classes.

Summer classes in gardening for teachers, under the direction of Mr. J. H. Lillard, principal of Gardena Agricultural High School, will be held at the University of Southern California during the vacation period.

A teachers' class in clay work will also be carried on at Grand-avenue school during vacation under the direction of Mr. C. A. Kunou, supervisor of manual training. This course is free to city teachers. Outside instructors also may enter the class, but will be required to pay a small amount for use of materials.

Reception to Miss Ledyard.

Miss Mary Ledyard, supervisor of kindergartens, will leave in July to take up work in the Orient for the coming year. A farewell reception is to be tendered her at the Woman's Clubhouse on Friday, June 14, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Sale of Basketry.

The basketry and sewing exhibition and sale which was to have been held at Seventh-street school, June 3 and 4, was postponed to Monday and Tuesday of the coming week. Many of the baskets are unique in design, having been made by Mexican children who display the national genius in this line. Some very dainty needlework by the girls is also on exhibition and for sale. People who wish to know what the public schools are doing to train the children along these useful lines will do well to visit the exhibit. Seventh-street school is at the corner of Seventh and Wilson streets.

Macy-Street Trade School.

The Macy-street Trade School will keep open house during the entire week of June 10 to 14, inclusive. It has been thought best not to attempt any formal exhibit, but to open all classes to inspection, so that the every-day work of the pupils may be seen. A large amount of finished work is on hand, which the teachers will be glad to display to visitors.

The teachers of the Girl's Vocational School, the girls' department of the Trade School, have completed their plans for the summer. Miss Geraldine Parry goes to Columbia University to study at Teachers' College; Miss Ruby Hodge will teach in the Vacation School at Macy street, and take her vacation later in the year by visiting Eastern trade schools; Miss Nella West will rest this summer, after four successive years of summer school work, and Mr. Lane will take correspondence work on industrial education with Prof. Frank Leavitt of the University of Chicago.

Course of Study Committee.

The Committee on Course of Study for high and intermediate schools, comprised of the high and intermediate school principals, held the last of a series of dinners, with Superintendent Francis as guest of honor, at the Hollenbeck Hotel last Monday evening. The committee, being busy people, have taken the dinner hour, on several occasions, to discuss the unifying of the course of study and of text-books used, and have at last adopted a definite policy of adopting the same text-books for all subjects, wherever possible, and pursuing it in all the schools at a uniform pace. This will admit of a pupil passing from one school to another without undue trouble of adjustment, and will admit of freer consultation among the faculties of the various schools.

The committee having finished its work, the occasion on Monday evening lapsed into a gala one. Short and witty speeches were made, and the place cards, containing clever limericks by Miss Rose Hardenberg, and drawings of each person by Misses Grant and Ellsworth of Berendo-street school, carried out the genial spirit of the meeting.

Gates-Street School.

The teachers of the Gates-street school are preparing a programme to be given at Conaty Hall, No. 2601 North Broadway, Friday, 2:30 p.m., June 14. The proceeds are to be used for the purchase of a Victrola.

The fifth and sixth grades will appear in a Norwegian mountain march, and the kindergarten and grades from first to sixth will give the "Brownie Band" cantata. The play is staged amid a woodland scene, where the children are hunting flowers. Leda is lost. Then appear the woodland folk, the Brownie Band, the Butterflies, the Gypsy folk, the Owls (Billy Big-Eyes and Tommy Long-Wing,) and the Little Wee-Wees. Leda is found by the Fairy Queen, and guarded by the Fairy Princess. The Brownies promise to restore Leda to her friends if the children sing the Brownies' Charm. Little Leda is returned, hidden in a beautiful lily, and joy reigns again in the Home Chorus.

Vernon-Avenue School.

An attendance of over 600, each time, is the record of the Vernon-avenue auditorium on the several occasions, during the last few months, when the baliptocon has been used to illustrate interesting talks. On one occasion, Miss McCarthy spoke on "Mexico;" on another, Miss Milner spoke on "Wagner;" Miss Jessie Fraser at another time lectured on "Alaska," Miss Gooch on "California Missions," and on Friday evening Dr. Karr gave an address on "Germany." Motion pictures dealing with health subjects have also been given.

On Friday evening a musical programme was also given, as follows: Selection, school orchestra; duet, cornet and piccolo; duet, ocarinas; cornet solo; "Watch on the Rhine," fifth grade boys.

Avenue Sixty-two Social Center.

Owing to the tremendously increasing patronage at the social center meetings, the executive board of that wide-awake institution found various problems confronting it at the meeting last Tuesday night. So popular has the social center idea become in the neighborhood, that audiences ranging from 600 to 800 have been crowding Social Center Hall, whose extreme seating capacity is but 500. As a solution to this problem of numbers and various desires, the committee is seriously considering the opening of the study rooms for the use of various necessary classes. As a start in this direction, an entertainment will be given on the evening of June 20, in order to raise money for equipping a gymnasium. Also, candy will be sold to provide the prize money for the potato and school garden contestants.

The meeting scheduled for Friday, June 14, will be for adults and babies only, the kindergarten room to serve as a nursery, under the supervision of one of the mothers. Table and other games, discussions, and a "children's home products exhibit" will furnish the entertainment. Refreshments will be served under the supervision of Mrs. Gavin Witherspoon, Arthur H. Carroll and Stephen Buck. Mrs. Catharine Pierce Wheat, Mrs. Harriet Williams Myers and John Trunick will arrange the programme, and William Miller has consented to serve as general utility. A rousing good time is expected.

Rev. Reynold E. Blight, member of the Board of Education, addressed the Parent-Teacher Association, Wednesday afternoon, on "The Better-Yet Parent," whom he characterized as the wise and thoughtful companion of a child, pointing the way to the truly efficient life. At the close of the meeting, the following officers were installed for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Gavin Witherspoon; vice-president, Mrs. F. P. Ebertz; secretary, Mrs. Frank R. Schaefer and Mrs. A. J. Phillips, treasurer. Mrs. Ted Walker, Miss Elizabeth McCarthy and Principal S. V. Good, were appointed to judge the gardens of those who entered the contest. A committee will also be appointed to sell candy at the gym benefit entertainment, to be given under the auspices of the Social Center, on Thursday, June 14.

Agricultural High.

The Home Economics Club will hold an open and final meeting, Tuesday. There will be musical numbers by Gladys Carson and Lucy Kettler, and two address, "What I Have Gotten Out of My Course in Ornamental Gardening," by Florence Granzer, and "What the Year's Work in Cooking Has Meant to Me," by Ethel Purcell.

One of the classes has been studying "The Preparation of Lunches," and on Thursday afternoon they prepared their lunches and went picnicing, to complete the demonstration.

From Bulletin No. 6, whole number 474, United States Bureau of Education, 1912, discussion by Dick Crosby, specialist in agricultural education, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., we glean the following complimentary notice for our Agricultural High School:

"I recently saw some land put to pretty good use at one of the high schools in Los Angeles, Cal. The Gardena Agricultural High School Los Angeles, has seven or eight high schools, each one of which gives three or four courses and specializes in one of them. At the Gardena High School, for example, the pupil can get four years of Latin, all the general scholastic courses, but the agricultural course is the one emphasized.

"The Gardena Agricultural High High School has a farm of fourteen acres. Two and a half acres of this land is in trial gardens, used as their name indicates. To a certain extent, it is an experiment station for this school and for this region. Many things they are growing there the boys have never seen before. It is an education to them."

"There is also a trial vineyard. They have also a trial orchard and plats of alfalfa.

"I recently visited one teacher in manual training in a so-called agricultural school, and said, 'What are you doing for the boys who are going back on the farms, those who are taking the agricultural course?' He said, 'We have some work for them on power machinery, gasoline engines, etc.,' then added, 'I want to show you,' and he took me to a show room, where there was a case containing all the different kinds of joints he could possibly devise. Pointing to the case he said, 'It took us six months to go over that series of exercises.' He then pointed with pride to a collection of patterns representing the ordinary output of a foundry. I asked 'How many of your boys are going to have foundries on their farms?' His reply was, 'Well, it is interesting for them to know how these things are done.'

"We waste entirely too much time in our agricultural schools on things that simply 'interest the boys.'

"Let us compare such work with the farm mechanics work in the manual training department of the Gardena Agricultural High School. In the seventh and eighth grades their work does not differ very much from the ordinary training work in the village or city schools, but in the High School it is real farm mechanics; it is constructive work. For example, they have put up potting sheds at the greenhouse, and two lath houses for citrus seedlings—they have put up fences and, when I was there, they were constructing a house for a gas plant connected with the school, and the school has made an appropriation for a barn to shelter their horses and store their forage.

"This barn is not put up by contract, but the board will furnish whatever carpenters are needed, one carpenter to each squad of four or five boys, so that these boys who are taking the agricultural courses will actually put up a barn under expert supervision. To such boys, this kind of work is of greater practical value than foundry or machine-shop work, and it is just as educational."

Los Angeles High School.

Act III—Scene 1, Grand Hall of the Templars at Templestowe; scene 2, in the forest; scene 3, tilt yard at Templestowe.

The special scenery was designed by Mr. Sterrett and constructed by the boys of the society.

The dates for the closing events of the school year are as follows:

Senior A—Class play, "The Road to Yesterday," June 14, two performances in the High School assembly; senior B day and presentation of Star and Crescent pins, June 19. At this meeting of the Star and Crescent the senior B's really come into their own, and joyfully tell the senior A's what they really think of them. Commencement night will be June 21. The graduating exercises will be held in the Temple Auditorium.

The Blue and White, which is an unusually attractive edition, will appear June 12. Mrs. Dorsey, vice-principal, has contributed a timely article in upper class control. One of the features is an unusually fine photographic study of Mr. Housh, by the art editor, Robert Meyler.

The schoolmasters of Los Angeles were the guests of the men of the faculty Saturday evening. A fine meal, good music and the joyful vacation spirit made the evening one of good fellowship.

The classes in zoology in charge of Mr. Culver, went out for some field work with birds, Thursday afternoon. About twenty species were recorded on the grounds of the Woolwine place recently acquired by the school department. The pupils, with the aid of museum specimens and the outdoor work, learn to identify the birds readily at sight.

Manual Arts High.

A heated election is in full swing. Like its contemporaries in the big outside world, it calls for speeches adorned with blushes, humble abasements of utter unworthiness for the exalted honors and vehement assertions of fraternal affection for the opposing candidates.

The auditor of the Trust and Savings Bank this week made his first official inspection of the books of the Manual Arts Savings System. Mr. F. J. Armstrong, of the commercial department, who inaugurated the system, expresses himself as well pleased with the initial success of the new venture.

The Chambers of Commerce of the cities of Polytechnic and Manual Arts interchanged visits for the purpose of mutual inspection of the advantages of the sister cities. Polytechnic was represented by Charles Ryker and Myrth Young, while Leo Smith and Ethel Hyden looked after the interests of Manual. A satisfactory mail and transportation service has been inaugurated with all the paraphernalia of special stamps, bills of lading and other traffic necessaries. A satisfactory stimulation of trade between the two cities is expected by the advanced commercial classes as the result of the visit. Manual's representatives returned with some excellent ideas and remembrances of a pleasant time.

Among the many improvements that tend to make conditions more comfortable in the new school may be mentioned the decorating of the cafeteria by the student body organization. The girls of the sewing department have made and hung curtains for the dining rooms, while the Art Committee has chosen several good pictures.

The blacksmith shops will be well equipped for good work next term. The boys have had practical experience in meeting the problems entailed in the work of setting up a forge room. The large drill, gas forge, radical power hammer, exhaust and blower have been assembled and with twenty-five forges, thirty anvil blocks from twelve-inch timber have been set up by the boys.

Just See That Corn Shrivel—Vanish!

The New Corn Cure "GETS-IT" Gets It.

Corns on Sunday! Before Using "Gets-It."

Gone on Tuesday! After Using "Gets-It."

"GETS-IT" is the new corn cure on a new plan, that is as harmless to the skin as water, but, blazes, how it works! Nothing to stick or hurt. Lo and behold, your corn comes out. You don't have to drag it out. Every owner of a corn, callous, wart or bunion is going to get the surprise of a life-time. No more digging at corns, no more slicing with razors and drawing blood, no more blood poison, no more sticking plasters. "GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Los Angeles by The Owl Drug Co.

In addition to the work of installation, they have made numerous articles for the school. Among others several hundred steel bolts three-eighths inches to seven-eighths inches, from two and one-half inches to twelve inches in length with heads, threaded ends and nuts to fit. They also cut and crimpled 400 pounds mild steel for reinforced concrete.

A good programme was given at the assembly on Friday by the advanced gymnasium class, the boys under the instruction of Mr. G. A. Rice. Some good pyramid work was done by the fifteen members, while the tumbling, especially that by J. Downs and Arthur Gilmore, was excellent. The programme is a foretaste of that to be given on visitors' day on the 19th.

The girls' swimming club had its final meet this week. About seventy-five girls signed up for this club. The average attendance has been thirty-five. They meet at the Bimini Baths under the supervision of their physical instructor.

The series of indoor baseball games between different class rooms is meeting with great success. About 100 boys take part with keen interest in the contest.

Mrs. M. R. Morgan, of the physical training department, is absent for a month to inspect work in the New York schools and will return to her duties on Monday.

Aged, Wrinkled Faces Easily Rejuvenated

(From the Beauty Seeker.)

An aged face is often only a mask to a comparatively youthful person. Beneath is a countenance young and fair to look upon. It's a simple matter to remove the mask. Ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin; in a week or two the user has the loveliest pinky-white complexion imaginable. An ounce of the wax usually is sufficient to complete the transformation. It is put on at night like cold cream and taken off in the morning with warm water.

This remarkable treatment is invariably effective, no matter how muddy, sallow or discolored the complexion. Freckles, moth patches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads and other cutaneous blemishes, naturally vanish with the discarded skin.

To remove wrinkles and flabbiness, here is a recipe that cannot be too highly recommended: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½-pint witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion.

They say there is nothing new under the sun, but

I have perfected a treatment that I want to share with my sisters.

No massaging, nothing to take, nothing to wear.

I was skinny, scrawny, flat and unattractive. Now I claim to be the highest-priced artist's model in the United states, and what I did for myself I do for you.

I don't care what your age may be, I ask only that you be at least sixteen and not an invalid, and I will undertake to develop your bust in two weeks. All I ask is five or ten minutes of your time every day.

The Basic Idea

Gravity Plus Artificial Traction

Cut Off Both Your Hands

—And see how impotent you instantly become.

The grip of the fingers represents compound leverage; that of the forearm without the hand, simple leverage.

You can pry things around with a crowbar; but you can also grip, hold, lift and move the same things around with tongs. They are not new.

Modern railway and traction lines are at work without their fingers and hands. Two rails with parallel wheels and truck dependent on gravity and weight, for traction, speed and safety, is crowbar work—simple leverage.

Ever see a new dredger at work in the harbor at San Pedro, making one bite of a ton or two of mud and rock; or a steam shovel at work, eating up a hill—like a hungry boy going after biscuits? It's the tong-grip of the yoke-jaws that does the work—or compound leverage.

GRAVITY PLUS, OR—MINUS?

You can pry the trucks of a traction car or a locomotive off the track with a crowbar. You would have to blow the roadbed to pieces to get the Valentine Monorail truck off its track.

The roadbed is elevated, built of reinforced concrete, viaduct construction; and, as to form, takes on the shape of an inverted triangle. The truck rides on the broad top, with the yoke-jaws dipping over the side and under the triangular roadbed, gripping it with the compound leverage of the hand and fingers.

There are three rails: A broad traction rail on top with two rails for guidance and auxiliary traction beneath, one on each side. The Direct Power Motor rides on the top rail, with the guide and auxiliary traction wheels underslung at the end of the yoke, pressing upward with their thrust centering against the bottom of the main traction rail—giving the truck a hand—or tong—grip on the three rails and roadbed, which is compound leverage.

This truck, therefore, cannot "jump the track." Furthermore, the underhung guide and auxiliary traction wheels, through compressed air cylinders, are forced up against the guide rails, bringing the Direct Power Motor down with greater force against the upper traction rail.

Hence, in respect both of traction and speed—with safety and comfort, the Valentine monorail car rides independent of gravity and weight.

NOTHING RADICAL ABOUT IT.

Tongs came into use shortly after the Stone Age, that used a crowbar.

No mechanic could get along without the principle of compound leverage found in the tong-grip.

As to the use of compressed air for traction purposes, the Santa Fe uses an air cylinder to press the pilot wheels of its locomotives, under the "cowcatcher," down against the rails. This keeps the pilot wheels from bouncing on straight track and from climbing the rails on curves.

The Valentine "Direct Power Motor" reverses construction of the ordinary motor. In the Valentine motor the armature is stationary, and the housing, with the fields, moves round the armature—permitting a tire to be put on the housing, thereby giving it direct power and saving all lost motion incidental to cogs and connecting links in ordinary motors.

The coaches, as well as the trucks, ride on compressed air, which auxiliary elliptical and coil springs for safety—giving resilience, like the tire of an automobile, which is not new. The wheels are set tandem, instead of parallel, so that the entire equipment rides with the forward motion of a bicycle, eliminating rack, strain and vibration. Or, with comfort.

THE NEW POINT.

Reinforced concrete.

The Valentine System would not have been a success ten years ago, because reinforced concrete had not then been brought up to its present standard of economy and efficiency.

Our opportunity lies in this factor. Everything else pertaining to the Valentine Monorail System, through well known and progressive engineering practice, has already been developed to a high point of efficiency and economy in mechanics, electricity and railroading.

Profits dwell in the land of Economy.

"Every big opportunity of the past was simply an opportunity to cut down waste somewhere."

This tells our story to a "T," and puts it in a nutshell.

Its practicability is beyond question.

The massiveness of its possibilities as to profit—stagger the imagination.

Standing still at the North Pole, it would take you twenty-four hours to turn round once, and yet go nowhere.

This represents the idle dollar. But—

At the Equator, even though you stood still, you'd go round yourself in the same period and also do a stunt in speed at 1400 miles an hour.

This represents the Busy Dollar!

WHERE DO YOU STAND?

It's a matter of position.

You cannot see this by staying at home or remaining in the office.

We cannot lug the model and track around for demonstration purposes. It's too heavy, besides there is 150 feet of track.

This apparatus cost Mr. Valentine $8000. As a model, it's as perfect as to detail and appointment as the model of a $10,000,000 dreadnought.

Call any day at the Basement of the Consolidated Realty Building, Sixth and Hill streets.

Demonstrations are given from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and on Saturday nights from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

No work on Sundays.

RECORD ORDER PLACED.

Five Thousand Trees and Plants to Be Used in Beautification of Rodgers Park Frontage.

What is believed to be one of the largest single order for trees, plants and rare shrubs ever placed in Los Angeles for the beautification of a residence tract has just been given by the Los Angeles Investment Company for Rodgers Park. In the list are over 5000 plants. This immense order was given in order to improve eight thousand front feet of parking along Vermont avenue, where not only is the 185-foot thoroughfare to be set to trees and shrubs, but an additional 80-foot park strip laid out.

Five fountains, tennis courts, croquet grounds, sand pits and a wading pool for children and out of door features of like kind will be built in these parkways, with the aim of making Rodgers Park one of the model residences communities of the southwest. The north half of Rodgers Park is now being developed. The seventy-four acres include six miles of streets, through which are now being laid water pipes, gas mains, telephone wires and other utilities.

Charles A. Elder, president of the investment company, is also chairman of the board of directors of the Outdoor Art League of Southern California and it was in keeping with the work of that organization that such an unusual order for plants and shrubs was given. California species will be conspicuous among the rarer trees and imported plants.

Famous Breeder to Erect Costly Country Home at Brentwood Park. Other Fine Dwellings Planned.

Herman Lawton Covode, breeder of fine horses, whose stable and breeding farms in Indiana and Kentucky were famous throughout the country until his retirement a short time ago, has purchased property at Brentwood Park and has had drawings prepared for an Old English style of country place that he will build on Park Drive. Covode will make this his permanent home.

Mrs. Lulu P. Munson, formerly of Zanesville, O., has bought lots in Brentwood Park and will have built at once an eight-room Colonial house at Lincoln drive and Delaware avenue.

Ernest Northcott is another buyer of Brentwood property, through J. A. Campbell and the Braly-Janss Investment Company. Northcott will build a ten-room Swiss chalet.

Work is well advanced on the home of Murray Paulin, son of F. C. Paulin, president of the Imperial Land Company, whose purchase of a lot was announced some time ago. Mr. Paulin, Sr., has a $25,000 home at Brentwood and the home of the younger Paulin will be but a short distance away.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOL OPENED.

A new public school has just been completed on top of Mt. Washington. The building is of the mission type of architecture. The main room is 26x40 feet and is in reality a small auditorium, with an eight-foot stage at one end. Opening from this, on the south, through French doors, is a commodious sun parlor. On the north there is an opening to a cement colonnade 16x46 feet. These outdoor rooms are planned so that desks and chairs may be moved out either to the colonnade or into the sun parlor and through most of the school year the children will enjoy outdoor classroom features. The plans were made and the furnishings adopted by the board of trustees of the Mt. Washington school district before that district was brought into Los Angeles. The building, commanding a wide view in every direction, cost $15,000.

KENILWORTH SALES.

Sales in the Kenilworth tract, in Glendale, are reported by the Edwards & Wildey Company, general agents, as follows: To J. B. and L. A. Tillinghast, lot on First street, near Pacific, $575; Norman C. Stone, lot on First street, near Pacific, $575; Frank Y. Pearne, lot on Burchett, near Kenilworth avenue, $575; Alice Estill, lot on Myrtle avenue, near Kenilworth, $550; Ridgeway avenue, $450; Clarence K. Cooke, two lots on Patterson, near Kenilworth, $1150, and Virgil D. Hollister, lot on Myrtle, near Ridgeway, $450. The Tillinghast site will be improved with a six-room tile house.

THE SOUTHWARD TREND.

Forty acres on Main, Manchester and San Pedro streets, with a frontage of 1260 feet on each, has been purchased by the Commonwealth Home Builders. The buyers purpose laying out a high-class bungalow subdivision to be known as Gotham Park. The tract will be highly improved. The entrance to each street will be marked with attractive cement columns. It is the intention of the new owners to improve the 248 lots of the property with bungalows as rapidly as the market demand arises.

Beautiful Westlake Caravansary That Has Outgrown Present Accommodations.

SIZE OF HOTEL LEIGHTON TO BE NEARLY TREBLED.

Owners of Leading Westlake Hostelry to Spend Over Quarter Million in Additions and Alterations—Completed Building to Have Frontage of Entire Block on West Sixth Street.

THE Hotel Leighton at Sixth and Lake streets will rank among the great caravansaries of the Pacific Coast when additions now definitely projected shall have been completed. The enterprise, which was announced exclusively in The Times last week, will involve an outlay upon the part of the owners of approximately $250,000, this figure not including the expenditure for furnishings. Working plans for the improvement are now being prepared in the offices of John C. Austin and W. C. Pennell, associated architects.

The additions will be erected jointly by George A. Leighton and W. S. Crane, the former of whom built the present hotel eight years ago from plans drawn by Mr. Austin. Leighton, who is the owner of extensive factory interests in New England, has made his home in Los Angeles for many years and in the last decade has acquired considerable property here. Crane is a member of the Vail-Crane Realty Company and the owner of extensive holdings in this city and vicinity.

The present hotel contains 104 guestrooms and is four stories in height. It has a frontage of 137 feet on Sixth by a depth of 100 feet on Lake street and is set back forty feet from the sidewalk line of the former thoroughfare. The site has a frontage of 350 feet on Sixth street, extending from Alvarado street to Lake street. Its frontage on Alvarado is 325 feet and that on Lake 273 feet. Leighton paid $40 a front foot on Sixth street for the property ten years ago and a much smaller figure for the Lake and Alvarado frontages.

TO FRONT WHOLE BLOCK.

When completed the greater Hotel Leighton will have a frontage of 350 feet, and will extend to the sidewalk lines of both Lake and Alvarado streets. The present Lake-street wing will be carried to the sidewalk line of Sixth street, at which point it will have a height of five stories. A similar wing will be carried out to Sixth street on the Alvarado frontage. The ground area to be covered by the addition extending from the east end of the present building to Alvarado street will be 213x100 feet in size, this not including an inner wing extending from the front of the building to correspond with the present east wing. The building when completed will from the front present the shape of two capital E's set end to end. Still another wing will be extended from the rear of the present structure.

The completed building will contain 284 guestrooms, the addition providing 180 rooms of this character, together with a large new lobby, a public dining-room 60x100 feet in size, two private dining-rooms, a new kitchen and numerous rooms for the use of the hotel help. Several spacious verandas and sleeping porches are also provided for in the addition. The plans call for an average of two baths to every three rooms.

The entire investment represented by the completed building and, figuring in the present value of the site and the cost of the furnishings, will be in excess of $550,000. The site is one of the most desirable and valuable of its character in Los Angeles, directly overlooking, as it does, Westlake Park and the whole of the Westlake and Wilshire districts.

TUNNEL TO ELEVATORS.

The site of the hotel is about ten feet above the sidewalk line, and a feature of the new arrangement will be a tunnel constructed from the street level to meet the elevators in the central portion of the building, making it unnecessary for the guests to ascend even the present short flight of stairs. This tunnel will be handsomely tiled and well lighted.

The new lobby will be finished in marble, tile and scagliola, large columns of the latter material being a feature of the treatment. The ceiling and walls will be handsomely enriched. The present dining-room, 45x70 feet in size, will be converted into a ballroom. The guestrooms of the newer portion will be much larger than those ordinarily found in hotels, the smallest being 13x17 feet and the largest 15x20 feet. All of the bathrooms will have bathtubs built into the floor and will be finished in tile throughout.

The additions will be of brick and of class B construction. The exterior will be plastered to correspond with the present hotel. A noteworthy architectural feature will be two observation towers flanking the central court on either hand. The view from these points of vantage will be magnificent and will take in a panorama extending from Westlake Park to the ocean and in which on clear days the shipping at San Pedro will be clearly visible. Between the two towers will be arranged a roof garden.

None of the courts will be less than forty-eight feet in width and the main court will have a breadth of fifty-eight feet. The arrangement is such that every room will be exposed to the sunshine at some time during the day.

The present Hotel Leighton is famous for its beautiful lawns, and the landscaping feature has been enlarged upon in the plans for the greater hostelry. Across the entire front of the hotel and extending from the Alvarado-street wing to the Lake-street wing the ground will be beautifully set to lawns. Back of the hotel on Lake street will be a strip of lawn 200x80 feet in size, while on the west side of the property 150x150 feet will be available for the same purpose. It is the intention of the owners to set out many rare trees, shrubs and plants.

The architects expect to have the plans for the improvement completed within a month, and the excavations will probably be started about July 15.

Mining Promoter Also Plans Costly Home in Town of Owensmouth. Grain Man Adds to Holdings.

Fred Liser, a mining promoter, has announced his intention of making the new town of Owensmouth his home and the past week purchased a residence lot there through Charles E. Liser also bought business lots and will put up nearly a block of stores for leasing purposes.

W. D. Hamill, a wealthy hay-and-grain merchant, who bought property at Owensmouth several weeks ago, has added six lots to his holdings. Two of these are business sites on Broadway and the other four are residence lots.

W. E. J. Quast, a cement contractor, and his father, J. M. Quast, were among the purchasers of the week. They will erect homes in the town and also business places.

HORSEMAN LIKES SOUTHLAND.

Famous Breeder to Erect Costly Country Home at Brentwood Park. Other Fine Dwellings Planned.

Herman Lawton Covode, breeder of fine horses, whose stable and breeding farms in Indiana and Kentucky were famous throughout the country until his retirement a short time ago, has purchased property at Brentwood Park and has had drawings prepared for an Old English style of country place that he will build on Park Drive. Covode will make this his permanent home.

Mrs. Lulu P. Munson, formerly of Zanesville, O., has bought lots in Brentwood Park and will have built at once an eight-room Colonial house at Lincoln drive and Delaware avenue.

Ernest Northcott is another buyer of Brentwood property, through J. A. Campbell and the Braly-Janss Investment Company. Northcott will build a ten-room Swiss chalet.

Work is well advanced on the home of Murray Paulin, son of F. C. Paulin, president of the Imperial Land Company, whose purchase of a lot was announced some time ago. Mr. Paulin, Sr., has a $25,000 home at Brentwood and the home of the younger Paulin will be but a short distance away.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOL OPENED.

A new public school has just been completed on top of Mt. Washington. The building is of the mission type of architecture. The main room is 26x40 feet and is in reality a small auditorium, with an eight-foot stage at one end. Opening from this, on the south, through French doors, is a commodious sun parlor. On the north there is an opening to a cement colonnade 16x46 feet. These outdoor rooms are planned so that desks and chairs may be moved out either to the colonnade or into the sun parlor and through most of the school year the children will enjoy outdoor classroom features. The plans were made and the furnishings adopted by the board of trustees of the Mt. Washington school district before that district was brought into Los Angeles. The building, commanding a wide view in every direction, cost $15,000.

KENILWORTH SALES.

Sales in the Kenilworth tract, in Glendale, are reported by the Edwards & Wildey Company, general agents, as follows: To J. B. and L. A. Tillinghast, lot on First street, near Pacific, $575; Norman C. Stone, lot on First street, near Pacific, $575; Frank Y. Pearne, lot on Burchett, near Kenilworth avenue, $575; Alice Estill, lot on Myrtle avenue, near Kenilworth, $550; Ridgeway avenue, $450; Clarence K. Cooke, two lots on Patterson, near Kenilworth, $1150, and Virgil D. Hollister, lot on Myrtle, near Ridgeway, $450. The Tillinghast site will be improved with a six-room tile house.

THE SOUTHWARD TREND.

Forty acres on Main, Manchester and San Pedro streets, with a frontage of 1260 feet on each, has been purchased by the Commonwealth Home Builders. The buyers purpose laying out a high-class bungalow subdivision to be known as Gotham Park. The tract will be highty improved. The entrance to each street will be marked with attractive cement columns. It is the intention of the new owners to improve the 248 lots of the property with bungalows as rapidly as the market demand arises.

SIZE OF HOTEL LEIGHTON TO BE NEARLY TREBLED.

Owners of Leading Westlake Hostelry to Spend Over Quarter Million in Additions and Alterations—Completed Building to Have Frontage of Entire Block on West Sixth Street.

THE Hotel Leighton at Sixth and Lake streets will rank among the great caravansaries of the Pacific Coast when additions now definitely projected shall have been completed. The enterprise, which was announced exclusively in The Times last week, will involve an outlay upon the part of the owners of approximately $250,000, this figure not including the expenditure for furnishings. Working plans for the improvement are now being prepared in the offices of John C. Austin and W. C. Pennell, associated architects.

The additions will be erected jointly by George A. Leighton and W. S. Crane, the former of whom built the present hotel eight years ago from plans drawn by Mr. Austin. Leighton, who is the owner of extensive factory interests in New England, has made his home in Los Angeles for many years and in the last decade has acquired considerable property here. Crane is a member of the Vail-Crane Realty Company and the owner of extensive holdings in this city and vicinity.

The present hotel contains 104 guestrooms and is four stories in height. It has a frontage of 137 feet on Sixth by a depth of 100 feet on Lake street and is set back forty feet from the sidewalk line of the former thoroughfare. The site has a frontage of 350 feet on Sixth street, extending from Alvarado street to Lake street. Its frontage on Alvarado is 325 feet and that on Lake 273 feet. Leighton paid $40 a front foot on Sixth street for the property ten years ago and a much smaller figure for the Lake and Alvarado frontages.

TO FRONT WHOLE BLOCK.

When completed the greater Hotel Leighton will have a frontage of 350 feet, and will extend to the sidewalk lines of both Lake and Alvarado streets. The present Lake-street wing will be carried to the sidewalk line of Sixth street, at which point it will have a height of five stories. A similar wing will be carried out to Sixth street on the Alvarado frontage. The ground area to be covered by the addition extending from the east end of the present building to Alvarado street will be 213x100 feet in size, this not including an inner wing extending from the front of the building to correspond with the present east wing. The building when completed will from the front present the shape of two capital E's set end to end. Still another wing will be extended from the rear of the present structure.

The completed building will contain 284 guestrooms, the addition providing 180 rooms of this character, together with a large new lobby, a public dining-room 60x100 feet in size, two private dining-rooms, a new kitchen and numerous rooms for the use of the hotel help. Several spacious verandas and sleeping porches are also provided for in the addition. The plans call for an average of two baths to every three rooms.

The entire investment represented by the completed building and, figuring in the present value of the site and the cost of the furnishings, will be in excess of $550,000. The site is one of the most desirable and valuable of its character in Los Angeles, directly overlooking, as it does, Westlake Park and the whole of the Westlake and Wilshire districts.

TUNNEL TO ELEVATORS.

The site of the hotel is about ten feet above the sidewalk line, and a feature of the new arrangement will be a tunnel constructed from the street level to meet the elevators in the central portion of the building, making it unnecessary for the guests to ascend even the present short flight of stairs. This tunnel will be handsomely tiled and well lighted.

The new lobby will be finished in marble, tile and scagliola, large columns of the latter material being a feature of the treatment. The ceiling and walls will be handsomely enriched. The present dining-room, 45x70 feet in size, will be converted into a ballroom. The guestrooms of the newer portion will be much larger than those ordinarily found in hotels, the smallest being 13x17 feet and the largest 15x20 feet. All of the bathrooms will have bathtubs built into the floor and will be finished in tile throughout.

The additions will be of brick and of class B construction. The exterior will be plastered to correspond with the present hotel. A noteworthy architectural feature will be two observation towers flanking the central court on either hand. The view from these points of vantage will be magnificent and will take in a panorama extending from Westlake Park to the ocean and in which on clear days the shipping at San Pedro will be clearly visible. Between the two towers will be arranged a roof garden.

None of the courts will be less than forty-eight feet in width and the main court will have a breadth of fifty-eight feet. The arrangement is such that every room will be exposed to the sunshine at some time during the day.

The present Hotel Leighton is famous for its beautiful lawns, and the landscaping feature has been enlarged upon in the plans for the greater hostelry. Across the entire front of the hotel and extending from the Alvarado-street wing to the Lake-street wing the ground will be beautifully set to lawns. Back of the hotel on Lake street will be a strip of lawn 200x80 feet in size, while on the west side of the property 150x150 feet will be available for the same purpose. It is the intention of the owners to set out many rare trees, shrubs and plants.

The architects expect to have the plans for the improvement completed within a month, and the excavations will probably be started about July 15.

WILL ERECT STORES.

Mining Promoter Also Plans Costly Home in Town of Owensmouth. Grain Man Adds to Holdings.

Fred Liser, a mining promoter, has announced his intention of making the new town of Owensmouth his home and the past week purchased a residence lot there through Charles E. Thurston, sales manager with the Janss Investment Company. He will at once have a costly country home erected on Sherman way. Liser also bought business lots and will put up nearly a block of stores for leasing purposes.

W. D. Hamill, a wealthy hay-and-grain merchant, who bought property at Owensmouth several weeks ago, has added six lots to his holdings. Two of these are business sites on Broadway and the other four are residence lots.

W. E. J. Quast, a cement contractor, and his father, J. M. Quast, were among the purchasers of the week. They will erect homes in the town and also business places.

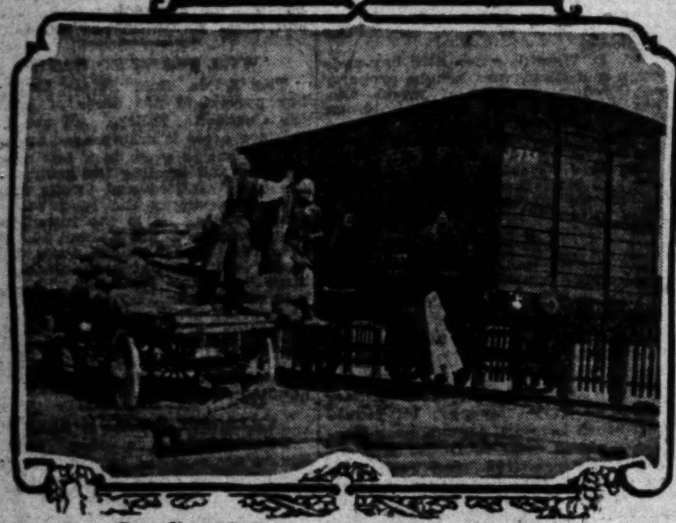
HARD TO SECURE DATE PALMS NOW FOR GREAT CALIFORNIA INDUSTRY.

French Government Prohibits Export of Date Offshoots From Algeria—Altadena Man Plans Trip to the Persian Gulf for Cuttings.



Loading Offshoots at Biskra, Algeria,
For shipment to California.

AS A RESULT of the activity of California agents in Algeria, the French government has decided to prohibit the future export of offshoots of the date palm. Practically all that have been brought to the Coachella and Imperial valleys in recent years were from Algeria, but the French colonists there set up an outcry that Southern California did things on too large a scale, and was carrying the surplus offshoots out of the desert so rapidly that none were left for the French themselves to plant. This competition also had the result of more than doubling the cost of offshoots in the Sahara Desert in a few years, and no Frenchman can tamely submit to having the price of anything raised.

So, as the French colonists are voters, and the Californians are not, it appears that the Golden State will receive no more date palms from the Sahara Desert, and will have to turn elsewhere for the material to build up one of its most promising industries.

Algeria has been furnishing to California the famous Deglet Noor, "or date of the light," which has been planted more extensively than any other in Coachella and Imperial valleys and found to produce fully as good fruit as in the Sahara, where it is the standard of excellence among the natives. It is a transparent brown date, so clear that the outline of the seed can be seen when the fruit is held up to the light, whence its name. It is particularly mild in flavor, but is rich with syrup, so that it melts in the mouth; those whose experience has been confined to the inferior sorts of Persian Gulf dates, the Fard or "Golden," the only ones sold in the local market, have little idea of the surpassing excellence of such a date as the Deglet Noor.

It is this date, grown near Indio, that was eagerly bought at $1 per pound in the Los Angeles market last fall. Not more than twenty-five tons were produced altogether in the United States during the last season, but the crop next October should be large enough to give a great many people the opportunity to eat home-grown dates fresh from the palm.

What is probably the last shipment of date offshoots to be made from Algeria to California arrived last week. Approximately 3000 offshoots were included, gathered in the desert by Bernard G. Johnson of Mecca, who is one of the pioneers of the industry and for a time had charge of the government date farm there. It is not yet known how many of this shipment are Deglet Noor, nor for whom they are intended, Mr. Johnson having gone there as an agent.

Two weeks ago a shipment of 1000, exclusively Deglet Noor, came from Paul B. Popenoe, who was sent out by the West India Gardens, a subtropical nursery of Altadena. Of this consignment, 600 went to Dr. Rebecca Lee Dorsey of No. 678 Pacific Electric building, Los Angeles, and her partner, R. R. Bray, who have a large ranch near Indio. The rest were divided between D. H. Gillan of Altadena, who is planting near Indio, and Moyer & Gilbert of Los Angeles, whose ranch is near Coachella; Mr. Gillan receiving the largest number.

The third shipment to be made this year arrived three weeks ago for the American Date Company of Los Angeles, whose plantation is at Durbrow, in the Coachella Valley. It comprised approximately 1100 offshoots, of which 600 are said to have been Deglet Noor.

Offshoots are planted from twenty-five to forty to the acre, and as they are worth $8 apiece, at least, the importations of this spring represent a commerce of some magnitude. The co-operative date orchard at Tempe, Ariz., run by the University of Arizona and the Department of Agriculture, parts with its surplus offshoots at that price, but many of them are of little known varieties. Fred N. Johnson of Indio, who has some fine Deglet Noors, is reported to have sold a few offshoots of this variety recently at $27 each.

Then there is the famous Menakher date of Tunis, which the government imported some years ago, and has growing in the Coachella Valley. It is practically extinct in its old home, although one of the largest and finest dates grown in the world. The story is that in the old days of despotic rule there the Beys of Tunis used to locate all the Menakher trees in the kingdom and then command the owners to sell their product to the royal family, as the royal family always saw that prompt delivery was made, and invariably forgot to pay. The growers of this superlative variety became so disgusted that they cut down the trees to avoid further extortion. Government agents have valued offshoots from the one large tree in Coachella Valley at $300 each, but none are for sale.

The future field for offshoots, as far as Southern California growers are concerned, will undoubtedly be the Persian Gulf. Excellent varieties are to be found there, and many of them have been brought over by the Department of Agriculture, and found to succeed perfectly. So far no commercial importations have been made from that region, because of its remoteness, but it will be visited next winter for shipments on a large scale, since the industry has reached a point in Southern California where it must have an abundant supply of offshoots to develop property. As profits are conservatively estimated at $500 per acre, and palms bear profitably for a century or more, the growers feel that they can afford to incur some initial expense in order to get well started.

The problem of scale diseases, which for a while threatened the life of the culture, seems to have been entirely solved. The Parlatoria scale, which in the past was eradicated only by burning with a gasoline torch, and the Marlatt scale, even more dangerous, have been found to succumb to the Barucco spray. All the offshoots brought in this year from Algeria were treated with this insecticide as soon as unloaded from the cars at the Coachella Valley, and Horticultural Commissioner R. H. Cundiff of Riverside county, who supervised the work, expressed the opinion that such treatment settled the question of these scales in such a way as to leave no room for alarm, but to make the date industry one of the most promising in the State. This feeling of confidence is shared by Bruce Drummond, in charge of the government's experimental station at Mecca, who has also taken a prominent part in the experiments on scale control and

Capitalists Colonize Noted Santa Monica Home Park, Making it a Veritable Community of Wealth

Brentwood Park is to Los Angeles what Brookline is to Boston—what Atlantic City is to New York and what Lake Shore Drive is to Chicago

The time of the isolated country estate is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. This is the age when those of huge means and large attainments want to build up entire communities as monuments to their achievements, instead of the individual country estate of a century ago.

Nowhere on earth do the natural conditions make possible such kingly homes for the man of means, on so elaborate a scale as do those in Santa Monica; though here also, the man of even much limited means is coddled in luxury.

In Santa Monica nature, man-made improvements and general location combine to provide for every resident the highest ideal in home advantages, and life seems indeed as the poet sings, "A rich strain of music, suggesting a realm too fair to be."

Santa Monica, like a strand of so many jewels, set here and there, with some most costly gem, is made up of a number of subdivisions; each designed to fill some particular need. Some are planned to meet the exact requirements of the immensely wealthy, with magnificent parkings and imposing driveways to add the desired touch of exclusive aristocracy to the particular place. Others are designed to fill the needs of those with more limited incomes; until Santa Monica as a whole can well be regarded as perhaps the most cosmopolitan beach city there is.

Though Santa Monica practically appeals to all, from the middle classes up, each resident can depend on being as exclusive as he desires, choosing his home in the particular subdivision which he prefers and thereby mingling with only those of his own choice.

BRENTWOOD PARK APPEALS TO EXCLUSIVE ARISTOCRACY.

The picturesque subdivision, Brentwood Park, is one of those places in Santa Monica, particularly designed for the man or woman who wants to take up his abode with the elite of California; to those who delight to live in quiet restfulness amidst a scene of transcendant splendor. This far-famed property is to Los Angeles what the various millionaire colonies of the big cities of the United States are to their respective cities.

Recent report has it, that St. Louis is to add another millionaire colony to her present exclusive home places and parks. The writer who speaks of it, describes with much gusto its country club to be provided with the various suitable games for its residents; also saying that with this addition to St. Louis, there will be no further need of the usual outflow of the wealth of St. Louis to the beaches and the mountains each summer.

Residents of Brentwood Park can look almost pityingly at the homelife afforded by such colonies, though they be lavished with all of the combined wealth of the respective cities, in which they are established, their glory is indeed dwarfed when compared in any detail, with the magnificence of such a place as Brentwood Park.

In Brentwood the magnate may erect as elaborate and as costly a home as his heart desires; surrounded on all sides by edifices of almost if not equal splendor. Here he has at his command not only one of the finest country clubs in the West, provided with all of the advantages and pleasure facilities that that would involve; but he has also within equally close range some of the most noted automobile roads in the world.

Again in Brentwood Park, the resident does not have to create beauty of setting in which to establish his home. Nature has provided this on so bountiful a scale that words prove inadequate in even affording barest description. As to its parkings, boulevards and shrubbery, a landscape artist, of wide note, has planned these, importing his flowers, plants and trees from the four quarters of the globe, and laying the whole out in a manner that has attracted the comment of the most traveled visitors.

RESIDENTS OF BRENTWOOD HAVE THEIR OWN MOUNTAIN AND SEASHORE RESORT.

Perhaps one of the most important of all the features relative to Brentwook Park is the fact that its residents never have to migrate, whether in the midst of the summer, or in winter, its climate is always so near perfection that it is ever the best place to be. Compare a winter so balmy and delightful that its parks and its strand are a veritable playground the season through, as in Santa Monica, with the snow-banked condition of the entire Middle West and East during the same period. Compare the summers of Santa Monica, so cool and pleasant that a street coat suit is never uncomfortable, with the burning heat that practically blights the greater portion of the East for three months of the year.

Consider also, the greatest factor of all, the mountain and beach resorts which mean so much cost and effort to the eastern city man. These are no more to a Brentwood resident than a few minutes' walk or automobile ride, for this is all that is required of those living in Brentwood to gain either.

The homes of Brentwood Park are among the handsomest in the West. These are not built on the usual city lines; but are big, palatial edifices, in harmony with the usual requirements of the English country estate home. Comfort seems to form as much a part of their various details of construction and appointments as beauty.

One of the residents of Brentwood Park, who purchased the entire southeastern portion of it lying along the foothills, is establishing one of the most magnificent suburban homesites in the entire West. It is so arranged that it embraces one of the most picturesque hills of the range, with its two great canyons which border it on each side. These are to be utilized in the scheme of embellishment, to be planted to shrubbery from all over the world in representation of the three zones. It is to have a large mirror lake; also, winding driveways and superb sunken gardens.

Santa Monica.

BUILDING RECORDS WILL BE BROKEN.

GREAT EARLY JUNE ACTIVITY ON CRESCENT BAY.

[illegible] of Much-Needed Marine-street Sewer Problem of South Residents—Aerial Railway Franchise Referred to Committee of Leading Citizens.

SANTA MONICA, June 8.—May was a lively building month in Santa Monica and the evidences at this time are that June will also fracture a number of records. The number of permits issued during the first week of the month is larger and the expenditure represented is greater than that for the first six days of any previous June in the history of the city. During April there were eighty-[illegible] permits, which represented [illegible]. May came forward with eighty permits for $120,170. These permits were nearly all for bungalows and cottages in the residence districts, there having been no large buildings.

The law making it illegal to attempt to vote bonds for the same purpose more than once within a year, the city will be forced to attempt the construction of the Marine-street sewer with funds raised in some other manner. The City Council had ordered the call for an election and was ready with estimates when along came the City Attorney with a report that, as the same question had been voted upon within a year, some other method would have to be employed in raising the money. While this condition will delay the building of the sewer, in the end the purpose will not be defeated, as public necessity demands the construction of the improvement.

UP IN THE AIR.

After having decided to offer an aerial railway franchise for sale to the highest bidder, the Council has this time changed its mind and the matter of preparing a franchise has been referred to a committee of citizens who are admittedly unfriendly toward the project. The advertisement was ordered for the sale and after it had been running for several days the order to stop it was given. This was in response to protests. Then the decision was reached to amend the franchise to overcome the objections that had been presented. When these came up for consideration the 5-cent fare promised between the beach and Los Angeles appeared as the rock upon which negotiations were split. The Fawkes aerial railway people had voluntarily offered this rate, when it was discovered that the city had no authority to regulate rates outside of the city. This coupled with the fact that the company has no franchise or right of way over county territory beyond the east limits of Santa Monica, was responsible for the delay of positive action.

Mayor Dow recommended that the aerial trolley be given careful investigation both as relates to its merits and possibilities and the technicalities of the franchise before Fremont avenue be tied up, and this recommendation had considerable to do with the deference of action by the Council. The argument advanced was that Fremont avenue was being held open as the route over which a competing line of rail might be built to connect Los Angeles with the sea. Huntington with his yellow cars at the western gates of Los Angeles has frequently looked with covetous eye upon this route and once upon a time made application for a franchise here. It is believed that he will one day renew this application.

Work will soon be commenced on the extension of the broad concrete walk northward from the municipal pier at Colorado avenue in the direction of Santa Monica Canyon. This promenade fronts on the ocean and will be protected at this point by concrete bulkheads. The contract now under consideration will add 1000 feet to the total frontage and on September 1 work will be started on another section of equal length. This walk starts below Venice, down toward Playa del Rey, and extends in an unbroken line through Venice and the entire beach settlement and amusement centers.

By private contract the streets in the Bundy tract in the northeastern part of the city will be immediately oil-paved, and equipped with concrete sidewalks and curbs. There will be in the aggregate several miles of this new work. The graders have already commenced their work and the water pipes are being laid. The new residential district will receive its water supply from the new $25,000 reservoir now in course of construction at the top of the high hill in Ethylwyn Manor.

PASADENAN BUYS LOTS. CHURCH WELL UNDER WAY.

AZUSA, June 8.—The Case Realty Company reports the sale for T. D. Mount of Pasadena, to I. D. Roach of Azusa, of three lots in the Mountain View tract.

B. C. Robinson has sold his house and one-acre walnut grove on Citrus avenue, near Center street, to Arthur M. Brown, the consideration being $2000. Robinson has bought the Henry L. Wood house on San Gabriel avenue, between Third and Fourth streets, which he will put into condition for a home.

The members of the Christian Church are putting up a fine church building on Azusa avenue near Sixth street. The work is being done by the day, T. J. Sutton being in charge of the construction. The improvement will cost something over $4000.

Charles Robinson, who recently sold his ranch southeast of town, has given the contract for a five-room bungalow on San Gabriel avenue, near Sixth street.

WATER SUPPLY INSURED.

One of the largest reservoirs near Los Angeles for irrigation purposes is being built on North Lankershim acres, under direction of the Janss Investment Company. The big cement-lined pool will hold approximately 5,000,000 gallons of water and will be kept full through the entire year by the flow from a large well. Much of the developed land on North Lankershim acres, which is adjacent to the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands of the San Fernando Valley, is supplied by wells privately developed by the owners. The construction of the reservoir is to insure an unfailing supply for the entire tract and especially to give water to lands not yet planted. At no great depth the water-bearing sand is found.

MYSTERIOUS WALNUT OPENS.

The campaign of publicity of the National Home and Town Builders, in which the mysterious walnut has figured so strongly, has reached the point of the disclosure of the secret—that of the opening of Walnut Terrace—a home tract five miles south of the business center of the city. The tract lies across the street from the fine walnut grove which comprises the northern border of the Cudahy ranch, and adjoins the Huntington Park district. Walnut Terrace is divided into lots and half-acres, all covered with walnut trees. The tract is being offered for sale by the National Home and Town Builders.

MAY ACTIVE MONTH.

Glendale's Building Permits for Monthh Totaled Forty-five—Vineyard to Be Subdivided.

GLENDALE, June 8.—During the month of May forty-five building permits were granted in this city by Building Inspector J. M. Banker, these totaling up to $40,120. This list included one $4500 dwelling, one $3000 dwelling, two $2500 homes, three $2000 residences and six $1500 dwellings.

N. C. Kelly has disposed of a lot of the Casa Verdugo Villa tract on Melrose avenue to Frank Weetman, formerly of Bryn Mawr, Pa., who will erect a bungalow to cost about $5000. Kelley has also sold to C. M. Carr, a house and lot at No. 1125 Melrose avenue, the consideration being reported at $3800. E. B. Wyman has purchased two lots on Putman street just north of Randolph avenue, upon which he will at once erect two bungalows to cost about $3000 each. Two bungalows to cost about $3500 each are being erected by N. W. Goldstone on Stocker street.

Wilmot Parcher has sold his place on Glendale avenue, consisting of three acres and a house, to Frank L. Muhleman, Homer D. Brown and L. W. Chobe. The purchasers will at once erect a number of attractive bungalows.

P. Ghiglia has sold his vineyard lying on the west side of the city and consisting of about twenty acres to an Eagle Rock real estate firm, the price paid being about $30,000. Immediately after the crop of grapes for this year has been harvested this land will be subdivided into building lots and put on the market.

At the corner of Cypress street and Brand boulevard, Hal H. Davenport will at once erect a brick business block which will probably result in the establishing of a business district at this point on the electric line. The building will be two stories, will contain four storerooms on the main floor, with offices and apartments above, and will cost in the neighborhood of $12,000.

The water question is at this time interesting many. The remodeled Water Commission appointed by Mayor Thomas W. Watson consists of H. P. Coker, O. A. Lane, Thomas W. Watson, E. U. Emery, A. W. Tower, E. D. Goode, R. A. Blackburn, F. H. Vesper, C. H. Bott, F. J. Showalter, Dave Carney, F. H. Muhleman, A. P. Offutt, J. W. Flower, J. B. Lockwood, C. J. Letts, J. W. Adams, J. C. Sherer, Allen C. Ady and John Robert White. A special committee to investigate the feasibility of this city obtaining the Owens River water consists of R. A. Blackburn, E. D. Goode and E. H. Muhleman, while a committee consisting of E. U. Emery, F. J. Showalter and Thomas W. Watson has been selected to investigate the Verdugo Canyon water proposition. These committies will meet next Thursday evening to report progress.

The City Trustees have instructed City Engineer Edward M. Lynch to prepare plans for the opening of a new sixty-foot street through the Child's tract. This street is to start at Sycamore Canyon and will run through the tract as far south as Sixth street. It will be a mile and a half long.

CANNERY PROJECTED. WILL BE STARTED AT ONCE.

EL SEGUNDO, June 8.—Work on the erection of a cannery to employ over 200 hands, and to cost over $200,000 will be started within the next fifteen days at El Segundo for the El Segundo Canning Company, a concern composed of local capitalists. The factory will be constructed by local contractors and will be completed within three months.

It is the purpose of the El Segundo Canning Company to can every variety of vegetable and fruit product of Southern California. It is planned to handle the products for both domestic and foreign trade.

It is understood that the Standard Oil Company is interested in the stock of the new company, and in the plant itself. Other stock is held by local capitalists. Among the officers of the new concern are E. I. McCray, president and general manager of the El Segundo Land and Improvement Company, and M. B. O'Farrell, assistant secretary and sales manager of the same concern.

The five-acre tract set aside at El Segundo for the cannery is but a short distance from the Standard Oil Company's $3,000,000 refinery, and on the tracks of the Santa Fe railroad. It is but a short distance from the El Segundo water-front, and it is understood negotiations are on at present with the Standard Oil wharf when completed. Company to permit the use of its

TEACHERS VISIT HARBOR.

Many school teachers from Los Angeles visited the harbor and Wilgary yesterday as the guests of the F. P. Newport company. They formed a class in instruction upon harbor subjects and studied both the inner and outer harbor from three launches provided by the company. Lecturers in each launch pointed out the tremendous development work being done and those contemplated within the $3,000,000 harbor bond fund and the $227,000 provided by the Federal government. Today two excursions will leave the Pacific Electric depot at 9:30 a. m. and 1:30 p.m. The guests of the company will be taken on launch rides through the harbors and then landed upon the tract. Other excursions will be run next Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

Van der Kulen. The structure will be handsomely faced with cream-colored pressed brick. The entrance will have Italian marble steps and Mexican onyx wainscoting. The building will contain fifty-three rooms, exclusive of the amusement-room, the lobby and the sun parlor on the roof, and will be equipped with an automatic electric elevator. The house will have steam heat, private baths and shower baths on each floor. The building has been leased for a term of ten years by Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Weis, and at a total rental of $44,400. Pasadena.

CITY GARBAGE TO BE BURNED.

Big Incinerator Plant Soon to Be Started.

Capacity Is Great Enough for Future Requirements.

Ground Broken for University Campus Group.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PASADENA, June 8.—William C. Crowell, who has the contract for erecting the city garbage incinerator, has taken the preliminary steps toward raising the $46,000 structure, on the east side of South Raymond avenue, 300 feet north of Glenarm street. The ground has been cleared preparatory to the excavating.

The building is to be equivalent to a two-story structure and will be constructed of reinforced concrete. The chimney will be 155 feet high and there will be four grates, giving the plant a capacity for burning ninety tons of garbage every twenty-four hours, or forty tons in eight hours. To take care of all of the garbage of the city, the plant will have to be operated at the rate of fifteen or twenty tons a day, it is estimated by City Engineer Van Ornum. The terms of the contract allow 135 days for the completion of the plant.

BUILDING IS BEGUN.

While the student body assembled and sang, Dr. P. F. Bresee, of Los Angeles, and Dr. E. P. Ellyson, president of the college, last Wednesday broke ground for the projected $100,000 new building that is to be erected on the campus of the Nazarene University, northeast of Pasadena, this summer. The new structure will be the Deets Pacific Bible College and will make a handsome addition to the university.

MAKING RAPID HEADWAY.

RAILWAY WORK ADVANCING.

VAN NUYS, June 8.—The Pacific Electric Company is making rapid headway with the extensions of its lines from Van Nuys to Owensmouth and San Fernando. During the past week a small army of men were placed at work and materials are being rushed to the scene of operations as fast as transportation facilities will permit. Headquarters for the construction work has been opened in the First National Bank building in this town.

Maj. J. A. Driffill, general manager of the Oxnard plant of the American Beet Sugar Company, which will use the beets being raised here, was in Van Nuys several days this week and stated that the beet crop in this section promises exceedingly good results. The company has had much trouble this season in securing labor to thin and care for the beets, but a few weeks will see all the thinning in this field complete.

The F. O. Engstrum Building Company of Los Angeles has commenced work on the $4500 sub-station of the Southern California Edison Company on East C street. The distributing system of the Edison company for furnishing light and power to Van Nuys will be started on Monday.

It is expected that the $50,000 grammar school, which is being erected by Ye Planry Building Company, will be ready for occupancy about September 1. Several teachers have already been selected by the school trustees.

John J. Shinners will start the erection of a handsome apartment-house on West F street, within a few days. Such a building will materially help conditions in Van Nuys, as at the present time it is almost impossible to rent houses or rooms.

The beautiful contour Avenues and Boulevards of Hillhurst Park are to be similarly treated.

Gainsborough and Cromwell, Glendower and Aberdeen, Inverness and Commonwealth Avenues—all will be treated in a manner befitting this, the highest class residence section of the city. Dundee Drive and the other scenic drives of the tract wind in and out, across and around the innumerable eminences, each a most attractive site for an exclusive home.

Building restrictions varying from $10,000 to $25,000 in various parts of Hillhurst Park, assure for this entire tract a character of homes and purchasers that will leave nothing to be desired. Nature has done a great deal for Hillhurst Park. The residence sites vary from 500 to 800 feet above sea level—are all above the fog and frost line, and have a climate which permits the growing here of all the tropical fruits, plants, shrubs and flowers. Pineapples, bananas, mangoes, alligator pears, dates, etc. All these are grown here out of doors, whereas residence sites on the low or flat land are devoid of such plant life, excepting possibly in greenhouses.

We are proud to show Hillhurst Park to those interested in such a property. Our automobiles are at your service. We shall be glad to give you such further information as might be desired. The topography of Hillhurst Park is so varied that early inspection and choice are most advisable.

device, which is the first of the kind to be built in this country, is to be located at the rear of the Venice bathhouse. A cable will extend to the end of the pier and passengers will be carried in little cage-like baskets to the end of the line and there dipped into the ocean.

The City Trustees have granted a liquor license for the proposed new hotel, and the promise is made that within a week work will be under way on this modern eight-story structure. The hotel is to be of reinforced concrete and will extend from Ocean Front to Speedway, thus giving three frontages and affording light and air for every room. The contract has been let and the promise is that it will be completed and ready for formal opening by early next summer. The cost of the improvement is given at $500,000.

Again work is being rushed on the construction of the captive aeroplane and the intent is to have this riding device completed and ready for operation by midsummer. Work is also being hurried along at the Virginia Reel, which is also promised as one of the late summer attractions. Added forces have been put on in building the new pier at Navy street, and at least the shore end will be ready for the accommodation of late summer crowds. The cavern will be protected by a concrete bulkhead, which is now being placed in position.

At the same time plans are being developed for the erection of a new concrete pier at Center street. This is to cost $75,000, and the application for it is now being considered by the City Trustees. A. Stutzer has made this application and petitions asking that the permit be granted are now in circulation and are being generously signed.

PLANS CHALET HOME.

Railway Official to Build Commodious and Picturesque Dwelling of Ten Rooms in Laurel Canyon.

Plans have just been completed by Alfred F. Priest for an unusually attractive dwelling of the mountain chalet type which is to be erected by H. V. Platt, general superintendent of the Southern Pacific Railway, on the main county road in Laurel Canyon. Bids for the construction of the house are now being taken.

The grounds are sightly and have a frontage of 133 feet by a depth of 190 feet. The house will be of shakes and heavy timber, the foundations and porch columns being of natural stone from the canyon. The site will be beautifully landscaped and will be entirely enclosed with a stone wall.

The lower floor of the house will contain five rooms. The living-room, dining-room and library will be in hard wood. Five chambers will be provided on the second floor, together with dressing rooms and two baths. The upstairs finish will be in white enamel.

JAPANESE IN TEXAS.

They Operate Twenty-five Farms Which Contain About Fifteen Thousand Acres—Making Money.

[Boston Transcript:] Though the United States census of 1890 revealed but three Japanese in the State of Texas, a population that in 1910 had been increased by only ten persons, and though it seems likely that this alien element does not greatly exceed 100 in number, there are certain sections in which the Japanese have already begun to play a disproportionate part in agricultural operations. One reason for their success is, of course, the surpassing fertility of the soil, but a better explanation is that the men are intelligent and have capital. The greater number are graduates of Japanese high schools, who speak English, and practically all fetched money with them. Six heads of families were found by the United States Immigration Commission to have had between $500 and $2500, eight had between $2500 and $5000 and four had over $10,000. At present, according to the figures given by the Japanese themselves, they operate twenty-five farms, aggregating 12,642 acres of land owned and 2346 acres leased. The largest farm contains 3500 acres. It cost $72,000 and it produces a crop of rice that sells for about $47,000. The average farm is one of 515 acres, and a survey of all the farms shows a value ranging from $32 to $56 an acre.

The Texas correspondent of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, from which these statistics are quoted, writes with a breadth of sentiment and a fullness of detail that tend to carry conviction. The Japanese are good farmers, he says; hardy, diligent workers who make every inch of ground produce something, who clear ditches, build new canals, keep their buildings in repair, and, as they make money, return most of it to the place in the form of improvements and live stock. When they employ American help, as they frequently do, they pay the "going wages" without demur, and on the other hand they find Americans good customers, since the vegetables sold by the Japanese truck farmer are always fresher, cleaner and more attractive in appearance than can be found elsewhere. The strangers are slovenly housekeepers, one reason being that most of them are single men who are satisfied with simple menu and have no invincible predjudice against domestic dirt; but this is the severest criticism the correspondent brings against them. There is no ill-feeling, he says, between Japanese and Americans. Most of the farms are so large that the occupants are practically isolated, but when occasion serves the Japanese are willing to mingle with their neighbors, to learn American ways and to adopt American customs, and the Americans give them every chance.

FUTURE MOVING PICTURES.

Men of Note Who Do Not Want Themselves Exhibited May Have Their Films Impounded in Lifetime.

[New York Sun:] It seems strange that there are still some famous persons who are not willing to have their greatness rolled out to the public view in the manner of the "movies." To present these delicate souls before the public eye at a time in which their sensitiveness will be safe the picture makers have invented a plan by which the public will be satisfied and the feelings of the subjects will not suffer.

To the celebrity who does not feel equal to the shock of seeing himself thrown on the screen while at work or while engaged in what is described as his "favorite diversion" the company will give a bond of as many thousands of dollars as may be necessary not to show such pictures in the lifetime of the subject. To insure this result the films are to be deposited in a vault to which both the original and the company have keys. Not until after the death of the original are the films to be displayed, and then there is considerable financial compensation for the family of the subject. The company will further console the relatives of the deceased with the presentation for their own private use of "a positive reel of film to be made of the standard length of 1000 feet." This is to be displayed only in the privacy of the family.

The King of England, Czar Nicholas and "many prominent Americans" are to be among the subjects of this new kind of picture, which will be strictly limited as to subject, in order that only the genuinely great may be represented in this post-mortem gallery. The company expects to encounter no difficulty in getting as many persons as it considers worthy of the honor.

It is the reproduction on the screen of some actual incident that most interests the public and brings a larger return that any other kind of picture so long as the interest in it continues. Such events are not frequent enough to supply films that will meet the demand today for entertainments of this kind. The wise providers of these views are therefore seeking a future supply in a quarter that is certain to yield interesting subjects if they are really willing to fall in with their plans.

THE RISE OF CLUBS IN LOS ANGELES.

Reminiscences of Our Leading Clubs and Their Well-known Habitues.

BY A VETERAN CLUBMAN.

The formal opening of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, which ranks alongside with the highest and most noted clubs in New York and San Francisco, New Orleans and Los Angeles, adds degree and distinction to our city at home and abroad, and ranks as the most elegant and costly of its actual kind in the United States, and will very shortly become as well known as our California and Jonathan, which are the equals of the Pacific-Union and Bohemian of San Francisco and the Union and Union League and the Manhattan and Knickerbocker of New York.

At the present time, Los Angeles, according to its population, is as much at the head of the procession with its clubs as it is with its bank clearings and postal receipts, its magnificent buildings and building statistics, its police and fire department, its urban and interurban electric railways, its water and lighting systems, its libraries and newspapers, its charities and educational systems, its churches and theaters, its automobiles and sports, its markets and stores, its hotels and cafes, its nearby mountain and seaside resorts and its high social and other conditions.

But even before the Jonathan, the California and our other up-to-date clubs, there was a number of such resorts in Los Angeles, most of which came to grief, however, or only enjoyed a high-class but ephemeral existence. As early as 1853 there was a so-called club on Main street near Commercial, which lasted until 1856, and where such men as Capt. J. Bankhead Magruder, afterwards a major-general in the Confederate army; Capt. Winfield Scott Hancock, who became a major-general in the Union army, and was the most conspicious commander at Gettysburg; Capt. Harvey, who married a sister of Gov. John G. Downey; Maj Hancock; Capt. Ord and Capt. Hansen, well known early-day surveyors; Gen. Andres Pico; Don Abel Stearns; the Wellus brothers, merchants; F. P. F. Temple and a few others, semi-occasionally met to discuss matters of local interest and to read and listen to the news from the San Francisco Alta and Bulletin.

Still later a number of Jewish merchants used to meet in a little adobe on Commercial street one night each week to read the news from San Francisco and "the States," and to discuss wine and wool and other interests; and often O. W. Childs, John G. Nichols, Joseph S. Mallard and others attended these weekly gatherings; the assemblage was not called a club and there was no president nor secretary, but the members "chipped in" once in a while to pay for candles, and San Francisco newspapers and for other small necessities. Upon the breaking out of the Civil War these gatherings came to an end, as nearly all the members were secessionists or Southern sympathizers, the only three Union men being John G. Nichols, Joseph S. Mallard and Simon Bolivar Cox; and there were only a few other Union men in Los Angeles at that time—Maj. Hancock, the surveyor; O. W. Childs, Mathew Keller and possibly a dozen others.

In 1894 Tommie Rowan, W. J. Brodrick, Albert Johnson, John M. Baldwin, Billy Rowland and half a dozen others met once a month at a French restaurant opposite the Pico House at a 6-o'clock dinner, where the good things of the season were amply discussed and considerable champagne and San Gabriel wines were forever put out of sight. This gathering was christened the "Canvasback Club" by the editor of the Star, partly because every one who attended dinner from October until March was served among other viands with one of these incomparable birds, which could be purchased from duck hunters, sometimes for $1 and never rising above $2 a dozen; and it may be added, mallards for about the same price and all others for 10 cents a brace; dove and quail were 50 cents a dozen and fish and meats about 5 cents per pound. This club lasted for about a year, or until, one by one, all the members unceremoniously dropped out.

The first regular club in Los Angeles was established in the second story of the present building on Spring street opposite the Bullard block in the latter part of 1895, and was called the "Union Club." Its founders were a number of small "remittance" men and two or three other Englishmen, who furnished it in elegant style throughout and stored it with fine champagnes and Burgundies purchased in France and with whiskies direct from Kentucky. It recruited between fifty and sixty members from the leading men of the city, but the founders purchased nearly everything on credit, paid a secretary and bartender each a substantial salary, but paid no bill that they could avoid, and with the exception of Capts. Tomlinson and Hutchinson (and the American members) paid no dues and kept no wash accounts. This went on for about eighteen months, when the Americans took matters in their own hands, disincorporated, sold all they could at auction, put heir hands in their pockets and paid the club's indebtedness in full.

The California Club soon afterward came into existence, a majority of its charter members having been the American element of the former Union Club. This new organization held forth on a second floor on the northeast corner of Temple and New High streets, but moved to an upper floor of the Wilcox Block upon the completion of that building in 1897, where it remained until its occupation of its pretentious quarters in its own structure on the northwest corner of Hill and Fifth streets. In the meantime the Jews had established their Concordia Club, and the Olympics had secured quarters on Spring street. Later came the Union League Club and other organizations.

In 1894 the Sunset Club had its rise, mainly through the efforts of Charlie Willard, L. E. Mosher, Fred Alles, Louis Vetter and Enoch Knight, and in some respects it is the most unique and enjoyable of all the clubs in Los Angeles. It has seventy-five members, composed of editors and authors, lawyers and physicians, bankers and capitalists, merchants and mining men, architects and real-estate operators, school superintendents and college professors, insurance men and railway men, and judges and preachers. Among the latter are Bishops Conaty and Johnson and Rev. Jones and Lee. Three railroads and three newspapers are represented, three college professors and three judges of our Superior courts, four bankers and one capitalist, two architects and two civil engineers, and such others as Wiggins, Burnham, Huntington, Vetter, O'Melveny and Alles. The Sunsetters have a dinner the last Friday of every month at about the sunset hour, after which a paper is read by some member selected by the Programme Committee, which is followed by a general discussion of said paper; and as there are many good thinkers and talkers in the club the symposium is a veritable crackerjack of mirth and flow of soul. These Sunsetters have a midsummer and Christmas jinks annually, at which they make juveniles of themselves and make things hum accordingly.

The Newman Club was established some ten or twelve years ago, and in some respects is largely along the lines of the Sunset and has a membership of about 100, but devotes its readings and debates to Catholic instead of all-round secular topics.

Then there is the Architectural Club, which has pretentious quarters and several hundred members; and there used to be the Stein Club, on Spring street, where only beer was consumed; but it went out of existence a few weeks after the death of Capt. Gilbert Overton, nearly ten years ago.

Country clubs and golf links have subsequently come along in Los Angeles county, some of them comparing favorably with any like properties in the United States, the Country Club, owned by Los Angeles people, being one of the most pretentious and valuable, splendid and picturesque, bordered by near-by foothills and valleys and enlivened by tree and herb and flower and redolent of spices from far-off Cathay. The Annandale Club also is a selected acreage of enchanting domain, and there are club grounds at Venice and Santa Monica and the Bolsa Chica and other duck-hunting preserves.

And The Times writer is reminded that as early as 1875 a man named Charlie Johnson established a really first-class clubhouse at Santa Monica; that a little Frenchman named Eugene Aune gave club dinners of sea foods at Santa Monica in 1875, and had as members Tommie Rowan, Tom Mott, Maj. Mitchell, Erskine Ross, Walter Maxwell, W. J. Brodrick, A. W. Potts and others, while at what is now La Playa "Will Tell" and his wife served up midnight suppers of sea food to scores of visitors every night from the years 1874 to 1877, and that the oceanside inn was called "Will Tell's Midnight Clubhouse." These places were truly constellations on the face of the earth.

BURGLARS STEAL CHECKS.

Burglars made a raid on the California building, Second street and Broadway, last night, and, after attempting to break into several rooms in the building, succeeded in gaining entrance to the offices of A. W. Riewe & Co., contractors and builders. They broke open a desk and took six checks, aggregating $400. The checks were drawn on the German-American Bank and were signed by Martha Fanslow. They were numbered from 134 to 139.

That is the rule whose following has made many a man wealthy.

And Commerce's next big move will be in the direction of Los Angeles Harbor—San Pedro.

It seems funny to think of San Pedro, our own San Pedro, as a port of world importance, doesn't it? But that's just what it is becoming.

When representatives of all the world's biggest shipping interests call to inspect a harbor, that harbor occupies a strategic position. Men of this stamp have seen San Pedro, marvelled at it, and recommended it to their companies as a port of call.

Don't let this fact get past you for a minute. San Pedro HAS ARRIVED. And any property in the vicinity of San Pedro is worth whatever you have to pay to get it.

You Can Buy a Residential or Industrial Lot in HARBOR CITY

THE INDUSTRIAL HUB OF SAN PEDRO

for $400, on Easy Terms

And shrewd, far-seeing investors are placing their money in this high, dry, fertile, well improved property, secure in the knowledge that land in the vicinity of the harbor that is to make Los Angeles a city of millions, is the best investment in the world. Also, they know that in dealing with a firm of the calibre of this one, they are taking no chances.

One of the sales we recorded last week was to an engineering expert from France, who bought a big block of land in Harbor City. It is this man's profession to uncover possibilities in harbors. He uncovered so many in the vicinity of San Pedro, that he felt bound, in justice to himself, to invest there.

It will pay you in hard, cold, round dollars to look at Harbor City today. It is near San Pedro and Wilmington. You'll enjoy the ride. It takes only a short time on the big P. E. cars, via the Gardena-San Pedro line.

You'll find a thriving community. You'll find other enthusiastic buyers and see-ers. You'll find, at your service, men who will not try to sell you property, but who will merely give you good, sound, practical, common-sense reasons why Harbor City is the best buy for you.

CHICAGO'S BIG LABOR UNREST.

[illegible] in the Throes of Industrial Conflicts.

[illegible] of the Strikes that Vex Many Occupations.

[illegible] Account of Kickups in Newspaper Offices.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CHICAGO, June 1.—Chicago is today in the throes of industrial conflict. Agitation of the Socialistic brand is rampant in the city. More than 10,000 men in various crafts are on strike and the number is increasing daily. Some, like the railroad freight handlers, are striking for better wages, but a majority are on strike for, they know not what, and apparently they do not care.

"Strike fever" comes in periodical waves and when such a wave spreads over a great industrial center all the workers are more or less permeated with its virus. It may attack some in a slight degree, so that they merely become "sympathizers," while others suffer a severe attack and become "militant strikers."

Ten years ago Chicago suffered from a wave of labor organization which brought its accompanying crop of strikes. The spirit of organization filled the air to such an extent that during the summer of 1902 it was not an unusual thing to see half a dozen new unions organized on a single Sunday. Every available hall in the down-town section of the city would be filled every evening and Sunday afternoon with men and women eager to join labor unions. Conservative estimates placed the number of men and women organized into unions that year in the city at between 50,000 and 100,000, while some estimates far exceeded that number.

With the organization of the workers came the organization of the employers, and demands, where they were unreasonable were met with determined opposition. Many of the newly-formed unions went out on strike and met their Waterloo and gradually the wave receded. The strike of the butcher workmen in the stockyards in 1904, and of the teamsters in 1905, brought the city a period of comparative rest. In both strikes the workers were badly beaten and it proved an effective remedy for the strike fever.

While the city was not free from strikes in the succeeding years up to 1911, those which occurred were less spectacular, attended with less violence and so attracted comparatively little attention. Here it may be said that the strike unattended with violence is never very serious, for the reason that it always is possible to find workers ready and eager to work if they are not deterred through fear of bodily injury.

SOAP BOX ORATORS.

The present situation resembles in many respects the situation of ten years ago. Talk of strikes and "class struggle" can be heard on every street corner. Soap box orators rant against the "capitalist class" on the streets, and Socialist agitators attend every meeting of a labor union where they can gain an entrance and urge the workers on to strike.

Of the three principal strikes in the city at the present time, the freight handlers; the shop employees of the Illinois Central Railroad, and the pressmen, stereotypers, delivery drivers and newsboys on the daily newspapers, it can truthfully be said that everyone was brought about by Socialist agitators.

The freight handlers filed demands with the railroads for an increase in wages and a reduction in working hours from ten to nine a day, with a Saturday half-holiday. They were willing to compromise either on the wages or the reduction in hours. The wages paid truckers were 22 cents an hour, or $2.20 a day. Checking clerks and stowers received a slightly higher rate, and the clerks who were paid by the month, received from $60 to $75 a month.

The railroad managers offered the monthly men an increase of $2.50 a month, and the day laborers an advance of 1 cents a day, just one-half the amount asked for by the men. The officials of the freight handlers' union and other conservative men and favored the acceptance of the offer made by the railroads.

A mass meeting of the men was called and the officers invited certain speakers to address the meeting and urge acceptance of the offer. Several older men of the conservative type spoke to the freight handlers, and in substance, said while the increase was not large, it was a forward step, and it would be the part of wisdom to accept it.

AGITATORS WIN.

Everything appeared to be going the way the officers wanted it until toward the close of the meeting at midnight, when some Socialists got the floor. They drew pictures of the immense profits made by the railroads and wound up by declaring if the men would strike they would whip the companies in a week. The agitators won the last say, and when the vote was taken it was overwhelmingly in favor of a strike. That was on the night of May 2, and at noon next day the men walked out on twenty of the twenty-three railroads entering the city. They were not organized on the other three roads. About 5000 are out and they are striking still and have not "whipped the railroads," as the Socialist agitators predicted. Today there is not the slightest possibility of their winning their strike, for the managers are adhering to their long-established rule of refusing to treat with men who voluntarily left the service. Some of the strikers are returning to their old positions, while many may have to find other employment, as the places they vacated have been permanently filled by other men.

SHOP EMPLOYEES.

The strike of shop employees on the Illinois Central is an old story. It affects Chicago only to the extent that the largest shops of the company are located at Burnside, inside the city limits, and more than 3000 mechanics were employed in those shops. At the time the strike was called every one of the craft unions was working under an agreement with the railroad company. The men formed what they termed a "system federation" and struck because the railroad refused to recognise or treat with the "system federation." Incidentally it may be said that the older employees were not in love with the new idea of a federation, which was engineered all the way through by socialists. Some of them were opposed to a strike, but most of them quit their jobs rather than appear in the light of backsliders. They are still striking, but their places were filled long ago and the strike so far as the railroad is concerned is a closed incident.

IN NEWSPAPER OFFICES.

Next on the list is the strike against the daily newspapers. That strike, more than any other in the city in recent years, shows the utter lack of responsibility of the socalled leaders of labor. If there ever was a case where the leaders so-called should be named "misleaders" it is the present newspaper strike.

Contracts entered into in good faith between the publishers and the various unions in the mechanical departments, were brushed aside as if they had never existed, and that notwithstanding the fact that they were underwritten by the officers of the international unions of the various crafts. Not only were the contracts violated, but the men responsible for the strike boldly declared on the floor of the Chicago Federation of Labor that contracts between employers and labor unions were only instruments of oppression for the workers, and that the only agreements which counted for anything, were agreements between unions to stand together in times of trouble

One of these speakers told how he defid the authority of his superior officer of the international union and was loudly cheered and hailed as a "great labor leader." Sneering references were made by the speaker to the officers and members of the Typographical Union who refused to break their contracts and participate in an illegal strike, and the sentiments were loudly applauded and the printers hissed, although, had the Chicago Federation of Labor lived up to its laws, the speakers would have been denied the floor on the grounds that they belonged to seceding or suspended unions. This is cited merely to show the present spirit which pervades a large portion of the workers of the city and how little respect they have for the authority which is supposed to govern well-regulated organizations of labor.

NO MERITS.

As to the merits of the strike against the newspaper publishers, it has no merits whatever. The agreement between the pressmen and the Hearst newspapers expired April 30, and the management notified the pressmen that it desired to come in under the terms of the general agreement which prevailed between the pressmen and the Chicago Newspaper Publishers' Association. The Hearst newspapers were not members of the association when the former agreement was entered into with the pressmen, but had since become members and the management was within its rights in asking to come under the general agreement made with the association.

When this notice was posted in the pressrooms on the night of April 30, no objection was raised by the pressmen. They went to work as usual, thereby indicating that they had accepted the new contract. On the following night the management of the Hearst papers notified the pressmen that inasmuch as the paper was now working under the same agreement as the other newspapers in the city, the same number of men would be employed on a press that was employed on rival newspapers. To this the men objected, as they had been forcing the employment of two extra men on a press. The manager said he would pay the wages of the two extra men until the question of their employment was decided by arbitration, but that pending such a decision they should not work on the presses.

This offer was rejected by the men and they refused to work. They were then told to leave the pressrooms if they did not want to work under the conditions proposed, which were exactly the same as prevailed in all other pressrooms in the city. Some of them remained at work, but a large majority walked out on strike.

The Newspaper Publishers' Association held a meeting and decided that as the pressmen on the Hearst papers had violated their contract by striking, the contract was therefore null and void in all offices and a notice to that effect was posted in all the pressrooms in the city. The same notice contained the information that the publishers had no desire to change wages or conditions and wished to continue their friendly relations with their workmen, but on an individual basis, as the contract was null and void.

When these notices were posted the pressmen in the other offices walked out as they had done previously on the Hearst papers and immeriately set up the claim that they had been "locked out" and that the publishers were in a conspiracy to break up the unions.

The places of the striking pressmen were promptly filled and the papers were turned out with comparatively little delay. The drivers

The Thing That Wins.

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

It's not so much the time nor place;
It isn't scheme nor plan;
It isn't luck that wins the race;
It's courage and the man.
For failure cannot long exist
Where will and dogged aim persist;
So long as doubt
Stays locked without,
And heart and soul are firm and stout—
So long as hope flames in the breast
And urges ever to the test—
So long as vision seeks the height—
So long as valor cheers the fight,
The past counts nothing—all is new—
Each morrow means a chance to do.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

THE strike of the British transport workers is rapidly assuming gigantic proportions, threatening the food supply of London's seven million population and also that of the peoples of many other cities which are practically dependent on food imports at London, the greatest food importing city of the world. There is a strong possibility that this strike will be made general throughout the United Kingdom. If so, the suffering of millions upon millions of British people will be incalculable. Two thousand policemen are mobilized in the vicinity of the London docks whose business it is to endeavor to avert famine by protecting the transport by nonstrikers of as much food as possible. The strikers demand full recognition of the union by the entire exclusion of non-unionist transport workers from the port of London, a uniform rate of pay for all ship work (good, bad, and indifferent,) with a minimum wage of seven shillings and six pence ($1.80 daily,) and they have posted pickets everywhere around the dock entrances. So-called "peaceful" picketing is allowed by English law, but, naturally, strike picketing to be effective can never be really peaceful. The object of picketing is to prevent non-unionists or those willing to work, from working, and the object is defeated if the tyrannous method is not enforced by force. Industrial control by force, is as un-English as it is un-American, and it savors strongly of the brutalities of the French Revolution. With the exception of the police controlled movement of some food supplies the whole gigantic trade of the port of London is now paralyzed and not a truck wheel is moving in the streets. The loss by this to the thousands of factories in London dependent entirely upon foreign raw materials is enormous daily. Work in those factories is stopped or decreased and the payrolls suffer to the heavy loss of the innocent workers in those factories. The transport workers on strike now (June 5) number 140,000 men. The effect of this strike on the provincial ports of the United Kingdom is considerable. The shipping companies of Glasgow, Hull and other centers trading with London, have been compelled to suspend their sailings, thus throwing out of work large numbers of men. In London men of the British Naval Reserve have been called out to unload meat cargoes and they are doing it. The vans carrying this meat are escorted to the markets by mounted and foot police. The government is determined that the people of London shall be fed, if all the country's home military force has to be used in the work. The London transport strikers are appealing to the transport worker's unions in the United States for assistance by their refusing to handle cargoes on this side if they are to be diverted from London to other British ports. The London strike leaders claim to have received favorable responses to this appeal—as if we had not strike troubles enough of our own here, anyway. It looks as if the London Electrical Workers Union will strike in sympathy, leaving London without electric lighting and also without electric power. The transport workers' strike was originally started over just one man—a watchman who did not have a union card. The strikers are being patted on the back by Ben Tillett, and other leaders and told that they are the "backbone, brains and energy of the nation" and that they must "stand firm, even if you and yours starve." It's very easy for Gosling, Mann, Tillett, and the other well-fed, salary and expenses drawing British labor-agitators to say that. Such talk costs them nothing but, if acted on, will cost the strikers and their families untold suffering. Food prices are rising fast. The grain and flower trade on the Mark Lane (London) exchange is practically at a standstill and flour, of which London has only a two-weeks' supply, has gone up one shilling (24 cents) a sack. The strikers offer to convey food and necessities to hospitals and health departments, but other than this they loudly threaten to tie up the entire food supply of this, the world's greatest city. Rising food prices menace and already affect millions of people. Many thousands of tons of foods are rotting on docks, in cars, and on shipboard. Lawyers are debarred from the few conferences for settlement being held between the government, the employers and the strike leaders. All the British strike leaders are professionals whose sole employment is strike leading, hence so many strikes there. Ten thousand of these labor agitators are supported out of British union labor wages (low as they are,) a first cost of $2,500,000 a year. That outfit is Britain's "Gompers, Haywood and Co."

American labor lost $340,000,000 wages in the 38,003 strikes and lockouts which occurred during the twenty-five years, 1881 to 1905, inclusive, according to reports of the United States Bureau of Labor. That money would have paid for 170,000 workers' homes at $2000 each. Is there not a lesson, a grave lesson, for would-be American strikers in this potent fact? The money would have paid for a four years' college course and support, at $500 a year, of 170,000 of the boys and girls of American wage-earners. Is there not another anti-strike lesson in this fact?

The tailoring trade of both the East-end and West-end of London is now at a standstill by reason of 50,000 or more tailors being on strike. At only $1 there is a daily loss of $50,000 in wages, and it has been going on for some weeks with no signs yet of settlement. Fifteen dollars a week is the average wages paid by many London firms of tailors. Plain lounge suits take thirty-five hours to make. Some workers earn $25 to $30 a week. Too many foreign workers is one of the troubles in the trade there—French, Germans and Austrians.

Strike riots and blood-shed are becoming too frequent in Newark, N. J. Such things always follow visits of William D. Haywood, of Idaho murder trial memory, and of I.W.W leadership, to any city where there is labor discontent, with or without strikes. Similar trouble also at Passaic, N. J.

Lumbermill owners at Gray's Harbor, Washington, positively refuse "recognition of the union" (trouble and slavery,) and are prepared for a general strike to occur at any time.

Striking coal miners at Mucklow, W. Va., refuse the new soft coal agreed wage scale and fired 300 shots at gun-armed mine guards as they were on their way back from breakfast. It was a cowardly ambush by the strikers, but it failed of its purpose, the intended massacre of the guards.

Strikers, 150 of them, at the quarries on Johnson's Island, O., hoisted the Socialist -laborite red flag of anarchy. We put that flag down in Los Angeles on December 5 last, together with Socialist-laborite Harriman and Company.

The General Council of International Transport Workers at Berlin, Germany, will proclaim a world-wide boycott of British shipping, to aid the London Transport Worker's strike. Officialy, the British Socialist party (40,000 members,) resolves its cordial sympathy and support to the London strikers. Socialism and strikes go hand-in-hand. Butte (Mont.) bricklayers have forced their hod carriers to accept a reduction of wages (not asked by the employers) of from $6.50 to $5 a day. This is something unique in labor problems even in this country of labor surprises.

The packing-house strike at Kansas City is settled by an increase of wages from 17½ to 18 cents an hour.

By reason of the coal strike the Reading Coal Company, had a deficit of $399,000 in April. Including the railway there was a loss of $1,365,000 as compared with April, 1911. The Erie Railroad also fell off $692,000 in net, making the month's total loss in net, $2,057,000. To this must be added thes trikers' heavy wages loss. Freedom from labor troubles gave Missouri an increase in its coal output in 1911, of 778,174 tons, or 26.1 per cent. over 1910.

Another strike of 700 is on in the American Woollen Mills, Lawwrence, Mass., because some other operatives refuse to become I.W.W.'s, or Haywoodites.

As agreed with the miners the Conciliation Board of the anthracite industry has been re-established.

The hotel waiters' strike unrest in New York City, is spreading to Syracuse and other cities, but, as yet the movement is practically unorganized.

Six hundred workmen of the Harlan and Hollingsworth shipbuilding plant at Wilmington, Del., are on strike for 5 cents an hour more pay. The demand will be refused, although the concern is badly hampered, having seven vessels under construction.

The Chamber of Commerce of London, Eng., has adopted resolutions indorsing the open shop and calling for government protection for all firms which refuse to adopt the closed shop.

The president (Gosling,(of the British Transport Workers' Federation, refuses the government's suggestions for arranging for a food supply for London, except as to hospitals and like institutions. He has withdrawn on strike the men who have been attending the boilers in the refrigerating plants, even though hot weather is now on in London. No surer and quicker means could be adopted to alienate public sympathy from the strikers. The shipowners claim that the strikers have persistently broken the "peace" agreement of last August, and have no confidence in their keeping a new agreement, if one made.

A DAY'S LABOR.

Comparisons Show It Buys More Than It Did a Half-Century Ago. More Luxuries Are Enjoyed.

[New York Commercial:] Riots in Hungary and strikes in London, Eng., mark the spread in Europe of that syndicalism with which the Industrial Workers of the World have made us familiar in the last few months through strikes in textile centers. As a movement to interfere arbitrarily with the creation of wealth and the production of necessaries of life, syndicalism intensifies the miseries of the poor, in whose interest it proposes to act. As labor refrains from production prices rise, and those who can least afford it pay the most and lose the most.

In discussing this question, a New York paper, catering to the tastes of the discontented elements in our population, recently said editorially that "the purchasing power of an honest day's work steadily declines; there is a steady rise in the cost of the necessaries of life." This statement, taken in a broad sense, is absolutely false. Fluctuations in the relative value of labor occur just as prices of staple articles vary, and prices of necessaries of life have been artificially enhanced within the past year or two by poor crops and other more or less temporary causes; but when comparisons covering half a century are made, the value of a day's work is found to be rising all the time.

The invention of the steam engine and of all the lavor-saving machinery that we now have has taken the heaviest part of the burden off the shoulders of labor. Wages have advanced, while the cost of nearly all manufactured goods has declined. Railroads and steamboats have made transportation cheap and quick. Things looked on as luxuries fifty or a hundred years ago are now consumed by the laboring classes more freely than the rich formerly used them.

City life attracts an undue proportion of the people. Transportation has made it possible for millions to live within a city's bounds, because they can draw on a wide extent of country for sustenance. Writing on this question, Ferrero, the Italian historian, says that in the days of ancient Rome a city of even 100,000 people was next to impossible to feed and maintain. In large cities, high rents bear hard on the poor, but modern improvements enable them to live there. They might be better off in the country, but they can now live in cities if they prefer, a thing impossible for such vast numbers a century ago.

The more labor produces the more it has. Machinery makes shoes and clothing cheap and plentiful. Fifty years ago people wore the same coat or dress on Sundays and holidays for five years or more at a stretch. That is all changed. The clothes may not be as substantial, but everyone buys far more now than then. A few years ago half the children in the country went barefoot all summer. Now a child without shoes is a rare sight, even on the east side of New York City. Everything proves that a day's work buys more than it did fifty years ago.

PLAN NEW SCHOOL.

A public school to cost $10,000 has been designed for the new town of Yorba Linda, recently subdivided by the Janss Investment Company near the citrus belt of Yorba Linda. The school building was designed by Architects Paul V. Tuttle and E. L. Hopkins, and is a brick and stone structure, well elevated, well lighted and with an imposing entrance. The Pacific Electric is rushing a class A depot at Yorba Linda and many buildings, both business and residence, are going up in the new town. Lumber yard, packing-house and other structures have been started.

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

Railway employees in the United Kingdom are always called "railway servants" both by law and usage. Investigation by the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants—official and correct—shows that over 100,000 of these "servants" are working for a weekly wage of $4.86: or under.

The grouping is:

$4.86 and under	[illegible]
$5.10 to $7.29	[illegible]
$7.35 and over	[illegible]
Total number of "railway servants" investigated	[illegible]
England and Wales	[illegible]
Scotland	[illegible]
Ireland	[illegible]
Total number	[illegible]

These figures show that more than one-half of the British railway employees are paid only from $4.86 to $7.29 per week. It also appears that only 11 per cent. receive more than $7.35 per week. Adding the station masters, inspectors, clerks, laborers and shop mechanics, none of whom are under the care of the Amalgamated Society, brings the general average up to $6.17 a week, which figure is stated by the British Board of Trade, a government body, as correct. But the $6.17 a week includes overtime, leaving the general average of weekly pay for all railway operation and maintenance, at $5.75. Some slight increase has been given during the last year, but very slight. Without going into full comparative detail, we all know that the average and individual pay of American railway workers of all classes is very much higher. Yet all over the United States, we have strikes and demands (generally the strike first) by engineers, firemen, shop mechanics, freight handlers, etc., etc., for "more pay, more pay." Even though the freight and passenger earnings of the railroads are not increasing, but rather the contrary. Recent and present demands of that character in the East are utterly unreasonable.

British "railway servants" in the classes named as not being under the care of the Amalgamated Society, number approximately, 320,000, and their average weekly earnings are:

$5.00 or less	[illegible]
$5.00 to $7.50	[illegible]
$7.50 and over	[illegible]
Total number	320,000

The secretary of the Amalgamated Society, which deals almost exclusively with the men in the traffic departments, says that fully 40 per cent. of that class receive only $5.00 or less per week as the standard weekly wage. In all British railway work, the day is 10 hours and in some cases, 12 hours. Guards (conductors) begin at $5.25 a week and rise by 24 cents a week, till at the end of twenty-one years service they get $8.12 a week. The average pay of passenger guards is $6.50 a week. Hours of labor must average 10 hours daily. Engine drivers start in at $9.25 and are raised 75 cents a week each year for seven years, til! the maximum of $11.68 weekly is reached. The average weekly wage there, of this expert class, is $9.68, 10 hours a day. Firemen start in at $4.50 for sixty hours work and climb up to $6.68, but that is as far as they can get. Their weekly average is $6. Boys from 14 years up get $1.75 to $3 a week as engine cleaners. Other weekly wages to these "railway servants" are:

Brakemen	$5.25 to $7.00
(25 cents a week yearly progress.)
Switchmen	[illegible]
Signalmen	$5.25 to $7.00
(25 cents a week yearly progress.)
Ticket collectors	[illegible]
Porters	[illegible]
Coach cleaners	[illegible]
Carmen	[illegible]
Checkers	[illegible]
Leaders	[illegible]
Trackmen	[illegible]
(25 cents a week yearly progress.)
Signal fitters and linemen	[illegible]
Inspectors or examiners	[illegible]

Compared with the English railway wages named above, American railway workers ought, by their much

M'INNIS STARRING ON INITIAL SACK.

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) June 8.—It will not do well for America to crown either Chase or Daubert the emperor of first basemen. Surely one "Stuffy" McInnis cannot be overlooked in the premises. Phil Beetles will tell you that they wouldn't give the Gloucester codsmith for either of these chaps.

McInnis is a far more valuable player than Chase, and has the box scores to prove it. For one thing, McInnis is a harder hitter than the Highlander star. There is not much difference in the fielding. Chase, perhaps, will make more brilliant plays in a season than his younger rival, but for steady, sure and conscientious work, game in and game out, there is nobody who has anything on the New England boy.

"Stuffy" has his advantage over Chase in that he is more adaptive to team play and club discipline, and fights to the last. McInnis impresses a spectator as playing more for the love of the game than the fortnightly check.

Chase, brilliant as he is, sometimes is mulish. When the Highlanders are winning he looks like the best player in the country, but as soon as they slump, Chase becomes morose and his game suffers. He is not a leader, but essentially a follower.

His habit of leaving his team in the lurch once or twice a season further reduces his value to the club: so, when all these points are considered, he is not nearly so desirable a player as the able, earnest and ambitious McInnis.

RYDER HAS FUNNY NOTIONS ON SCORING.

"Jack" Ryder of the Cincinnati Enquirer says scorers who do not invariably give a batter a base hit in a play in which a fielder's choice is involved are old fashioned. They may be, but they are quite right.

For instance, a batter rolls a grounder toward first base, and when the pitcher gets the ball the batter is fifteen feet from the base and could be put out with a toss. The pitcher elects to try for a force play at second and is too late with the throw. It is palpable absurdity to score a base hit in a play of that description.

No batter should be credited with a hit for a vagary of a fielder. There are times when the play at first might be equally as close as that at another base at which an attempt was made to gain a force. In that instance there would be no logical reason why the batter should not be credited with a hit.

It is better to be old fashioned and exercise a little common sense, than it is to observe a hidebound rule which makes a play ridiculous. There is nothing, either by rule or custom, which bears out the contention of Mr. Ryder that a base hit must invariably accompany a fielder's choice when there is a palpable chance to retire the batter.

NO MORE STOOPING TO FLASH SIGNALS.

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) June 8.—Manager Charles Dooin has sprung a brand new idea for catchers, as the result of his recent troubles with his knees. He has discovered a new way to give signals. In future, the fiery-haired leader of the Phillies will not bend down on his knees to let his pitcher know what to pass over the plate, but will stand upright.

The manner of giving signals in baseball is the same as that used twenty years ago. Dooin's new way embraces many changes that will be readily seen are for the benefit of the catchers. First, bending at the knees has a tendency to slow up and make a player flat-footed, says the Phillies' leader. Added to that, bending down and raising again consumes valuable time, and Dooin expects to save fifteen minutes every game through his new method.

Speaking of his method, Dooin says: "I believe I can improve my game greatly by adopting an entirely new method of giving my pitchers signals, and one that will be welcomed not only by all back-stoppers, but by the fans themselves.

"There is no reason why catchers should consume valuable time and run the risk of internal injury by sticking to the old antiquated system. At any rate, I intend giving my system a thorough trial, and believe the time is near when other catchers will adopt it."

NEW PACKARD HOME.

Work Commenced on Building at Vermont Street and Capitol Avenue, Indianapolis.

The erection of a new building has been started at the corner of Vermont street and Capitol avenue in Indianapolis. It will be equipped by Carl G. Fisher, as headquarters for the Packard agency in that city. Fisher, who is president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, has lately identified himself with the Packard organization of Detroit and in future will handle the Packard product in Indianapolis.

The structure will be one of the finest of its kind and will also be the headquarters for the Prestolite Company, of which Fisher is a stockholder. The business of the Packard cars and trucks will be conducted under the name of Carl G. Fisher & Co. The organization is prepared for a strenuous campaign in Indianapolis and the adjacent territory.

Night work has started in the Packard shops at Detroit, which now cover an area of floor space equal to thirty-seven acres. The force of employees exceeds 6000 and is being increased daily toward a maximum of 7500.

Gave Herself Away by Degrees.

[Judge:] "Dashington seems to have finally made a conquest of that Scadmore girl. Wonder how it all came about?"

"The first time she saw him she gave him her eye, the next time they met she gave him her arm, it wasn't long before he was holding both her hands, soon after that he won her heart, and she lost her head and gave herself to him completely."

Value Fades.

Ten Million, an outfielder of the Cardinal camp at St. Louis, has been released to the Sioux City club of the Western League. That's getting to look like 30 cents rather fast for a man with such a munificent monaker.

HOME!

The sweetest and tenderest word in our language—and yet, how many of our homes fall far short of the full meaning of the word.

Home is not home without sentiment—but who can possibly weave sentiment around the modern apartment-house—or the box-like dwellings on box-like lots, in box-like streets? Don't you find it hard to have tender thoughts of a mail chute or an elevator—or to think fondly of your dark and small rooms?

To really live—you must love your home—and love its surroundings—and the spot you choose for its creation should be as beautiful and delightful as the sentiment that prompts you to erect it.

Every building or investment contract is amply secured before "Home Builders" invests a cent of its stockholders' money.

[illegible]NTAL POETRY.

[illegible] THE EARTH. By Robert Haven [illegible] Houghton, Mifflin Company.

[illegible] poems in the rounds of our [illegible] lasting long enough to [illegible] the title poem of Rob[illegible] Schauffler's "Scum o' the [illegible] The importance of this poem [illegible] fact that it is indicative of [illegible] and revolting effeminacy [illegible] to be creeping into [illegible] letters, and especially into [illegible] poetry. Strangely enough, [illegible] and unhealthful [illegible] is emanating from a [illegible] of the younger men. Were it [illegible] the senile outpourings of a [illegible] generation it would be of [illegible]; but when it is evi[illegible] the younger generation, it [illegible]

[illegible] of the Earth" is a trite, and [illegible] unconsciously humorous, [illegible] of the lowest type of il[illegible] immigrants. Young Mr. [illegible] is greatly impressed by the [illegible] somewhere back in the his[illegible] of the different nations from [illegible] these yokels emerge, were [illegible] and artists. The irrelevancy [illegible] attempt to create sympathy for [illegible] human products of a deca[illegible] by referring grandilo[illegible] and romantically to certain [illegible] heroes who lived at the [illegible] of that nation's ascendency, [illegible] basis of this sentimentality. [illegible] bootblack, it seems, came [illegible] land of Socrates and Prax[illegible]. It even occurs to Mr. Schauf[illegible] the bootblack is a direct de[illegible] of one of Thermopylae's [illegible]. All of this young gentle[illegible] Polish immigrant women croon [illegible] babies to sleep with Chopin [illegible] and the low-browed Italian [illegible], agape at New York's [illegible], is another Caesar or a [illegible] the immigrant Jew, to whom [illegible] given the name "Sheeny," [illegible] which Mr. Schauffler laments [illegible] and sarcasm) is requested [illegible] the poet to "lift that sorrow[illegible] head." Thereupon the young [illegible] "Lo, 'tis the face of [illegible]" In an eloquent burst at [illegible] of the poem, these immigrants are hailed as "marvelous folk, [illegible] of singers and seers, [illegible] and more than our peers." [illegible] further informed by this [illegible] sentimentalist that our [illegible], compared with that of these [illegible] whom we call the scum [illegible], is callow and crude. [illegible]" exclaims the poet, [illegible] to father a nation, strong [illegible] kinship of an equal [illegible] the wealth of the richest bloods [illegible]."

[illegible] which is flapdoodle, as any [illegible] who has dealt with im[illegible] will tell you. The miscegna[illegible] portending to the "com[illegible] of equal birth," show that [illegible] percentage of imbeciles resulting [illegible] application of Mr. Schauf[illegible] sentiments to the Chinese im[illegible], for instance, far exceeds [illegible] number of Confuciuses; and the [illegible] records of the New York, [illegible] and San Francisco health de[illegible] do not bear out Mr. [illegible] claims that the immi[illegible] are of the "richest bloods of [illegible]." Our efforts thus far, in deal[illegible] with the immigrants, have been [illegible] in the hands of the civic [illegible] of health; and the methods [illegible] "fathering a nation" of Mr. Schauf[illegible] pets are, for the most part, [illegible] lines of disinfectants, quar[illegible], soap, mercury, and antitoxins. [illegible] years of sedulous work, the New [illegible] police have succeeded in round[illegible] many of the Dantes and [illegible] of the Black Hand society; [illegible] a struggle we have executed [illegible] and Chopins. If [illegible] of Blackwell's Island are [illegible] believed, the majority of the [illegible] there held in durance are [illegible] and Titians and Michael [illegible] and the tenderloin sergeant [illegible] any large city will tell you that [illegible] and most vicious dives are [illegible] by Jeans of Arc, Brun[illegible] and Sonia Kowalewskis.

[illegible] such a vital and healthy her[illegible] has been handed down to the [illegible] American poets by men like [illegible], Roberts, and those [illegible] who pioneered the new move[illegible] in American letters, one is justi[illegible] expecting from them something [illegible] maudlin and pious senti[illegible]. But the indications of virility [illegible] isolated. Modern Ameri[illegible] is largely a reflection of [illegible] and conventionali[illegible]. We have a healthy [illegible] environment; but our [illegible] art is almost entirely [illegible]. Our bards are still [illegible] of proving platitudes—[illegible] truly; for, in the [illegible] platitudes are universally [illegible] and need no proof; and, in [illegible], they are not true. [illegible] verses are an excellent [illegible] modern poetic snivelling. [illegible] is too full; there is too [illegible] clash and clangor of ex[illegible] to permit of the intru[illegible] inanities. So far [illegible] great number of the younger [illegible] concerned, the real facts of [illegible] seem to be almost en[illegible] obscured by philosophic bathos. [illegible] our modern literary output [illegible] Schauffler's "Scum o' the [illegible]" needs to be translated into [illegible]

THE ETERNAL THREE.

[illegible] BRIDGE. By Willa S. [illegible] Houghton, Mifflin Company, Bos[illegible]

[illegible] COMMONPLACE story with the [illegible] triangle for a theme is [illegible] Cather's "Alexander's [illegible] Two women, one an actress, [illegible] (note the triteness of the [illegible]) are painstakingly [illegible] but without sufficient inti[illegible] either of them entirely [illegible]. Miss Cather's style is in strict [illegible] with that chilly objectivity [illegible] that vast army of [illegible] Henry Jamesed who inhabit [illegible] environs. But the potentialities of the story are at fault, and not Miss Cather's inclination.

A cold and commonplace book.

G. B. S. SATIRIZED.

THE PEER'S PROGRESS. By J. Storer Clouston. Brentano's.

IT IS unfair—not to say disconcerting—to take any philosopher seriously. But of all heretical thinkers, the unmoral socialist should least of all be considered practically. The result is disastrous, both to the theorist and the practitioner. It is diverting and stimulating to have had Ibsen revoke the ten commandments. Perhaps they should be revoked—theoretically. Any code which has become crystallized into a belief is a prison around the individual. But the intellectual revocation of social formulae and the practical abandonment of ethical laws are two entirely different things. Percy Mackaye, in "Anti-Matrimony," took Ibsen at his word and satirized the literalists. The result was disastrous—that is to say, it might have been had not conventional precautions been taken.

In "The Peer's Progress," by J. Storer Clouston, the first and only Shavian is cleverly ridiculed, by a process not unsimilar to that employed by Mackaye in ridiculing Ibsen. The hero in the present book is a valet, a literal disciple of the world's most diverting Socialist. The business of the book is to show what befalls the valet when he puts into actual practice the teachings of G. B. S. The book is skillfully put together, the quotations aptly introduced, and the lesson, while overdrawn, is not to be ignored.

A HALF-WIT HERO.

A KNIGHT IN DENIM. By Ramsey Benson. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

A CURIOUS and at times unconvincing story is "A Knight in Denim," by Ramsey Benson, whose two former stories, "A Lord of Lands" and "Melchisedec" have done much to prepare us for a story such as the present one. It is difficult to ascertain just what Benson is driving at in a book of this kind, for the mere portraiture of such a man as Bill Harbaugh does not fully justify so painstaking a work. This portraiture, however, in many places is excellent, although one is at times conscious that certain attributes of the hero have been supplied him for popular reasons rather than artistic ones.

Bill is a strange hero for a novel. He is an illiterate, half-witted farm hand, in love with his work, superchivalrous in regard to women, at times possessed of uncanny shrewdness and at others a mere imbecile, sympathetic, patient, and not without a smattering of b'gosh philosophy. The experiences which have been cooked up for him by the author would be more convincing were they less melodramatic; but even in their present form they aid in bringing out certain characteristics in Bill Harbaugh's nature.

THE ULLSTEIN BUECHER.

VIOLET; DER ROMAN EINER MUTTER. By Kurt Aram. Brentano's, New York.
MUTTER. By Heinz Tovote. Brentano's, New York.
GEORG BANGS LIEBE. By Karl Rosner. Brentano's, New York.
THOMAS KERKHOVEN. By Korfiz Holm. Brentano's, New York.
GEWITTER IM MAI. By Ludwig Ganghofer. Brentano's, New York.

THE lack of popular German reading in this country is being overcome by an interesting, and in many ways important, series of novels by modern German authors, imported by Brentano's. A long-felt want is thus being supplied. For many years it has been easy to obtain the works of modern French authors, both in the original and in translation; but only when some enterprising publisher has taken it upon himself to translate a German book have the German authors been available to English readers. That there is a demand for modern novels in German is evidenced by the large sale of German text-books outside of the regular school trade. But novels used for educational purposes are in a large measure very unsatisfactory to people who wish to keep in touch with modern German literature.

Already there have been received five of the new series, and in each case the book is from the pen of a contemporary writer. The books are to be issued one each month. The Ullstein Buecher, published at one mark, have already gained a large popularity in Germany. A special feature in the importation of these books is the low price which Brentano's has put upon them—namely, twenty-five cents a copy.

OVERSWEET ROMANCE.

THROUGH THE POSTERN GATE. By Florence L. Barclay. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

NO ACUTER commentary on the adolescence of American literary taste can be found than in the popularity of Florence L. Barclay's cloying romances. The same sort of unintelligent sentiment with which her previous novels reeked, although in a lesser degree, is encountered in "Through the Postern Gate." This book, like "The Rosary," is frankly a sentimental love story. The heroine is no amatory debutante, however, being well on toward forty. The hero is ten years her junior. She calls him "Little Boy Blue." His real name is Guy. Note how, by raising the age of the heroine fifteen or twenty years beyond the established age in the league rules for writing best sellers, the sentiment immediately becomes maudlin. No matter how ridiculous may be the love scene between the young people of the Chambers and McCutcheon variety, there at least is something healthy and vigorous in it. Young people normally indulge in that sentimental-sexual conversation with which the readers of "popular" novels are so intimately acquainted. But when a woman of forty exclaims to her lover, "Oh, my Little Boy Blue," the shallows of healthy romance have been left far behind and we are wallowing in the depths of the over-sentimental.

At the close of the book the lady is waiting for her lover by the postern gate. Anon he enters, "the sunlight in his shining eyes." In a moment she is sobbing on his breast, her arms flung around him. His strong young body is pulsating with life. While thus engaged, she talks about the angel of the Lord. Then "the sweet, proud lips" are "parted in utter surrender, and lifted to his." He doesn't accept the surrender at once, but pauses "for one exquisite moment of realization." While he pauses, the lady waits his kiss with closed eyes. Being unable to see, she does not know that his face is covered with a radiance. He looks "up to the blue sky flecked with fleeting white clouds." Still he keeps those sweet, proud, parted lips waiting. But she hears "the voice which was to make the music of her life."

"Thank the Lord," he says.

Then—he kisses her.

1911 REVIEW.

THE NEW INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK FOR 1911. Edited by Frank Moore Colby, M.A., and Allen Leon Churchill. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

THE New International Year Book for 1911, edited by Frank Moore Colby and Allen Leon Churchill, is ready. We have had these yearly records since 1907, and in scope and arrangement we know of none better. The purpose is to embrace in one volume all classes of information now scattered in many volumes—some relating purely to statistics, others to history, biography, politics, or restricted to different countries. The New International Year Book is merely an encyclopedia of the year, arranged alphabetically. The book is not accumulative, but is restricted to the events of the year. The book is illustrated, contains many new maps, and embraces nearly every line of human endeavor.

TREATISE FOR ANGLERS.

PRACTICAL DRY-FLY FISHING. By Emlyn M. Gill. Scribner's.

THIS manual is the first American book describing this most artistic and fascinating method of angling for trout, though the dry-fly has been the favorite lure of English anglers for many years. The author demonstrates the perfect adaptability of the dry-fly to American streams, and offers to American fishermen new angling pleasures, as well as an effective means of taking trout under conditions where the wet-fly would probably fail. While this book will interest all fly-fishermen, however expert they may be, its principal purpose is to lend a helping hand to the beginner in dry-fly fishing, and to aid the wet-fly angler to become an expert both with the floating fly and with the wet fly. It gives advice about rods, lines, leaders, flies and other tackle necessary for the successful pursuit of this sport. All the rules of the game are given, from the purchase of the rod to the first cast on the stream; and the reader is shown, step by step, and in sequence, everything needed to enable him to go upon the streams alone, and by practice become an expert dry-fly angler. There are many conditions under which a wet-fly fisherman will find the dry-fly useful to him, even if he does not become such an enthusiast as to use the floating lure to the exclusion of all other kinds of fishing; it affords a scientific method of taking "educated" trout from much-fished streams. Dry-fly fishing is founded upon the exact imitation of nature. The flies are imitations of living insects upon which trout feed, in form, size and color, and are presented to the fish exactly as live insects are presented.

Arouse, ye fishermen!

BOOK NOTES.

Lew Wallace's novel, "Ben-Hur," has been brought before the English public by the success of the stage version at Drury Lane. The English have always been interested in "Lew Wallace, An Autobiography," as a piece of American historico-biographical writing and, singularly enough, this life of Gen. Wallace is about as well known across the water as it is to those who were born and have lived in the localities where the author's active years were spent. "Ben Hur" is also to be played in Australia this fall. Gen. Wallace's other books are "The Prince of India," "The First Christmas," "The Boyhood of Christ," and the recently published "Chariot Race."

L. C. Page and Company have recently issued a new two-volume edition of "The Secret History of the Court of England," by the Right Honorable Lady Anne Hamilton, which has been out of print for some years. Lady Hamilton's memoirs first appeared in 1832, two years after the death of George IV. They were immediately suppressed, presumably by the orders of the English government, who probably feared the effect they would have on the public. The Memoirs cover the period from the accession of George III, to the death of George IV, and include among other important matters, full particulars of the mysterious death of the Princess Charlotte, and the murder of the Duke of Cumberland's valet, Sellis. The new edition is reprinted in full of the original edition, published in London in 1832.

Houghton Mifflin Company publish the following books this week: "Henrik Ibsen: Plays and Problems," by Prof. Otto Heller, of Washington University; "Waterways versus Railways," by Harold C. Moulton; "The White Hills in Poetry," an anthology of the White Mountains, edited by Eugene R. Musgrove; "The Story of Christopher Columbus," by Charles W. Moores; four volumes in a new series by A. Wyatt Tilby on "The English People Overseas;" "Charles Dickens: His Life and Work," by Edwin Percy Whipple, in a two-volume limited Riverside Press edition, with an introduction by Arlo Bates; "The Laws of Supply and Demand," by George Binney Dibblee; selections from "The Classical Psychologists," edited by Dr. Benjamin Rand of Harvard University; "A History of the United States for Grammar Schools," by Reuben G. Thwaites and C. N. Kendall, and "A Catalogue of the Collection of Historical Material at Simmons College, Boston," prepared by the committee on historical material of the New England History Teachers' Association.

Henry Holt & Co. will issue this week "Social France in the Time of Philip Augustus," by Achille-Luchaire. Edited by Louis Halphen. Translated by E. B. Krehbiel, Stanford University. These Sorbonne lectures are by the author of the volume on the reigns of Louis VII, Philip Augustus and Louis VIII, in Lavissee's "Histoire de France." Although death prevented final revision by the author, the lectures had been prepared with such care and thoroughness that only the slightest editing was required to shape them for publication. Penetrating and instructive studies, making the old records bear living witness to the thoughts and passions—the very mainsprings of action—of the thirteenth century. The book covers practically every phase except the mendicants, the royal court, and commerce, and is as readable as it is instructive.

Three especially strong college numbers have recently been added to the Riverside literature series: Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," edited by William Strunk, Jr., professor of English in Cornell University; Milton's "Of Education, Areopagitica, the Commonwealth," with four early biographies of Milton, edited by Laura E. Lockwood, associate professor of the English language in Wellesley College; and "Le Morte Arthur," a middle English metrical romance, edited by Samuel B. Hemingway, instructor in English in Yale University. The usual editorial equipment of these volumes will appeal to all instructors in college English. They embody the results of the latest and best scholarship, and should therefore be stimulating to the instructor as well as helpful to the student of English.

The publishers, Paul Elder & Co., San Francisco, have just issued a supplement to Virginia M. Meyer's popular little manual entitled, "Small Talks on Auction Bridge," giving the new scoring system of the "Royal" spade, and setting forth the corresponding bidding system. This supplement will be supplied with each copy of either the book or the score pad, issued by these publishers, without extra charge.

"The Young Crusaders" is the title of a new camping story for boys, by George P. Atwater, which Little, Brown & Co. have just issued. It is the first book in "The Young Crusaders" series, and will appeal especially to Boy Scouts.

The last week has been a big one with the Macmillan Company, as far as new editions are concerned, for on one day orders went through for the reprinting of Rachel Capen Schauffler's "The Goodly Fellowship," Sidney R. Kennedy and Alden C. Noble's "White Ashes," Jane Addams's "A New Conscience and an Ancient Evil," Josiah Royce's "William James and Other Essays on the Philosophy of Life," and Kathleen Norris5s "Mother."

The June publications of L. C. Page & Co. will include the following fiction: L. M. Montgomery's new book, "Chronicles of Avonlea;" "The Pleasuring of Susan Smith," by Helen M. Winslow; a sequel to Eleanor H. Porter's "Miss Billy," the title of which is tentatively announced as "Miss Billy's Decision."

Ways of adding to one's income by making pin-money have appeared in the magazines from time to time, but it has remained for Lilian W. Babcock to gather together about four hundred different methods, and these are now published in a cloth-bound book entitled "Pin-Money Suggestions."

WITH THE AUTHORS.

Prof. Arthur Keith of the Royal College of Surgeons and author of "Ancient Types of Man," just published in Harper's Library of Living Thought, has stated that the recent discovery of a skeleton in East Anglia buried deeply beneath boulders and clay, proved that England was inhabited as early, if not earlier, than any continental country. Prof. Keith notes that the oldest remains found in Great Britain, instead of approaching the simian measurements of the Neanderthal man, show a striking similarity with the present English type, and that, could they come to life, they might walk unnoticed down Piccadilly. "The physical character of the Thames Valley," he says, "has changed infinitely more than those of its inhabitants." He has cited many similar cases in "Ancient Types of Man."

When the booksellers from all over the country held their annual convention in New York a few days ago, they spent one afternoon at Franklin Square as the guests of Harper & Bros. A number of authors were on hand to meet the men who sold their books, some of them coming as far as the booksellers themselves to be present. Among them were: Rex Beach, Kate Langley Bosher, Albert Bigelow Paine, Irving Bacheller, Margaret Cameron, Will N. Harben, Hayden Carruth, Theodore Dreiser, William Dana Orcutt, Onoto Watanna, Will Carleton, Basil King, Don C. Seitz, Brewer Corcoran, Henry Mills Alden, Van Tassel Sutphen, John Martin and Burges Johnson.

August Strindberg died at that moment when the circle of his fame had touched this country with its ever-expanding perimeter. Several of his plays had been produced here this last season in a small way; that volume of them containing "The Link," "The Dream Play," and "The Dance of Death," had just appeared; another play, "There Are Crimes and Crimes," was on the press and will be issued in book form very soon, and the publication of several others is also contemplated by the Scribner's. The translator is in all cases Edwin Bjorkman, and the first collection of plays entitled "Plays by August Strindberg" has already gone to press for a second printing.

In William Miller Collier's "At the Court of His Catholic Majesty," the former American Minister to Spain dissipates the impression that when kings take part in sporting events it is customary for other competitors to let them win out of deference. Speaking of a pigeon shoot between King Alfonso of Spain and his neighboring monarch, King Carlos, in which the latter won out, the former Minister writes, "You may be sure that the best man won, for kings are good sportsmen, and do not esteem those who from a false sense of deference let them win; and the men with whom they contend know this fact. King Carlos was everywhere known as a good shot, and King Alfonso has the reputation of being one of the very best in Spain. The latter has himself won many prizes in all forms of sport, but has lost more than he has won. I remember once attending a meeting of the Yacht Club when he was to award the prizes that had been won in a regatta. It was somewhat amusing, when he announced that a certain money prize had been won by "His Majesty the King," to see him forthwith thrust it into his pocket."

Alfred J. Evans of San Francisco, who is the "Don Alfredo" in Wallace Gillpatrick's "The Man Who Likes Mexico," writes in a recent letter to the author: "I have been down in Sonora, Mex., in the Altar district, and hope to return there in about a week. I did not see any demonstrations against the 'Gringos,' but was treated well all the time I was there. I traveled by stage and mule-back about 300 miles, and stopped at many ranchos; and always the same fine treatment."

David Gray's new book, "Ensign Russell," was written during a six-weeks' cruise the author had with Admiral Evans on the battleship Kentucky, in Philippine waters. Mr. Gray, as the admiral's guest, had the run of the ship, and the type of young officer he was thrown with suggested the characters of "Ensign Russell." Many of the incidents of the book, too, were part of this cruise and of six months' travel through the islands.

Brewer Corcoran, author of "The Bantam," was recently in the South quail shooting, and engaged Joe, an attractive pickaninny with elemental conceptions of honesty, to carry the guns and lunch basket. Crossing a bridge made of an old tree trunk, Joe slipped and fell, screaming, into the creek. When he schambled ashore, fears were expressed by the hungry sportsmen for the condition of the food. "Did that lunch get wet?" queried one of the party. "No, suh!" "Are you sure?" "'Deed Ah is." "How did you keep it dry?" The boy looked up at the man and grinned, "Ah done et it back younder."

James Oliver Curwood tells of a recent encounter with the law. The value of a short story he was writing depended upon a certain legal situation which he found difficult to manage. Going to a lawyer of his acquaintance, he told him the plot and was shown a way to the desired end. "You've saved me just $400," he exclaimed enthusiastically, "for that's what I'm going to get for this story." A week later he received a bill from the lawyer as follows: "For literary advice, $100." He paid.

J. Henry Harper, whose book, "The House of Harper," was recently published, returned this week from England. He found there many remembrances of his intimate friend, the late Edwin A. Abbey. It was some years ago Mr. Harper was giving a farewell dinner at Delmonico's to Abbey on the eve of his departure for England. When the guests were assembled, the host signalled the head waiter to begin serving. The waiter came up and whispered to Mr. Harper in tones which carried through the room, "Hadn't you better wait until Mr. Abbey arrives?" Detained by the elevated road, he had been momentarily forgotten.

Basil King declared last week to a Boston audience that it should be a novelist's duty—as well as his pleasure—to leave his readers with a distinct sense of uplift and hopefulness at the close of a book. As most of Mr. King's auditors were authors, his remarks naturally precipitated the question of the happy ending. Mr. King held that the power, brilliancy and technique of the modern E[illegible] novelist was to be admired, but not his pessimism.

Thomas Hardy, who forswore fiction writing about the time the thin-paper edition of all his novels was published, this week made public a poem on the Titanic disaster which pictured the twin growth of ship and destroying iceberg, "and consummation comes and jars two hemis[illegible] Verse has been Hardy's only medium of writing since he completed the Wessex novels which gave him a world-wide following: "The Return of the Native," "Jude the Obscure," "Tess of the d'Urbervilles" and the others.

Another novel of Robert Hichens has been made into a play, for "Bella Donna" has just been staged in London, with Mrs. Patrick Campbell as leading lady, and with elaborate settings showing the Nile country. At the same time, the play from Hichens's "Garden of Allah" has been on in New York, and several managers are considering his latest book, "The Fruitful Vine."

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Though the interests of Leroy Scott, author of "The Counsel for the Defense," published by Doubleday, Page & Co., have lain chiefly in literature and social service, he spent some time in very practical newspaper work in the South, which he says helped him in the pictures of the country paper in his latest book. "My brother," Scott told a friend recently, "had gone to a little town in Louisiana, not very far from New Orleans, to start a weekly paper and boom real estate. He thought I might like a job just after I had been graduated from college, so offered me one. I hadn't been there long before yellow fever broke out in New Orleans and half a dozen surrounding places. We were quarantined as tight as possible, so we saw no daily newspapers. The people were all afraid to leave town, but they clamored for news of the outside world, and nearly drove the local telegraph operator insane asking him if there was anything new in the fever situation. It was my brother's opportunity, for he installed a curtailed telegraphic news service, and started a daily paper. It was a great success—so much so that my job of editing, reporting and running all the other departments made Indiana look pretty good. I left as soon as the quarantine was raised."

"The Street Called Straight," the new novel by Basil King, author of "The Inner Shrine," was published last week. The advance orders for the book were surprisingly large, being much greater than those of "The Wild Olive" or "The Inner Shrine," many of them being by wire, asking for delivery on date of publication. "The Street Called Straight" tells primarily of a girl who, through the misdeeds of her father, is placed in an untenable position between two men, an American and an Englishman. Back of the story is the same quality found in the style and viewpoint of "The Inner Shrine."

Frederick Palmer, author of "Over the Pass," recently described in these words his method of work: "I put in hours in my study, without going near my desk, living with my story and my characters. I must know my story as one knows a chapter out of his own life, which is finished. I must know the characters as I know the members of my own family—how they look, how they walk and what they would say or do under given circumstances. This is superfluous detail which is never given to the reader, but vital to the author if he is to have a sure and convincing touch."

Society fame note: "Susan Glaspell, author of 'The Glory of the Conquered,' 'The Visioning,' etc., is a good middle westerner, and prefers to spend her winters in Iowa, but she will spend this summer at Nantucket."

Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin sailed from Liverpool on the Caronia May 24, and will go from New York directly to her summer home at Hollis, Me.

THE BOOK IN LONDON.

J. M. Barrie Plays the Godfather to Six Waifs—Andrew Lang's Chirography—More Bacon and Shakespeare Notes.

BY HAYDEN CHURCH.

LONDON, May 22.—J. M. Barrie, who celebrated his 52nd birthday anniversary last week, is one of those rare people who really do "do good by stealth and blush to find it fame," and he will not thank the writer for publishing the following details, which were told me by a mutual friend, the other day, regarding a little charitable enterprise of his—one of many, no doubt, if the truth were known—which never before has been written about. No apology for doing so need be made, however, for it is a thing that thousands of Barrie-lovers in the United States will like to hear of.

All the details cannot be given—Mr. Barrie's friend did not know them—but the essential thing is this, that, unknown to all but one or two people, Barrie is bearing all the expense of bringing up half a dozen boys—youngsters minus both father and mother, who would have stood a poor chance of ever being anybody in particular if their cases had not happened to come under Barrie's notice.

Perhaps, however, it would be more accurate to say that "Peter Pan," the boy who wouldn't grow up himself, is bringing these boys up. For every time the fairy-play about him is performed—it ran into February after being revived for the eighth time at the Duke of York's Theater last Christmas and Barrie's American godchild, Pauline Chase, is now playing it in the provinces—its author's young proteges' benefit, Mr. Barrie having some time ago arranged that a regular percentage of the royalties from "Peter Pan" should be devoted to their support. The six boys live together in a home that Barrie has arranged for them, and once every month they have dinner with their famous benefactor, and report progress.

Barrie himself has given up the house at Leinster Corner, in Hyde Park Road, which he occupied for so long. It overlooked Kensington Gardens, where Peter Pan was born and where Frampton's statue of the "Boy Who Wouldn't Grow Up," now stands. Barrie, as you may know, is the only private person who has a key to the gardens. Perhaps, like Rudyard Kipling at Rottingdean, he found the attentions of sight-seers embarrassing; at all events he has left Leinster Corner, and now lives at Burnha mBeeches, close to Stoke Poges, where, as no good American needs to be told, Gray wrote his "Elegy."

Meanwhile, here are two new and rather amusing stories about Barrie which were told me yesterday by Chester Fox, who, as one of Charles Frohman's chief representatives over here, sees the author of "What Every Woman Knows" frequently. Fox, when asked for further details about Barrie's "Peter Pan" proteges proved as communicative as the proverbial oyster, remarking that Barrie's dislike of publicity being given to his private acts was so great that his name is never even allowed to appear in subscription lists, though few really deserving causes appeal to him in vain.

Fox says that at the time when "Little Mary" was in rehearsal at Wyndham's Theater, he (Fox) was approached by a London newspaper man who declared that he was determined to interview Barrie. "I know that he is rehearsing at Wyndham's," he said, "and I want you to introduce me. I'll attend to the interviewing." Of course Fox couldn't do as he was asked, but he told the scribe there was nothing to prevent his going to Wyndham's, if he wanted to, and the reporter set off forthwith. It was true that Barrie was at Wyndham's and, as Fox wasn't very busy that afternoon, he strolled around, too, as he says, to see the fun. Meanwhile, it seems, the newspaper man had arrived and been told at the stage door that Barrie was not in the theater.

As Fox drew near to the playhouse, whom should he meet but Barrie, short of stature, careless of attire, and pipe in mouth, as usual, slouching unconcernedly along in the opposite direction. Barrie nodded to Fox, and the latter went on to the theater, in a doorway next to which he found his newspaper man, who had not credited the stage-door man's denial and was engaged in mounting guard.

"Well," said Fox, "did you get anything out of Barrie?"

"He hasn't come out yet," said the scribe, "but I know he's in there, and I'm waiting for him."

"Are you sure he hasn't left?" said Fox.

"Dead sure," said the newspaper man, "there's only one person left the building since I've been here—and he was a scene-shifter."

When "Peter Pan" was produced in Paris, Barrie, of course, went across the channel to supervise things, and half the English colony in the Gay City was keen to meet him.

"I'll rely on you," said Barrie to Fox, "to keep me from being worried." So Fox fought off the admiring throng. On the morning after they had arrived in the gay city, he and Barrie went out for a walk in the Bois de Boulogue, and as they strolled along Fox suddenly was greeted by an English-looking man, whom he remembered only vaguely. A few moments talk, however, revealed the fact that he was an inoffensive business acquaintance, and after a few words with him, the former turned to rejoin Barrie. But Mr. Barrie had taken no chances. He had vanished.

Andrew Lang is righteously indignant. He declares that his handwriting is not, as was stated at the proof-readers dinner last week, the most execrable of his generation. He says that at least two living men write a worst fist than he—"Prof. A., whose typewriting is on a lower level than even his handwriting, and Prof. B., whose hand looks plain and clear till you try to decipher it."

Mr. Lang thinks, in fact, that his chirography must be reasonably plain, at all events. "I have just finished a book of 600 pages, worse luck," he says, "on a theme which I do not choose to divulge. Three-fourths of the manuscript went to press in well-typed form, as plain as print. The rest was in my own scrawl. The scrawl was printed from rather more correctly than the typed matter. So the scrawl cannot be so terrible as public denunciation might lead you to suppose."

Lang is obliged to confess, however, that his writing always has been famous for its badness. "At school," he says, "I was sent around to exhibit my copybook to the whole class, as an example of what to avoid. Since then, eternal writing, and the infirmities of age have not improved my hand. But many men write worse, or at all events a few do, yet they are not publicly insulted!"

Are you sick and tired of having it "proved" that Bacon was Shakespeare? If not, or, anyway, pray listen to these new "proofs," which are put forth in deadly seriousness by Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence, Bart., the same who recently called Shakespeare a "drunken, illiterate clown."

The other day a joker showed how easy it was to prove that Shakespeare wrote the Psalms. The number 46 was the "key" in this case, being arrived at by noting that there are four vowels and six consonants in the Bard's name. Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence, who is not joking, takes the number 53 which, he says, "for reasons that it is not necessary to discuss, Bacon selected as one of the keys to the mystery of his authorship to various works."

It is not, of course, necessary to discuss the reasons for this choice. Fifty-three may have been the number of Bacon's house, or his waist-measurement, or anything you like. Keep it in mind, anyway, and then turn to the first page 53,—there are three—in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare, and on it you will find the word "hog." On the second page 53 there is the phrase "gammon of bacon." On the third page 53 there is nothing of the kind at all, and the average man would be disappointed. But Sir Edwin doesn't turn a hair. He quietly says that we must look up the "invisible" page 53, which, it seems, is page 53 when you count back from the end; and on this page is a prize indeed. For, according to Sir Edwin, these three words occur: "Pompey," "in" and "got," and they are so arranged that the first is directly over the second, and the second over the third.

Now, says Sir Edwin exultantly, do the first letters of these three words spell "pig" or do they not? They do, undoubtedly. And the baronet, flushed and encouraged by this success, discovers, on another page, that the initial letters of three lines, when read upward this time, spell "sow." It is all very well to talk about coincidences—hog, pig and sow—not to mention Bacon-hog, pig and sow—not to mention the "grammon," will need a lot of explaining away. At least, Sir Edwin thinks so.

MRS. CARL HAYDEN.

Wife of First Representative in Congress Sent from the New State of Arizona—Mrs. Hayden Is an Excellent Type of the Southwest Woman, Bright, Energetic and Intellectual.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

Mrs. Carl Hayden.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—One to whom the glories of the Grand Canyon are as familiar as the sky line on the river front to the ferry boat traveler in Manhattan awakens a large amount of interest. Especially is this true when the season drags out and everyone feels weary of political gossip and the routine of social affairs. Representative and Mrs. Hayden came to Washington within the past two months, and they seem to have brought a breath of the ozone from their pine-clad mesas. Their keen and candid appraisement of the East and its advantages counter the free, unrestricted life in the West makes conversation, which spurs the most ennuied denizens of the Atlantic seaboard to take up the gauntlet for hearth and home. Mr. Hayden is a native of Arizona, and a most enthusiastic son of the great Southwest. His parents were early settlers and he was born at a picturesque spot, Rancho Bonito, near Tempe.

"I am a native of the Golden State, California," said Mrs. Hayden, "but I have all the zeal of the neophyte about Arizona. California is a wonderful commonwealth as all will admit, but my adopted State seems to present even more aspects to admire. In Phoenix we are an oasis of a desert and a journey is there filled with the joy of beauty in land and sky, and in the splendid background of mountains beyond the tablelands. Everyone has read of nature's profusion in an oasis and Phoenix seems to realize the brightest anticipations. We have from the Roosevelt dam, water in as great abundance as Washington enjoys from the great reservoir of the Potomac. Consequently our grass is verdant always and our flowers respond to the slightest care with a wealth of blossom. Add to this a sky which, even the soft radiance of Greece and Italy cannot surpass and a climate which is bracing and lifegiving, as the scores of invalids will attest.

"Arizona lies entirely within the arid region, but the popular myth that the name is a corruption of the words arid zone is not accepted by historians. The word is of Indian origin and means 'a place of little springs,' probably relating to the discovery of the silver nuggets near Nogales, where springs abound. It seems impossible to express in what life in the East differs so essentially from the life to which I have become devoted in the Southwest. Certainly every one is busy enough here, and the days go by on wings. But they seem purposeless days to me, and though I am enjoying my first winter in Washington, as everyone must enjoy such an experience, I am looking out into the future for the first sign of getting home. We have broad vistas in Arizona, and I think that nature affects our vision in appraising things of more intimate relation. We live much in the open, and I miss my rides on the boundless plains, where the glorious desert flowers glow under the sun and the sage brush and the yucca reach heroic size. I drive a great deal at home, and there are fascinating sights in the solitude of the plains not to be found among the crowded thoroughfares of Washington and its environs.

"Phoenix is quite a modern and well-planned city, and we have our clubs, some serious, some for amusement and many for civic betterment and for philanthropy and patriotism. We have a study club and we work very diligently. The membership is limited so that we may keep within the bounds of those who really wish to study. Last year we made an exhaustive reading of Napoleon's life. We have stringent rules about attendance, and those who permit pleasure to interfere have to enrich the club treasury with fines. Of the State, I rejoice that it is becoming one of the beaten roads of travel. Year after year more tourists come to that awe-inspiring wonder of the world, the Grand Canyon of Arizona, and of these a fair proportion are foreigners lured to cross the ocean and the continent by an account of the grandeur of this natural phenomenon. I have visited this wonderland many times, but it can stand countless inspections. There are now excellent hotels and every facility to make the journey as comfortable and easy as such a plunge into the heart of chasms will permit. Another splendid point of view for the traveler is the chalcedony forests near Holbrook in the Navajo country, where the ossified tree trunks some four feet thick have been broken by the forces of nature into exquisitely-colored blocks of marble. Everywhere along the horizon are the great mesas of sandstone with pinnacled tops rising a thousand feet or more in sheer rugged abruptness which is almost appalling. Such sights as these impress the mind and make cities and mere artificial efforts seem insignificant."

Representative and Mrs. Hayden are another of the many interesting people in the legislative set whose romance began during their college days. Both were students at Leland Stanford, and though they never were sweethearts in the accepted college term, their friendship began then, and slowly ripened from admiration into a life-long devotion. Mrs. Hayden was before her marriage Miss Nan Downing, daughter of Patrick Henry Downing, whose wife was Margaret Collins. Both were natives of Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Downing were among the early settlers of California, arriving at Wilmington, near San Pedro, in the early '50s. Later they moved to Los Angeles. This was their home when Mrs. Hayden, then in her early 'teens, passed a brilliant examination in the Los Angeles public school and went to Leland Stanford. She remained there for the time required for the classified course, and took the degree of bachelor of arts. For several years she taught in the Normal School of Los Angeles. Mr. Hayden intended to prepare himself thoroughly for a political career in the department of economics, and had already made a good record when the death of his father, Charles Trumbull Hayden, recalled him home to take up the serious duties of life. He has, however, continued his readings along economic lines, and is counted one of the deep students not only of books but of current conditions and their results. Mr. Hayden's mother, left a widow, was one of the forces for public progress in her community. She was born Sallie Davis, and comes of that fine old family of Arkansas and Mississippi that has written its name in large letters all over the history of their country. She conserved and improved the possessions left by her husband, and kept up her quaint and comfortable home at Rancho Bonito, where her children and their friends always received a true southern welcome. The library there is one of the best in the State, and Mr. Hayden and his wife frequently take a holiday jaunt home just to revel among the books. A deep friendship existed between Mrs. Hayden and her son's wife, and this friendship was the real beginning of their romance.

"Arizona is becoming a rich agricultural country," said Mrs. Hayden, "and we will soon be quoting crops like our sister States in the grain belt. Alfalfa is the chief produce now, and as this crop is one of the most repaying that can raised, great attention is being given it, though cereals and truck farming have their share of attention. One thing we are very proud of in Phoenix is our olive oil. Splendid olive groves dot the plain about, as they should, to follow the traditions of the desert country. Our factory within Phoenix has produced olive oil which has received the blue ribbon at every State international exposition for the past ten years. It is delightful to the taste and makes those excellent salad dressings of which every good housekeeper is proud. We are devotees of the home and the necessity of having the board spread with toothsome, dainty food. One thing I do pity the eastern people most sincerely about is that their vegetables and fruits seem utterly tasteless after the splendid flavor to which I am accustomed. The iron in the soil, the perpetual sunshine, and now the abundance of water make the ideal conditions for bringing out the essence of vegetable life. Fruit with us seems a different proposition. Here it may be most agreeable to the eye, but to the palate it is a swindle. I often wish I could get some of the early spring vegetables for my friends. If I could, I think we would have a wholesome emigration to the Southwest, where such dainties are to be obtained by rich and poor alike. Our plums grow to wonderful size, and they are food for the gods. The mission grape and its wine are world-famous, equal to the grapes ripened by the ardent sun of Spain, and then we have many fruits and vegetables unknown here, but a staple of food with us."

Mrs. Hayden, though feeling an exile, has taken much pleasure in Washington socially. She joined the Congressional Club soon after her arrival, and has taken an active part in its affairs. The desire to meet women from every part of the country and to exchange views has made the Congressional Club most valuable to the newcomer, and none has entered more heartily into its spirit than the wife of the member from Arizona. It has been exhilirating to Mrs. Hayden to realize how many ideals different people cherish, and to find the valuation placed on various objects. As so many have found it, Mrs. Hayden says it is an education and worth any sacrifice to attain. Likewise she finds that it makes her cherish her own home treasures more ardently and more appreciative of her own wonderful environment and its possibilities to enlarge soul and mind.

Representative Hayden is an expert with the rifle, and his wife and he often take hunting jaunts together in the mountains. Every summer they go to Camp Perry, near Chicago, where competitive exhibitions are held. Mr. Hayden, as befits a man who has been sheriff of Arizona, has won many gold medals, blue ribbons and other symbols of a steady hand and accurate eye.

"Everyone asks me about the heat of Arizona," said Mrs. Hayden, "and I think the comic papers have given some various erroneous impressions to the great American reading public. Counted by degrees as the thermometer registers, the heat sounds tremendous. But then the air is absolutely devoid of moisture and the evenings are cool and refreshing. The summer is short in comparison even to that here, and the spring, autumn and winter are made up of such weather as one might imagine in fairyland. Winter filled with glorious sunshine certainly must appeal to those who live where dark murky days bind up soul and body, and then the awful piercing winds and blinding snows are something which everyone would like to miss out of the year. To ride across our mesas in the depths of winter is an experience worth living in Arizona to obtain. Our forests have many of the evergreen cedars, junipers, pines and spruces, and the woods are with us always, when only gaunt, bare limbs confront one here."

Representative and Mrs. Hayden will remain until Congress adjourns, and will go first to Phoenix and then to their customary haunts about Chicago. Married only about five years, Mr. and Mrs. Hayden are among the young people Congressional circles, and they will undoubtedly take a prominent place in active affairs. Mrs. Hayden is not in any sense a devotee of Vanity Fair, though she enjoys meeting interesting people. She had given this season to familiarizing herself with Washington, and, of course, has put in many weeks of calling.

NO BOYCOTT ON NON-UNION WORK

CARPENTERS' UNION DEFEATED IN IMPORTANT CASE.

[illegible] of Attempt to Forcibly [illegible] Establishments by Putting a Secondary Boycott Upon Their Products—Injunction Made [illegible].

[New York Journal of Commerce:] Justice Stapleton of the Supreme Court, Kings county, Brooklyn, on [illegible] handed down his decision in the trial of the Newton boycott case, which was heard in January, [illegible] suit affecting the question of [illegible] limitation and the so-called "secondary boycott," which has been watched with great interest throughout the country.

The court gave judgment in favor of the Newton company and made permanent the injunction previously [illegible] against the Carpenters' Union.

The plaintiffs, the Albro J. Newton Company, are Brooklyn lumber and building trade merchants, who in [illegible], 1910, complained that their business had been injured by the [illegible] of the defendants, officers and members of the carpenters union, [illegible] them to use materials such as doors, sashes and wood trim manufactured in unionized workshops, and [illegible] under penalty of a strike [illegible] part of their workmen refusing to handle material that has come from open shops.

The Albro J. Newton Company obtained a temporary injunction November 1, 1910, and that was sustained by Justice Blackmar in an elaborate opinion on the legal and [illegible] aspects of the case. [illegible] was appealed against by the [illegible] Union and the Appelate [illegible] having unanimously sustained Justice Blackmar, the case [illegible] on the part of the Newton company to have the injunction made permanent by trial in equity, at [illegible] full testimony was given.

Justice Stapleton, in his decision, [illegible]

"[illegible] facts established upon the [illegible] of this action were the same [illegible] accepted by the special term [illegible] the order herein continuing the temporary injunction. To those [illegible] has been applied by authority governing this court. (Newton vs. Erickson, 70, misc., 291; 126 [illegible] 949 aff'd. 129 N. Y. Supp., [illegible]) To restate the facts in [illegible], as they were in that opinion [illegible] and accurately expressed. To rewrite the law, in consideration of its exhaustive and [illegible] exposition by Justice Blackmar would be pedantic.

"The plaintiff may have judgment [illegible] permanent injunction, expressed [illegible] precisely as those used in [illegible]."

[illegible] of the trial it was [illegible] record that the plaintiff, Albro J. Newton company, a New [illegible] corporation, is a well known [illegible] manufacturer of [illegible] and wood trim in the [illegible] of Brooklyn, where it has been conducting its business for many years. It employs about 175 men, [illegible] twenty-five are carpenters [illegible] balance are machine hands [illegible] engaged in various [illegible] of the business, and in its [illegible] of all men it has never [illegible] for or against any one [illegible] was or was not a member [illegible] union. The plaintiff has [illegible] in the business over $200,000, [illegible] annual sales (of which the [illegible] part are to customers in Brooklyn [illegible] a small part are to customers [illegible]) exceed $300,000. Up [illegible], 1910, the plaintiff or its [illegible] had never experienced any [illegible] on the part of the defendants or anyone else to the purchase, [illegible] installation of the plaintiff's [illegible], and no strikes had been [illegible] against the purchasers of the [illegible] products, although these [illegible] had uniformly employed [illegible] of the defendant union.

"[illegible] defendants are all officers or [illegible] agents of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of [illegible], or its affiliated body, the District Council of New York [illegible]. The United Brotherhood is an unincorporated association [illegible] carpenters, having a membership of some 200,000 members [illegible] 1900 local unions. In localities where more than one local union [illegible] district councils are formed of [illegible] of local unions in that [illegible], and the Joint District Council of New York and Vicinity is such [illegible]. As shown by the extract from "The Carpenter," read [illegible] the deposition of Frank Duffy, [illegible] Brotherhood of Carpenters and its affiliated branches has for [illegible] of years past sought to [illegible] the open shop and establish [illegible] closed shop in the in-[illegible]

"[illegible] island of Manhattan the combination of the defendants has been [illegible] that the Master Builders' Association, composing a hundred [illegible] representative builders [illegible], were coerced by the [illegible] of strikes and labor difficulties to enter into an agreement [illegible] carpenters' union in October, [illegible] not to purchase or use any [illegible] woodwork.

"[illegible] in Brooklyn were [illegible] by this combination [illegible] September, 1910, for few, [illegible] had been called on account of non-union woodwork and the [illegible] had experienced none. In regard to this condition and without [illegible] that there was any objection to the materials in question, the [illegible] customers, Maguire, Norris, [illegible], O'Brien Bros. (concerning whom W. R. Rogers testified) [illegible] placed contracts with the [illegible] in the spring of 1910 aggregating [illegible] $80,000 and $100,000. [illegible], 1910, John Wolfinger, who [illegible] general organizer deputized [illegible] headquarters at Indianapolis to [illegible] matter, came from Indianapolis [illegible] upon the plaintiff's president [illegible] him to sign an agreement [illegible] with the carpenters' [illegible] of which was left with [illegible] agreement required the [illegible] to employ only union men, [illegible] to discharge and refuse [illegible] any carpenter who would [illegible] the carpenters' union or [illegible] carpenters' union would not [illegible] membership.

"[illegible] part of the agreement [illegible] Wolfinger, as interpreted [illegible] Mackenzie and the [illegible] for the defense, forbade the [illegible] making any purchases [illegible] materials from other [illegible] shops, although the plaintiff [illegible] found it necessary to make [illegible] in the ordinary conduct of its business in order to fill out [illegible] with builders. It [illegible] of the plaintiff to [illegible] restrictive agreement which [illegible] that caused this suit. [illegible] 13, 1910, defendants [illegible] Wolfinger called on Hilton, [illegible] of the Builders' Association, and said there was going [illegible] on account of unfair [illegible] 15 defendants [illegible] and Rice called again on Hilton and said they were going to try and unionize the non-union mills and mentioned the names of Newton, J. S. Loomis, Cross, Austin & Ireland and Louis Bossert.

On Saturday morning, the 19th, all large building operations using the plaintiff's material were struck because of the plaintiff's material. Everyone of these customers were operating under union conditions by the employment of union carpenters and the payment of union wages, and had used Newton's material for over ten years past and had never heard of any objection raised to it theretofore. Every carpenter employed on every one of these jobs quit work at the same time except W. H. Rogers, who was fined $25 for refusing to quit work, and on failing to pay the fine was expelled.

Within a day or so after all these strikes had taken place defendant Neal, Erickson and Rice called on Hilton again and stated that strikes had been declared on all jobs handling the products of plaintiff and that they were going to unionize Newton's mill first and then Loomis, Cross, Austin & Ireland and Bossert, etc. At one meeting between the union and the board of arbitration of the Builders' Association Rice stated that the only reason they had not struck other jobs using the material of other non-union concerns was that they would be unable to handle the situation in such a way, and that it was necessary to concentrate upon one manufacturer at a time. He stated that they were going to take them in order.

The record shows that this is not a local combination inspired by any complaint on the part of Newton's employees, but that it emanated from Indianapolis, was carried out by Messrs. Wolfinger and Rice, who were organizers appointed from and paid by the headquarters at Indianapolis, and who worked in conjunction with the local authorities. It was part of a general scheme to accomplish the same conditions in Brooklyn as had already been accomplished in Manhattan, and the plaintiff was picked out as their first victim. There was no contention that there was any desire to aid the plaintiff's employees, but, on the contrary, the presumption is that many of the plaintiff's employees would be discarded.

WHY ANY DIFFERENCE.

Why Any Worse for Railroads to Tie Up Traffic to Accomplish Ends Than for Their Employees?

[Journal of Commerce:] In 1910, after a liberal increase in wages had been made, the principal railroad lines filed schedules of rates to take effect at the beginning of November of that year, making a considerable increase over those then in effect, one object of which was to cover the expense involved in the advance in wages. Congress was then in session and was considering amendments to the interstate commerce law which would enlarge the powers of the commission over rates and make their increase subject to its approval. The government intervened to prevent the schedules already filed from taking effect until the amendments of the law were disposed of, and after they had been adopted the Interstate Commerce Commission took the matter up and after a long series of hearings refused to allow the advance in rates. The railroads were forced to get along without it, though their expenses were increased and their net earnings were declining.

Suppose those having direction of the railroads had attempted to tie up traffic over a large section of the country by stopping operation until their demand for higher rates was conceded. They have franchise privileges and are subject to legal authority. They might forfeit their charters granted by States and their managers might be prosecuted for conspiracy or for violation of law, but it would be possible for them to defy authority and act arbitrarily regardless of consequences. They could as a matter of cold fact tie up traffic for a time and cause a great deal of injury and loss to the intractable public whose authorities refused to allow them to advance rates. Suppose they had tried it or should try it at any future time!

We leave the consequences to be imagined. But so far as public interests and rights are concerned, what practical difference does it make whether railroad traffic is tied up by a combination or conspiracy of corporation officers and managers or by a combination or conspiracy of the officers and committee chairmen of locomotive engineers or railroad employees of any class? Why should one method be tolerated any more than the other? It would be no less outrageous, no less injurious, and ought to be no less resented and condemned. The law does not apply in one case as in the other, since labor unions are not incorporated, and clothed with legal responsibility; but ought it not to be made to apply in some effective way? This question will have to be very seriously considered if the labor strike is to be made a weapon of warfare against the industry and trade and the economic welfare of the whole country, as a means of enforcing compliance with demands, right or wrong.

FEATS OF MEMORY.

Remarkable Ability of a Librarian of Florence Who Remembered Everything He Read or Saw.

[New York Sun:] Experienced librarians will carry in their heads a list of titles of books, with the names of the authors and even the proper number of the books and their places on the shelves, to an extent astonishing to the ordinary reader, says a writer in dealing with memory. Long practice gives this accomplishment, but it is of course the sooner attained when the person possesses a naturally retentive literary memory.

This faculty was downright genius in Antony Magliabecchi, librarian of the Grand Duke Cosmo III. of Florence. He could tell not only who had treated a subject designedly, but also those who had touched upon it incidentally in writing upon other subjects. This information was given with the greatest exactness, naming the author, the book, the words and often the very number of the page at which the passage occurred.

Magliabecchi visited other libraries, and his local memory was such that he needed but to see and consult a book but once in its place to fix everything pertaining to it permanently in his mind. One day, the story runs, the grand duke sent for Magliabecchi to ask whether there could be procured for him a book that was decidedly rare.

"No, your grace," answered the librarian, "for there is but one copy in the world, and that is in the library of the grand seignior at Constantinople. It is the seventh book on the second shelf on the right as one enters."

Struck by Lightning.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch:] Twenty-two men were carrying a bar of iron twenty-nine feet long, at the Pittsburgh Steel Company's Monessen plant yesterday, when a bolt of lightning struck the iron, twisted it into an "S" shape, knocked all the men unconscious and internally injured two so that they are in a critical condition.

REPORTS ON WAGES.

higher earnings, look upon themselves as "millionaires," to say nothing of not being designated as "servants."

British Wage Conditions in 1911.

The year 1911 added $126,173 a week to the wages of 825,204 British work people. Of this number, 416,191 received a net increase of $183,291 per week, and 399,216 sustained a net decrease of $57,118 per week. Foods were 10 per cent. higher at the close of 1911 than at the end of 1910. Rents also were higher. Textiles were 10 per cent. lower. Trade unionists (800,000 members) had 1.7 per cent. less "unemployed" (bar strikes.) In the last half of 1911, railroad gross earnings decreased $2,433,250 by reason of strikes. There were 864 trade disputes, involving 931,050 work people, being about 9 per cent. of the whole industrial population of the United Kingdom, excluding agricultural laborers, and the work and wages loss was 10,247,100 days. The British Board of Trade report for 1911 says that employment in the woolen and worsted, carpets, hosiery, bleaching, dyeing, pottery and woodworking trades was generally good. The same board's report for 1912 will tell a very different story by reason of the great cotton-goods and coal-mining strikes (now settled in a kind of a way) and the present serious (over one man) transport workers' strike.

Woolen Mills Wages.

When the Lawrence (Mass.) mills strike was on it was falsely shouted by Haywood and his crowd that the rates of wages paid in the mills there only averaged $6 or less weekly (and many people without investigation, believed the lying statement;) also that the Lawrence wages rates were less than the rates paid in other textile cities for the same classes of work. Proof that both statements were false and incendiary is given in the following comparison between Providence, R. I., and Lawrence, of the rates paid in each city:

	Providence Per Week.	Lawrence Per Week.
Overseers:
Carding	$20.00 to $25.00	$30.00 to $40.00
Combing	24.00 to 30.00	36.00 to 40.00
Scouring	17.00 to 25.00	18.00 to 25.00
Drawing	18.00 to 40.00	24.00 to 38.00
Frame spinning	18.00 to 24.00	25.00 to 40.00
Mule spinning (woolen)	15.00 to 20.00	40.00 to 45.00
Mule spinning (worsted)	15.00 to 20.00	20.00 to 25.00
Warp dressing	16.00 to 20.00	25.00 to 30.00
Weaving	25.00 to 35.00	35.00 to 50.04
Dyeing	25.00 to 40.00	40.00 to 75.00
Wool sorter	9.00 to 14.50	10.00 to 16.50
Frame spinner	5.50 to 7.50	6.50 to 8.50
Mule spinner (woolen)	9.50 to 17.00	11.00 to 17.50
Weaver	8.00 to 18.00	9.00 to 18.50
Burler	6.50 to 10.00	8.00 to 9.00
Examiner	7.50 to 11.00	11.00 to 16.00
Spooler	5.00 to 11.00	5.00 to 9.00
Shearer	8.00 to 11.00	7.00 to 15.00
Reeler	6.00 to 7.00	6.50 to 7.50
Washer tender	8.00 to 12.50	7.50 to 11.00

and so on through the long list of mill worker's individual occupations. There was not any reduction of wages, as such and as alleged, but an average reduction in weekly earnings of 33 cents per operative, due entirely to legislation, procured by union labor, which reduced the weekly working hours from 56 to 54. In other words, the labor leaders wanted (and got) less work, but they also wanted the two hours weekly unearned wages.

Russian Cotton-Mills Wages.

The wages paid to Russian cotton mill workers are far below those paid in the United States, and even less than in other European countries.

For instance: Per year.

For instance:	Per Year.
Central district	$104.22
Baltic district	143.94
Western district	150.22

Food costs each operative 14.5 kopecks (about seven cents) a day, and each year has 180 fast days, on which neither meat, eggs or butter can be eaten. The chief regular diet is bread, tea, and vegetables. Do we want to bring American cotton mills wages into competition with Russian cotton mills wages? No, you say—then vote next November to keep Russian cotton goods out of this country.

English and American Mill Wages.

	England. Per Week.	United States. Per Week.
Wool washers (Still less in Germany, France and Italy.)	$4.93	$8.21
Comb tenders	4.26	7.85
Gill winders	2.83	5.84
Drawing frame tenders	2.68	6.21
Female spinners	2.25	6.40
Weavers	3.83	10.54

and so on all down the line to the immense advantage of workers in American mills. Native born operatives in American mills naturally predominate in the occupations that demand skill and ability, followed by the natives of the British Isles and Germany; while Italy and the countries of Southern and Eastern Europe are represented largely in the occupations requiring comparatively little or no experience or skill. It was by organizing this latter class, those naturally earning the lowest rates of wages, and inflaming their increasing passions, that Haywood, the anarchist, and his personal associates, were able to create the violence and outrages which prevailed in the Lawrence and Passaic mill strikes.

The Retort Courteous.

[New York Times:] It happened in a trolley car. A large, broad-shouldered man was being pushed from behind by a nervous, narrow-faced woman. As he moved up the step and into the crowd, tried to pay his fare, and get his change from the conductor, she was evidently much annoyed by his deliberation, and, as he was so large, she could not get past him.

Finally his fare was paid, and he managed to get through the door into the car. He sank into a seat with a patient look on his face. The nervous, narrow-faced woman was close behind him.

As she sat down she jerked out over her shoulder at him, "Chivalry," and he, with a smile on his face, said, "Suffragette."

Lived Without the Doctor.

[Kansas City Journal:] The expert medical witness had just descended from the stand when a recess was announced in the criminal court and so he paused for a few moments to chat with Judge Ralph S. Latshaw, who dearly delights in twitting the medicos.

"Whenever I see a doctor on the stand," related the judge, "I am forcibly reminded of an experience when I was an assistant prosecuting attorney many years ago.

"A storekeeper on East Ninth street was shot by robbers when he refused to open his cash drawer. Four bullets found him as their mark and when officers arrived on the scene he was lying on the floor, dead to all outward appearances. Doctors, who had hurried to the store, took a look at him, shook their heads and went away. Not one of them offered to probe for the bullets.

"And do you know," smiles the judge to the doctor, "that was what saved him. The storekeeper recovered and is in business to this very day. He still carries the bullets, one of them in his head. Now what would have happened to him, doctor, if they had probed for the bullets?"

But by this time the expert was gone.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Cerussite.

TONOPAH (Nev.) May 15.—Q.: I send you for classification a fibrous mineral found in a pockety seam on a ledge in this district. It is not only fibrous but in one other form, which form please describe. The mineral reacts for lead, and in a carbonate reaction, but I have never observed cerussite in so strange-looking mineral. Will you please tell me how I can tell baryte from lead carbonate, both minerals look alike, as you well know. S. C.

A.: It is not an everyday occurrence to meet with cerussite in native, fibrous forms, and it is rare that the same sample carries, with the fibrous carbonate, six-sided prisms with macled crystals. All of these characteristics are present in the sample, and the fibrous and macled forms are tinged blue by salts of copper. The specimen is lead carbonate (cerussite.) To distinguish between massive baryte and cerussite, expose the sample to the vapor of ammonium sulphide; if the surface of the specimen turns black it is cerussite.

Potash Present.

SANTA BARBARA, May 15.—Q.: I I am sending you by Wells-Fargo samples of rock, four in number. Would like your opinion as to their composition and commercial value. Do any of them bear any relation to potash-rock? Samples all taken from the same contact. D. W. H.

A.: Sample No. 1 is a blackish (iron-manganese) slightly bituminous substance, carrying salines; potash 3.2 per cent. No. 2 is impure lime and magnesium carbonate with aluminum silicate. Potash present 2.25 per cent. No. 3 is an aluminous, shaly mass; potash 2.8 per cent. Sample No. 4 (two specimens) reddish-pink silicate of aluminum (stained with iron and magnesium carbonate.) The other specimen is a yellowish almuinum silicate. In both samples we find trace of potash only. The reddish-pink specimen represents material that would make a fair coloring matter for low-grade paint, white wash, etc. No sample represents a paying proposition if worked on the commercial scale.

Apatite Crystals.

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah) May 16.—Q.: Sample of hematite from near the Nevada line. Will you please name the crystals imbedded in the ore? C. A. M.

A.: The crystals are nearly pure phosphate of lime, and they are phosphorescent when placed on ignited charcoal.

Impure Baryte.

SAN DIMAS, May 17.—Q.: Ore sample from this locality. What is its composition? J. B.

A.: Magnesia and lime are present and probably baryte-dolomite will stand for a definition of the specimen.

Iron Carbonate.

LOS ANGELES, May 17.—Q.: I am of opinion that the yellow samples I am sending with this letter are rich in phosphates. Am I right? Locality on a ranch in Riverside county. T. J. M.

A.: The samples are siderite (iron carbonate) and there is no phosphate present in the mass.

Asphalt Base.

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—Q.: Rock from near the Colorado River. Does it carry asphalt or paraffine. A. T.

Salines.

SAN DIEGO, May 18.—Q.: Herein find enclosed a sample of native mineral salts from Eastern San Bernardino county, said to be largely soluble in water, and to contain a high percentage of sulphate of soda and potash. Does it resemble, to any marked extent, the Stassfurt salts of Germany? If abundant, could it be mined to a profit? A. B. F.

A.: Largely soluble in water, sulphate of soda and potash? In other words, supposed to be crude "Glauber salt" and potash.

The sample is in earthy form and of a gray-white color with efflorescent crusts showing at surfaces of the substances. On fresh fractures the luster is dull at the surface. Translucent, efflorescent and the greater per cent. of the mass spontaneouely falls into powder when exposed to the atmosphere. "Brittle, easily frangible. Has a cooling, and then a bitter, saline taste." In hardness, and in specific gravity 1.5 each. Composition (quantitative analysis:) Soda, 18.2; sulphuric acid, 22.8; magnesia, 3.50; iron, 0.50; alumina, 2; sodium chloride, 4; potash, 3; water, 46, percentages respectively.

For your information, and for the benefit of a large number of correspondents, together with the fact that the search for minerals carrying the salts of potash in workable and profitable occurrence has been a disappointment to many prospectors, we have carefully analyzed your sample, and state further on the subject, as follows: Nearly all potash salts of mineral content, used in the many industries of the United States, are imported chiefly from Germany. The potash industry of the United States, and especially the minerals of that salt located in Nevada, Arizona and in the desert country of California, have been exploited, reported upon and alleged to be in big deposits that can be extracted at great profit. It is therefore about time to issue a warning to the many prospectors that have been led astray by such, not true in fact, information. With the exception of some pockety formations of high grade niter near Winnemucca, Nev., a few "streaks" of the same mineral in Beck's Canyon, near Salt Lake City, and a few other stringers, here and there, in the territory stated, there is not a niter proposition that would pay to work in the entire United States and it has cost us a few thousands of dollars to find this positive information.

There is one source of obtaining potash at a profit in the utilization of the wood ashes that could be obtained from the territories of our immense forests, but that is probably "too slow a game" for Americans.

There is a possibility of finding workable deposits, in the peculiar formations along the coast of the Pacific Ocean, and on the order of the potash localities of Germany herein referred to. The importation of potash salts for the year 1910, as figured by the Bureau of Statistics, was, in money value $8,363,623.

Space forbids that we refer to the many industries which use potash salts, but we can, in a general way, show that in the manufacture of alums; the cyanides, so largely used in the extraction of metals; in the "derived compounds;" in fertilizer uses; for bleaching materials; in the manufacture of explosives; in the manufacture of "general chemicals;" in the soap industry, etc., proves that it would be a blessing indeed if a source of potash could be discovered in the United States.

We admit that there are a great number of rocks and minerals that are potash bearing in our country, but, as yet, there is no process that will extract the so far insoluble potash content at anything near a profit.

"Although potash occurs in many forms and places in the United States . . . up to the middle of the nineteenth century wood ashes constituted practically the sole source of supply. In 1857 a shaft which the German government had been sinking for about five years near Stassfurt reached a depth of approximately 1100 feet, but in the meanwhile had passed through a deposit of so-called 'Abraumsalze,' or refuse salt, consisting largely of compounds of potash and magnesia, then considered worthless. This deposit is now and long has been the chief source of potash and the potassium salts of commerce. It is estimated by C. Ochsenius that the German deposit of potash salts may last over 600,000 years."

"The theory developed by Ochsenius for the occurrence of potash salts at Stassfurt is briefly as follows: A deep bay is imagined, connected with the sea by a narrow and shallow channel, but otherwise cut off from oceanic circulation by a bar. If no large streams enter the bay, the outflow from it will be small, but sea water can enter freely to offset the losses due to evaporation. Evaporation, of course, takes place only at the surface, and the upper layers, thus becoming denser, must sink, producing a saline concentration at the bottom. In this manner, being continually supplied with new material from without, the salinity of the bay will gradually increase until saturation is reached and the deposition of salts begins. So long as salt water can enter the bay this process will continue, and the depths of the basin will in time become a solid mass of salt, covered with a sheet of bittern. If, meanwhile, an elevation of the land takes place separating the bay completely from the ocean, evaporation may proceed to its limit and the mother liquor, containing the more soluble salts, including the potash salts, will deposit its contents in more or less well-defined layers above the salt at the bottom. In the Karaboghas and other bays on the eastern shore of the Caspian Sea the process of saline concentration can now be observed in actual operation. . . . It must be remembered that salt is not deposited from sea water until it has been concentrated to about one-tenth of its original volume. Suppose now, a large sheet of water, in whose bottom there is a deep depression, be cut off from the ocean by any change in the level of the land. The water in the depression will gradually become concentrated and its saline load will tend to accumulate there. A layer of salt will thus form of much greater thickness than if evaporation took place over a comparatively level bottom, and if the surface area of the depression is small in comparison with that of the original sheet of water the depth of the deposit may be very great. Such a deposit might also be reinforced by leaching from other salt beds or from diffused salts in adjacent areas—a process which is now going on in the valley of the Dead Sea and in certain lakes of the arid region of the western part of the United States."

There are many localities in the United States where the sea water can easily be concentrated to "one-tenth of its original volume" and not necessarily by solar evaporation. Why therefore limit the possible productive area to the Far West, and exclude the territory of the East?

The writer, some two years ago, was called upon to witness the working of some novel machinery at Bridgeport, Ct., where certain submarine boats, originated by the Lake Torpedo Boat Company, were equipped with a tube attachment which was capable of lifting sands, concentrates, etc., from the floor of Long Island Sound. This machinery may play an important part in the development of potash from sea waters of the United States, and not confined to any particular locality. It is needless, perhaps, to add that we have no monetary or other selfish consideration in referring to this submarine tube.

In the Stassfurt locality over thirty minerals have been identified, "ranging from the calcium sulphate at the bottom to the mother liquor or carnallite salts at the top." The soluble in water Kainite being probably the best known and most important salt. "The organic sources of potash salts are wood ashes, beet-sugar molasses and residues, wool scourings (suint,) and seaweed.

Kainite is the sulphate of potash, it also carries magnesium sulphate, sodium and magnesium chloride. Kainite is, in mineralogy, the mineral polyhalite, made up of the sulphates of lime, of magnesia, and of potash; together with sodium chloride, iron peroxide, and silica; the three last-named in low percentages and combined with water.

While we can but refer to your sample as of more than ordinary interest, the practical exploitation of the locality and the deposit, if abundant, will stand for some prospecting at least.

Rocks.

BAKERSFIELD, May 19.—Q.: Herewith we hand you two samples of minerals. One marked "desert," found out on the desert east of Randsburg, Cal. Sample 2 marked "Kern Mesa," found near Bakersfield, on the mesa. Would like to know what they are and if either has any commercial value? L. S. H.

A.: Potash, low percentage, is contained in the "desert" marked pearlstone, but there is no process that can extract the salt at a profit. The "Kern mesa" sample is impure Lydianstone (touchstone.)

Golden Mica.

LOS ANGELES, May 20.—Q.: Herewith sample of mineral found in subsoil at San Gabriel. Is this what is commonly termed mica? Is there a trace of gold in it? What, if any, commercial value is there in it? J. D. C.

A.: The sample is a variety of mica, and if separated from the gangue matter it would answer for uses in the manufacture of wallpaper, etc. There is not a trace of free gold in the sample, and it is doubtful if the sample would assay gold.

Salines and Sulphides.

ENSENADA (Lower California,) May 20.—Q.: I am sending you seven samples all from ground near Ensenada. Does No. 1 carry tungsten? I call No. 2 magnesite. What do you make out of No. 3, is it opal? No. 4 may be carbonate of lead. No. 5, is this silver? No. 6, is this pitchblende? No. 7, topaz? PROSPECTOR.

A.: Sample No. 1 is baryte (barium sulphate,) used in the paint industry. No. 2 is volcanic ash. No. 3 is a grayish obsidian (volcanic glass.) No. 4 is a mixture of sodium sulphate, magnesium sulphate, sodium chloride and aluminum silicate. No. 5 is fahlerz, a low grade, refractory variety of tetrahedrite, carrying antimony, arsenic and lead traces. No. 6 is simply magnetite, and No. 7 is crystallized quartz.

Vanadium Absent.

LOS ANGELES, May 21.—Q.: Enclosed find sample of ore sent me by a friend prospector. He thinks it is vanadium ore. It comes from near Hillside, Ariz. Any information you can give will be greatly appreciated. A. H. H.

A.: The sample carries carbonate of lime with aluminum silicate; it is micaceous, and lime is present as sulphate (gypsum) also. Tested for vanadium with negative results.

Amblygonite and Spodumene.

LOS ANGELES, May 21.—Q.: Will you please be so kind as to advise me of the commercial uses of the enclosed sample of amblygonite, which comes from a deposit in Southern California, in a new locality. What is the condition of the market today as bearing on the production of salts of lithium? What is the mineralogical name of the sample marked "breast of tunnel?" This last sample is found in very small leads, and I am anxious to know what it is. T. L.

A.: "Amblygonite is the mineral known as "a fluophosphate of aluminum and lithium, containing ordinarily from 7.92 to 9.52 per cent. of lithia."

It is well to note the very important fact that amblygonite of Southern California carries over 45 per cent. phosphoric acid together with over 35 per cent. alumina. One more important fact is that it is easily soluble in sulphuric acid. This mineral has not received the important attention of prospectors that it is worthy of. "In the Pala (California) locality a mass of amblygonite containing a few hundred tons was mined several years ago, but no other large mass has been found." . . . The market for lithium minerals and salts has been a restricted one, as few uses have been known and the number of large consumers has been small. The product most manufactured is lithium carbonate, and for some time it was not widely known what use was made of the bulk of the product. Its use in the artificial lithia waters and for medicinal purposes would account for only a few hundred pounds a year. It is now becoming generally known that it is mainly used in the manufacture of storage batteries. A small quantity probably goes into the manufacture of fireworks. . . . After the mining of amblygonite began on the Peerless claim at Keystone, S. D., the price of lithium carbonate fell from $2 or $2.50 per pound to 50 cents per pound, and large quantities have been sold at still lower prices."

Amblygonite, exclusive of its lithium content, is a valuable mineral, and especially so for its large per cent. of phosphoric acid. For the benefit of prospectors it is well to add that the mineral can be identified by its occurrence in massive form, and "in oblique rhombic prisms, which are rough externally and of a greenish-white, a mountain or sea-green color." It is of vitreous luster, inclining to pearly. Translucent. Streak white, and in fracture uneven. Hardness 6; sp. gr., 3 to 3.11. With the reaction shown as soluble in sulphuric acid, it fuses readily before the blowpipe, and becomes opaque-white on cooling. Some of the mining boys in the hills refer to amblygonite as "augite spar."

Your sample from "breast of tunnel" is kunzite, used for gem purposes, and it is mineralogically known as a variety of spodumene.

SOME ANCIENT ORDNANCE.

While Powder Originated in China the Country is Backward in the Use Of Firearms.

[The Ancient:] It appeared strange, in reading the reports of the disturbances of rebellion in China, to learn of the large number of revolutionists unfamiliar with the uses of gunpowder and that in some of the remote sections of the country such primitive weapons as bows and arrows are a part of the armorial equipment of the fighting clans. This is especially strange when it is considered that the Chinese manufactured and used gunpowder over a century before the discovery of its power by the more civilised world.

That centuries ago they were familiar with the manufacture of destructive weapons in which powder was used is in evidence at the Charlestown Navy Yard, where there are two firearms of Chinese manufacture several hundred years old. One is a breechloading gun, evidently designed for siege work or for use upon a fortification. It is eight feet long, made of wrought iron, having a bore of 1½ inches, the thickness of the barrel being about three-fourths of an inch. The bore is quite smooth, but the exterior is roughly hammered. The stock is bound in wood, for the evident purpose of handling the piece more easily. There are a number of Chinese characters inscribed upon the stock. The gun was manufactured and used in 1370.

Another firearm of most ingenious make, originated and made in China, which occupies a conspicuous place in the naval museum at the navy yard, is a double-barreled magazine gun of six chambers, made in 1607. It is about three feet in length and of a material somewhat resembling French bronze. It is probably one of the earliest magazine guns in existence, and was captured in Korea in 1871 and donated to the museum by Lieut. Joseph E. Jones, U.S.N. The inscription upon the gun, in Chinese hieroglyphics, upon translation reads: "Double-aiming six-shooter, weight 11 catties, made by the department of Three Storehouses. Reign of Wan Lee, 34 years and 10 months. October and November, 1607. Master Workman Joo."

The "cattie" referred to in the weight of the gun is equivalent to a pound of avoirdupois weight. "Department of Three Storehouses" was the name then given to the ordnance department. It would appear therefore from the foregoing that China, although early in the game with the use of firearms, is now sadly in need of present-day skillfulness in the manufacture of suitable implements of warfare, depending, as is well known, for some years upon other nations for most of its munitions of war.

But the Moro lantaka, a bronze cannon, which, according to Brig.-Gen. Philip Reade, U.S.A., retired, has been used for centuries by the Chinese, the Malays, and the Moros of Borneo also by the Moros of the Philippine Islands and Archipelago, and whose antiquity and use for at least four centuries by piratical Moros is established, is said to be actually the oldest type of portable ordnance in existence. It dates from 1201. In 1521 it was used by the Moros as a boat piece or swivel gun when the Spanish navigator, Magellan, fought them and was killed by them at Mestan, near Cebu, P. I., and in 1570 one was used by a Moro rajah against Spanish invaders. Gen. Reade secured some lantakas during his campaigning in the Philippines, and has presented one to the Memorial Hall, Lowell, his native city, and the East India Marine Building, Salem.

An Aeroplane Hotel.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] Two ingenious inventions by a Lancashire engineer, H. Gough Turner, are attracting attention among aviators. One is a clinometer, which will tell the pilot at a glance how his craft is acting at night or in fogs or other awkward conditions. The other is an aeroplane that can be converted into a cottage on alighting on the ground. This will be part of the camper's outfit in the future.

The clinometer, or "aviator's spirit level," consists of a metal ball in a glass tube filled with fluid. The ball indicates to a degree the exact angle of the aeroplane and operates equally well whether subjected to 100 degrees above zero or several degrees below.

The house on wings is a tri-monoplane which can be admitted easily into any ordinary auto garage. The central planes are made detachable, thus enabling the aviator on alighting to turn his machine into a two-story structure in a couple of minutes with the aid of a sheet of canvas.

$100 moves You into Your Own Home

That question of buying your own home is one which is essentially a question of today. The Home is something that should not be postponed. You owe it to yourself and your family. You owe yourself the opportunity of making your home the savings-bank rather than making the landlords pocket the depository for your money. The feeling of independence, of solid comfort, of real liberty, that comes to you the day you first walk into a home of your own, is something so thoroughly enjoyable that you should not let the first payment of $100 cash stand in your way, specially so when you need only pay every month after that $24 to $30. Those monthly payments cover the principal, interest, taxes and insurance.

Rodgers Park

is a beautiful residence subdivision, lying between Vermont and Normandie avenues, on either side of Florence avenue. It has wide streets, graded and oiled. The parkings are planted with substantial shade and ornamental trees. Gas, water, electricity and telephones are on the tract. The 40 new 1, 1½ and 2-story homes are tasty, substantially and conveniently built, and vary so much that practically no two are even similar.

You will find Homes at Rodgers park priced at from $2400 to $3000, such as you could not possibly buy for cash elsewhere within $1000 of our prices. We have splendid yellow car service, a good location in the direct path of the city's stupendous and ever-growing development Southwest.

Whether buying for your own permanent home or as an investment, you will find Rodgers Park Homes attractive values at what are now rock bottom prices, but are just as sure to advance as they have advanced in our other tracts where practically all re-sales have been made with goodly profits.

Rodgers Park is ready for you. Are you ready for it? Quit paying rent this month. Let this be the first month in which you pay rent to yourself. Let your landlord get some other tenant to continually pay him rent on a property which the tenant will never come any nearer owning than he does today. Rent receipts never got a man a financial standing, never got him friends. A home of your own puts you on a different footing in the community. Try it yourself and prove it to be true.

How to Reach Rodgers Park We'll be glad to have you come to our office and ride out in an automobile. Or take a Florence Avenue car on Hill Street, between Third and Eighth, to Florence Avenue; 10-minute service. Or take a Vermont Heights car on Broadway, south of Fourth, to Seventy-sixth Street. Plenty of salesmen on the tract.

Choice Lots at Low Prices

At Rodgers Park you secure the wonderful advantages to be gained from the time, money and brains used in laying out this, the cream of southwest subdivisions. A lot here cannot help but spell satisfaction and future profits in the way of increased value. Terms are as liberal as on our houses.

The British Colonies.

[Brooklyn Eagle:] Canada and Australia are practically independent States, governing through their own Parliaments. A Governor-General, sent over by the crown, is the nominal head, but he in no way limits the right of each colony to self-government. It is true he has the right of veto, but he does not exercise it. What he might do in case the colonies decided, through their Parliaments, to withdraw from the empire, is problematical. Things are different in India. For purposes of administration, British India is separated into a number of divisions or provinces. They differ in the methods of their government. The governments of Madres, Bombay and Bengal are under the rule of Governors appointed by the crown, and assisted by legislative and executive councils. The executive council consists of only two men. From eight to twenty others are added to form the legislative council. These bodies communicate only in regard to important matters with the home government through the Governor-General. As regards matters of minor importance they correspond directly with the Secretary of State for India. The provinces of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab and Burma are administered by Lieutenant-Governors appointed by the Governor-General, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State for India. These officers act without the aid of any executive councils, but have legislative councils of not more than twenty members appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor on the approval of the Governor-General. Reforms in India are toward representative government.

CHICAGO'S BIG LABOR UNREST

then refused to haul the papers, although they too were working under agreements and had no grievances of their own, or had made no demands for any change in conditions.

The newsboys caught the spirit from the drivers and refused to sell the daily newspapers on the downtown street corners. There might, perhaps, have been some "unionism" in their refusal to sell the regular papers, but there was more commercialism in it. They were able to buy the Daily Socialist on better terms and as there was a good demand for it during the first few days of the trouble the boys made money by boycotting the regular daily newspapers.

The strike had been in progress but a few days when the Stereotypers' Union held a special meeting and voted to go on a sympathetic strike. Like the other unions, the stereotypers were working under contracts underwritten by their international officers. Fearing that the men might strike, their international president, James J. Freel, sent a telegram from his headquarters in New York to L. P. Straube, the president of the Chicago local, ordering the men to observe their contracts and remain at work. This telegram was suppressed by Straube and not read at the meeting, and the men went out.

President Freel at once hurried to Chicago and peremptorily ordered the men back to work, stating that the strike was illegal and that they had violated their agreement. When the men refused to return to work he suspended the local and took steps to organize a new union. In spite of this, however, only a few of them returned to work, preferring to listen to the fiery speeches and foolish advice of their local president rather than to obey the orders of the highest authority in their union.

Every effort possible was put forth by the agitators to induce the printers, mailers and photo engravers to join in the strike, but they refused to be led astray by the floods of oratory and remained at their posts.

TERRORIZING.

Realizing their inability to tie up the newspapers, the strikers and their sympathizers started a reign of terror on the streets to intimidate citizens who wished to buy the daily papers. Gangs of thugs boarded street cars and elevated trains and boldly took newspapers out of the hands of passengers and tore them up. Newsstands were overturned on the streets and the papers burned up. News agents, some of them women and little boys, were assaulted and beaten by the hoodlums and for several days the city was kept in a turmoil. The general public was not in sympathy with the strike or with the tactics of the strikers, but in many instances citizens refrained from appearing on a car or train with a daily newspaper in their hands, for fear of bodily injury.

For a few days the police appeared unable or unwilling to suppress the lawlessness until the Mayor issued orders that the reign of terror should cease at once. The courts also were aroused, and thugs brought before them for assaulting and intimidating citizens were heavily fined. The strikers soon realized that there were others in the community who had some rights in the premises and fines of from $100 to $200 for each assault had a deterrent effect on their enthusiasm.

BOYCOTTING.

From violence and intimidation the strikers turned their attention to systematic boycotting of the daily newspapers. Bands were hired to parade the streets in band wagons, carrying large placards announcing that the publishers were "enemies of organized labor." A few of the bands were arrested and the musicians locked up, and again the enthusiasm began to ooze out at the finger tips of the boycotters. They finally turned to the labor unions and visited meetings nightly with resolutions prepared in advance, which they urged the respective unions to adopt. In many instances the resloutions were adopted and, of course, in every instance copies were sent to the Daily Socialist for publication. As a matter of fact, most of the resolutions were written in the offices of the Daily Socialist and their adoption by the unions was a mere matter of form, as many of the union men kept on reading the daily papers as usual, having them delivered at their homes.

It is a significant fact that the three men who are responsible for the newspaper strike are all employed on an independent paper known as the Day Book, which has been published in the city for several months, for what purpose no one seems to know. It also is significant that some of the men who have been foremost in the agitation against the daily newspapers are stockholders in the Daily Social-

When half way down the slide, one of the party stopped and fought his way in a circle back to the descending edge. The other man descended a brook bed to a vast plain of scrub oak and chapparal. He spent two hours "backing the bushes" until, when he finally reached the plain path, he was nearly exhausted. When you are wrong, go back. "Better stick to the razor-back, if it cuts you in two."

THE NEW TRAIL.

The new trail connecting Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson is a beauty. It is grand, as well. It begins in the hollow declivity between Mt. Markham (just north of Mt. Lowe) and Mt. San Gabriel. It descends, through noble spruces, by a gentle "switch-back" to the head of Eaton's Canyon. It skirts the sides of the canyon and rests on an easy bed in the mighty cliff that has been dynamited for it. It ascends by another zig-zag until it crosses the hollow between Mt. San Gabriel and Mt. Wilson. It disports itself for a long time on the north side of Mt. Wilson, under its craggy crest. It emerges into the open in the vicinity of Deer Park. It descends by gentle undulations to Mt. Wilson Hotel and Strain's Camp.

It is not a difficult trail. The grade does not exceed 15 per cent. except on the zig-zags. The distance is seven miles from Alpine Tavern to Mt. Wilson Hotel; four miles from Mt. Markham, where the new part of the trail begins, to Mt. Wilson Hotel.

The grandeur of the scenery more than repays all toil. The cragged precipices and the beetling cliffs remind one of the Yosemite and the High Sierras. Towering above you in rugged rockiness for a thousand feet, Mt. Markham and Mt. San Gabriel growl at each other. Little cliffs echo the quarrel while Mt. Wilson looks on in serenity. So steep are the sides of the declivity that no grains of earth can remain on the smooth surfaces. The flesh is washed off the rocky sides of the mountain giant and you see his very ribs. There are toboggans everywhere and boulders and gaping chasms.

You are close to nature's heart at the very head of Eaton's Canyon, pressed tight against the perpendicular walls of Mt. San Gabriel. A little spring, trickling during the rainy season, betokens the headwaters of the rushing brook miles below. The canyon challenges you to explore its tumultuous depths. It offers to tumble you over its three waterfalls, and finally disgorge you at its mouth, eight miles away.

SUPERB VIEW.

And the views! They are superb. At the Mt. Lowe divide, you stand on the Delectable Mountains. You ravish your gaze by glancing east, down a branch of Eaton's Canyon, and west down Bear Valley. At the Markham saddle, you are awed by the grandeur of the Alpine fastnesses defying your climbing. On the north side of Mt. Wilson, you cross the range and pass into a new environment and view the billowy canyons of the West Fork and the crowning ranges of the Tejunga gorge and the peaks that lead the way to mighty San Antonio. At Deer Park your field glass reveals the fairy garden plot of Pasadena and the dim glimpse of the ocean with distant Catalina, twenty-five miles out at sea.

The new trail bids fair to be popular. Energetic parties stopping on Mt. Wilson, can leave the peak early in the morning; traverse the trail; take lunch at Alpine Tavern, and make the return journey by supper time. Guests at Alpine Tavern can reverse the journey.

Los Angeles moonlight trampers can leave the city in the late afternoon; devour a midnight lunch at Alpine Tavern; see the sunrise from San Gabriel peak; return to the Markham saddle; traverse the new trail; take dinner on Mt. Wilson; descend to Sierra Madre, and be back in Los Angeles, about twenty-four hours after the time they started. Nurses and soldiers go without sleep, so can you. You'll be a long time asleep when you are asleep.

Seasoned trampers, regular "trail fiends" can probably leave Los Angeles by the newspaper car, starting for Pasadena at 4 o'clock in the morning, and make the entire round in one day. Twenty-three miles is a good allowance for the distance. The man who sees all the mountain beauties that have been described may become weary in his bones, but he will be refreshed in his soul

HOW TO DO IT.

Note: For the benefit of persons contemplating the moonlight trip, the following suggestive schedule is appended: Six p.m. leave Los Angeles (better 4 p.m. or 5 p.m.;) 7 p.m., Pasadena; 7:30 p.m., corner Fair Oaks and Mariposa avenues; 9 a.m., Chaney's Camp; 10:15 p.m., Dawn Mine; 11:15 p.m., Mt. REVISED PLANS OUT.

CHURCH COLONIAL IN TYPE.

VAN NUYS, June 8.—The plans for the new First Presbyterian Church of Van Nuys, as recently revised by the architects, Walker & Vawter, show an edifice of the Colonial type and of white enameled brick construction. The changes introduced since the designs were originally prepared affect the exterior only, the interior arrangement remaining unaltered. The structure will represent a cost of about $10,000.

The site of the church at the corner of St. Andrews and E streets was donated to the church board by the Board of Control of Van Nuys. It is one of the most desirable lots in the town. The church building will contain an auditorium seating 200, together with a Sunday-school department and pastor's study. The Rev. W. B. Noble, D.D., of Los Angeles, is in charge of the project.

"Engineers All Dead."

[New York Mail:] This is one laconic sentence in the official report of the White Star people to the office of the company in England: "Engineers all dead." That is about all that has been said about the engineers in the volumes that have been written about the Titanic disaster. Just those three words; but volumes could not say more.

They were shut up deep down in the great vessel, those engineers. Expert mechanicians, intelligent men, for the most part educated men, it was not a part of their duty to know about icebergs, nor to ask why the bell rang to stop the engines, or to start them. Their duty was to keep in perfect and most scientific order the fine machinery that kept the ship going. And that duty they performed. Down in the heart of the ship, they kept to their posts, and obeyed orders, every man of them. And they are all dead.

They did not run around after boats. They could not even aid the women and children, and leave behind them such a poem of wonderful firmness, gentleness, calmness and thoughtfulness as Maj. Archie Butt has left. No fame for them—no picture in the papers, no eloquent record of a splendid act to go down the ages. It was theirs to die, and have three words said about it.

But those three words are a poem, if one thinks a moment. The engineers are not explaining anything. They are not filled with discomfort and uneasiness. They are at rest. They will be honored forever. They are all dead.

Valuable Ignition Metals.

[Baltimore American:] The general introduction of the automobile and the increased demand for platinum and iridum for ignition points in magnetos as used for ignition purposes have proved to most people that gold is not the most precious of metals. Gold is worth about $400 a pound, while platinum runs two and one-third times higher, or nearly $1000 a pound, and iridium is cheap at $2000 a pound, but gallium, next to radium, easily leads the list at $70,000 a pound.

There are about thirty other metals which have a greater value than silver and gold. Gallium was discovered in 1875 in the Pyrenees Mountains, in Spain, and is exceedingly rare. It fuses at so low a point (86 deg. Fahrenheit) that it readily melts in the naked hand.

Nearly all the platinum used comes from the Ural Mountains. There were only 400 ounces mined in the entire United States last year, and this mostly all came from the Pacific Coast States—that is, California, Oregon and Alaska. A press report last week gave out the information that a Philadelphia man had discovered a deposit in the Grand Canyon of Arizona which will yield $30,000,000 worth of the metal. If this is true it will tend to lower the price of this valuable ignition metal.

A Cruel Retort.

[Harper's Weekly:] "I'm not afraid of woman suffrage," said Little Binks. "My wife is a militant suffragette, but up date I am Julius Caesar in my house."

"I guess you are, Binks, I guess you are," said Wiggles. "There ain't many deader ones than Julius Caesar in this world."

SCHOOL DESIGN UNIQUE.

Newport Beach Combines Attractiveness of Plan With Up-to-Date Features of Arrangement.

NEWPORT BEACH, June 8.—Plans for the handsome and modern grammar school projected by this district have been completed by Paul V. Tuttle and E. L. Hopkins, associated architects, of Los Angeles. The structure, which will cost about $13,000, will occupy a sightly piece of ground directly overlooking the ocean. The work of construction will be begun at once.

The school will be of brick and of an original and most attractive design. The basement will be of reinforced concrete. The buttresses, steps and exterior walls will be of blue brick, laid in black mortar, the trim being of the same material, laid in cream mortar. Concrete domes on low towers flanking the entrance will be features of the architectural treatment. Where the roof is exposed cement tiles will be utilized.

The building will contain four large class rooms, each 27x32 feet in size, together with an auditorium seating 300, principal's room and library. In the basement will be provided space for two extra class rooms, which will at a later date be devoted to sloyd work and a domestic science department. Space will also be provided for lunch and play rooms. The forced draught system of heating and ventilation will be installed.

The auditorium will be provided with a stage, which will be used for school plays and other public exercises. By the use of a rolling partition half of the room will be easily convertible into an extra class room.

MATHESON RECORD.

Ancient Model Still in Good Trim After 75,000 Miles of Mountain Service.

A service that shows what a car is made of was recently run across by C. W. Matheson, while he was strolling down a street in a small city of Utah. Seeing an old 1907 Matheson standing alongside the curb he stopped to look it over, and was surprised to find the car in such good condition. Finding the owner of the car, it proved to be Tony Jacobson of Salt Lake City, president of the Alta Consolidated Mining Company.

It was found by the Matheson man that the car had been run continually for five years, and has covered over 75,000 miles of the rough mining sections of that country. That is a stunt worth talking about, according to Jacobson. He is proud of the record made by his car, and, although he has decided to buy a new Matheson for his town and summer use, he insists that in the winter and on the mountain trails he is going to depend upon his old car. He says he has seen almost every other make of car in that country, and none can compare with his Matheson in following the trail through the mountains.

CARTER-CAR FIRE APPARATUS.

The Chicago branch of the Cartercar Company is in receipt of an order from the fire department of Milwaukee for seven model "P" roadsters. They will be used by the fire department chiefs in responding to alarms, and will add much to the efficiency of the department. The fire department of Detroit, Mich., still have some Cartercars, which have been in use for several years, and they have just recently added five more to their list. The Cartercar is an ideal machine for use in the fire departments, as they are reliable and also give good use, both in winter and summer.

ALASKANS BOND NOTED ACREAGE.

Take Placer Land in Wolf Creek District.

Will Prospect Ground With Diamond Drills.

Expect to Install Dredger in Near Future.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) June 8.—Plumas gold mining received a boost last week, when the Altona Syndicate, composed chiefly of Seattle and Alaskan capitalists, bonded about 800 acres of placer land in the Wolf Creek section, west of Greenville. Prospecting will be immediately commenced with diamond drills, while shafts will be sunk in the gravel to determine the average value of material. The district ranks among the most famous of the old auriferous belts of the Sierra Nevada foothills, and millions of dollars in nuggets and fine gold have been extracted. Under the new ownership it is planned to install a dredger if explorations prove sufficiently alluring.

The Altona Syndicate recently bonded the Altona quartz mine, and has commenced sinking. The property is considered one of the most promising on the Plumas gold belt, with a number of distinct veins demonstrated. A gasoline hoist has been installed and work will be carried to depth. The upper levels of the Altona yielded prolific values, but lack of capital and crude extraction methods militated against deep mining.

Among those interested in the syndicate are Col. J. W. Daily, Lincoln Davis, owner of Hotel Diller, Seattle; F. D. Wilson, Tacoma; J. M. Wiswald, P. H. Daily and A. A. Taberneck of Alaska. Southern California and San Francisco people are also understood to be interested. J. M. Wiswald has taken charge of operations.

J. F. Thompson and associates of Long Beach are operating the Paragon gravel property in the Bath district. The drift method of mining is employed and good values are understood to be showing. The property has been a fair producer in past years but a large estate of virgin material remains to be worked.

ATTACKS MINING COMPANY.

The Anti-Debris Association has started an attack on the Neoscene Mining Company, operating hydraulic holdings near Scales. It is charged debris from the mines is escaping to the navigable streams, although the company has constructed a comprehensive series of costly restraining dams and exercised every precaution to comply with the regulations of the debris commissioners. It is probable the company will be permitted to operate sufficiently to make a good clean-up, and that before the wet season develops further barrier construction will eliminate all future causes for agitation.

The Neoscene Mining Company is composed of Los Angeles people. For years the rich Scale mines were dormant, because of the rigorous anti-hydraulic mining regulations. About four years ago Los Angeles people became interested and the proven value of the gravel resulted in acquisition of holdings and erections of mammoth concrete and masonry restraining dams. The mines are considered among the most valuable hydraulic properties in California, and future developments are anxiously awaited by hydraulic operators throughout the foothills.

W. G. Page and Los Angeles associates are sampling the quartz deposits of the Mayflower mine, near Forest Hill. Considerable ore is stated to be exposed, with a fair percentage containing good values. If examination proves satisfactory the Angelenos plan to take over the mine and operate it on a large scale.

SEEKS TO RESTRAIN MIDAS.

The Victor Power and Mining Company has entered complaint in the Superior Court of Shasta county, asking an injunction to restrain the Midas Gold Mining Company from working a vein claimed by plaintiff. The Victor demands a survey of workings, and damages, to be fixed by the court. It is expected the action will be hotly contested. The Midas and Victor mines are adjacent properties in the Harrison Gulch district, and the former for years has been a heavy gold yielder. The monthly output has averaged $20,000 to $25,000 for an extensive period, with some months recording an output of $28,000. The Victor company has expended considerable capital in developments and equipment. Considerable stock is held by residents of Southern California, beside large blocks controlled by Red Bluff people.

Oliver Roberts of Alamos, Sonora, Mex., and H. Summerfield of San Francisco have taken over the Big Chunk and Tropical mines, near Placerville. The properties are located in the Kelsey district. It is stated a company capitalized at $1,000,000 is projected, and that work will be conducted along broad lines if developments are satisfactory. Roberts is examining the ore deposits and arranging for comprehensive work. The mines have been worked superficially in the past, with chief attention devoted to search for small pockets, or deposits.

The noted Bonanza King mine, near Trinity Center, has passed under the control of Grant Smith of Portland, Or., and the Porter brothers, for $80,000. The property was formerly controlled by the Treadwell brothers of Alaska, and yielded magnificent profits. The mine was part of the security held against Treadwell loans by the defunct California Safety Deposit Company of San Francisco. The mine has not received the vigorous management of late that its merit commands, but, under the new interests, will be actively worked. J. D. Porter, one of the new owners, for years was manager of the mine. It is equipped with a twenty-stamp mill and other equipment.

STRIKE IN EL DORADO.

A twelve-inch vein averaging about $100 a ton in gold has been uncovered in the Ruby Consolidated mine, near Volcanoville. A test-mill run on a shipment of 1200 pounds yielded $72. The ore is free-milling, with gold discernible throughout the ore. The property is equipped with a two-stamp mill. The mine is located in the Georgetown district. Warren Green is managing owner.

HEROULT IRON IN DEMAND.

The Noble Electric Steel Company reports a steadily-increasing demand for the pig-iron produced by its Heroult smelter, and the work of increasing production by additional equipment is progressing. The present capacity of the plant is about twenty tons per day, but with the completion of the new furnaces this will be raised to about 100 tons per day. It is expected to maintain the major output before the end of a year. The company is marketing its product at $19 a ton at the smelter, but it is understood a sufficiently large margin of profit is not obtainable at this price, with the present low productive rate. Consequently every effort is being made to increase the plant's capacity. Electricity is employed in place of coke to recover iron from the high-grade ores. The complete success of this plant is expected to result in the establishment of similar smelters in San Bernardino, Madera and other counties where huge deposits of iron occur.

HIGH GRADE ACTIVE.

As a sequel to the High Grade excitement a new town, designated as Branley, is being incepted in the district. It embraces sixty acres and lies in the center of the field, with several of the most promising mines surrounding it. Farther north, in the Oregon portion of the Warren range of hills, rich strikes have been recently reported. The snow is rapidly melting and the anxious hordes of miners are moving into the field as rapidly as the snow king permits.

The Seven Lakes Company reports intersecting rich ore on its Fairview claim, and states a shipment will be made soon. Rich quartz is reported on the Seattle and Golden Thread claims. John G. Neis has uncovered ore panning around $20 a ton at the head of Cottonwood Creek. A number of strikes have been reported during the past week.

THE GOOBER CROP.

Census Figures Show Production Has Nearly Doubled During the Decade in Quantity and Value.

[New York Commercial:] The production of peanuts in the United States during the ten-year period from 1899 to 1900 increased 7,452,000 bushels, or 62.3 per cent., and the gain in value was $11,001,000, or 151.3 per cent. These figures are shown in a preliminary statement of the thirteenth census, issued today by Director of the Census Durand. The 1909 production was 19,416,000 bushels, and the 1899 crop, 11,964,000, the values of which were $18,272,000 and $7,271,000 respectively.

In 1899 there were 516,654 acres of land devoted to the growing of peanuts, as against 869,887 acres in 1909, an increase of 353,233 acres, or 68.4 per cent. Five States produced over 86 per cent. of the entire crop in 1909.

North Carolina leads all States and had a production in 1909 of 5,981,000 bushels, an increase of 2,520,000 bushels, or nearly 73 per cent., over 1899, when 3,460,000 bushels were produced. The value of the 1909 crop amounted to $5,869,000 as compared with $1,852,000 in 1899.

Virginia is second with, 4,284,000 bushels in 1909, against 3,713,000 in 1899, an increase of 571,000 bushels or 15.4 per cent. The value of the crop in 1909 was $4,240,000, while in 1899 it was $2,261,000.

Georgia is third, 2,570,000 bushels being produced, compared with 1,436,000 bushels in 1899, an increase during the decade of 1,134,000 bushels, or 79 per cent. In 1909 the value was $2,441,000, while in 1899 it was only $936,000.

Florida produced 2,215,000 bushels in 1909; in 1899 but 968,000 bushels were gathered. The increase was 1,247,000 bushels, or 139.2 per cent. The value of the 1909 crop was $2,147,000; in 1899 it was only $700,000.

Alabama in 1909 produced 1,574,000 bushels, valued at $1,491,000. In 1899 the production amounted to 1,022,000 bushels and the value $582,000.

His Easy Method.

[Chicago Tribune:] "I notice," the elderly suburbanite said, "that thousands of people are unable to pay their taxes on account of the tremendous rush at the county treasurer's office. They can't get any of the clerks to wait on them. Now, there's no use in that. It's easy to get waited on if you go at it right. Let me tell you how I managed it.

"One morning I got up a little before 5 o'clock, cooked my own breakfast, gave myself a hasty shave, hurried to the railway station, caught the 7 o'clock train, made a quick trip downtown, and was at the Clark-street entrance to the Courthouse when the doors were unlocked. I was the first man inside, got a clerk's attention right away, and was out again in ten minutes with my tax receipt in my pocket."

"And he calls that 'easy;'" muttered the bystanders.

DETERMINED TO BUILD SMELTER.

W. A. Clark Will Rush Work in Verde Valley.

Railroad Survey to Site Is Already Completed.

New Ore Bodies Are Opened in the Mine.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) June 7.—After making a thorough inspection of the United Verde mine and his other interests in the Jerome section, former Senator W. A. Clark of Montana, left for the Coast highly pleased with what he saw and seemed more determined than ever to have the new smelter, in the Verde Valley, rushed to completion.

Detailed plans for the construction of the big plant are under consideration by Senator Clark and his advisers. The drawings and specifications will be in the hands of the builders within a short time. Long before the railroad now being built to the site is completed, preliminary work will be started.

The survey of a six-mile railroad from the mouth of the United Verde tunnel to the smelter site, six miles distant, has been completed. Its construction will be undertaken by the United Verde Company. Grading for the Verde Valley Railroad, which is to extend from Cedar Glade, on the S.F.P. & P., to the smelter was completed some time ago. Senator Clark has not decided whether the narrow-guage road from Jerome Junction to Jerome will be maintained, but it probably will be if its operation shows a profit. It has been determined to abandon the old smelter at Jerome but not until the new plant in the valley is completed.

At the United Verde mine the main shaft, now 1200 feet deep, is being sunk to the 1400-foot level. Underground conditions were never more satisfactory. Vast bodies of ore whose existence were never suspected have been opened and the reserves in sight are greater than they have been for some time.

While in Jerome Senator Clark heard a report on the Horn mines, in the Parker district, made by his nephew, Will L. Clark, who is general manager of the United Verde, William Neagle of the engineering department of that company, and his son, Charles Clark. They made a thorough inspection of the Horn, which the Senator may take over. It is understood that their report was highly favorable. The ore of the Horn is of exactly the character required to mix with the United Verde ore to get the best results in smelting.

Extensive development of the Big Pine mines, on the Hassayampa, has been undertaken by the Standard syndicate, which recently took over that property. Work has been started on the main tunnel, which is to be driven 1200 feet into the mountain. The vein is being followed and great depth is being attained. The force will be increased as soon as three machine drills, which have been ordered, are installed.

Regular ore shipments are being made from the Ruth mine, six and a half miles south of Prescott, which is being operated by J. I. Gardner and J. R. Slack. Seven carloads of ore have been shipped to the smelter at Pueblo. The Ruth ores carry lead and zinc. As a strong vein has been developed, it is certain to be a big producer for years to come. Development began only a few months ago and the property has paid right from the surface.

A small shipment of sixteen tons from the Hobson mine to the Humboldt smelter ran seventeen per cent. copper and half an ounce in gold to the ton. It was extracted during the course of annual assessment work and the results are so gratifying that the Born brothers, who own the property, will commence active development on an extensive scale.

Inspiration Grows.

MIAMI (Ariz.) June 7.—Steady increases are being made in the force of the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Company. About 400 men are now employed and more are being added each day.

Three development shafts are being sunk to greater depth. This work is being done by contract. Jack McIvor has the contract for Live Oak shaft No. 2, Ed Mason for shaft No. 1 and Jack Harrington for the Scorpion shaft. Ore that is taken out in the course of sinking is being hoisted through the Joe Bush shaft.

Two working shafts are to be sunk at a distance of fifty feet apart. Grading for these shafts is now being done. The shafts will first be timbered, then concreted. Contracts for these shafts will be let in a few days.

W. C. Browning, formerly chief engineer of the Inspiration, has been made assistant superintendent. E. G. Deane has been promoted to Mr. Browning's former position. Under Mr. Deane are about twenty-five engineers.

Repath & McGregor have been engaged to design all the surface plants and buildings of the Inspiration. F. J. Brule, who is associated with them, will be in direct charge of construction work.

Grading for the 7500-ton concentrator has not been started, but engineers are working on the plans and surveys. Preliminary surveys have been made by the Arizona Eastern Railroad Company for a spur to the mine and concentrator.

The Southwestern Miami Development Company is operating three churn drills and has down several holes, ranging from 200 to 400 feet in depth. It is not expected that ore will be encountered for several weeks. Much trouble has been caused by the caving of ground into the drill holes.

Similar difficulties are being encountered at the Barney, where a single drill is operating. It is down 475 feet on the third hole and has passed from the dacite into the schist.

At a depth of 570 feet the diamond drill at the Miami mine entered ore, and it has continued to pass through an ore body for 125 feet. This is regarded as an indication that the ore body extends to a greater depth than engineers have estimated. All previous estimates allowed for ore only fifty feet below the 570-foot level.

A new tailings elevator is in operation at the concentrator. All the mill tailings are now elevated a distance of sixty feet and conveyed by a launder to the gulch east of the concentrator.

NINE HUNDRED EMPLOYED.

The total number of men employed about the mine and mill is 900. One churn drill is being operated for the purpose of exploring the northeastern part of the property.

A drift is being run from the fourth level of the Copper Hill shaft on the Arizona Commercial, to connect with a drift from the Gray shaft of the United Globe mine of the old Dominion company.

It is possible that the deal of the Guggenheims for the Needles group may not go through. A further examination of the property is being made for the Guggenheims by R. C. Nowland, chief engineer of the Ray Consolidated.

Ore is being shipped from the stope below the sixth level on the Great Eastern vein of the Superior & Boston. During May about twenty cars were sent to the old Dominion smelter.

On the 1200-foot level the southeast cross-cut is being advanced steadily. Its breast is in favorable looking ground containing much quartz and limonite.

Ore from the fourth and fifth levels of the Black Warrior mine is being shipped to the El Paso smelter. P. S. Tate and the Lyle brothers are operating on the fourth level under a lease, while the Warrior Copper Company is extracting ore from the fifth level. The ore is a copper silicate.

Miners' Wages Advanced.

BISBEE (Ariz.) June 7.—Employees of the Copper Queen and Calumet and Arizona companies, who have been working eight-hour shifts, have been granted an increase in wages averaging 25 cents a day. The working time of nine-hour employees has been cut to eight hours and they are paid the same wages as before.

The changes are made partially as a result of the increased price of copper and partly because of the eight-hour law passed by the Legislature. This law forbids anyone working at a hazardous occupation more than eight hours a day, but does not go into effect for three months. Neither the Copper Queen nor the C. & A. cared to wait before making the change.

Hitherto the miners and actual smelter workers have worked but eight hours, while the men "on top" at the mines and those in the mechanical departments at the smelters have been employed in nine-hour shifts.

Within a few days the roaster plant of the Copper Queen will start reducing concentrates and high-grade ores. Fires have been built inside the furnaces to dry them thoroughly. The reverberatory plant, which will handle the roasted ores in two big furnaces, will also be ready shortly.

It has not been determined how many blast furnaces will be continued in operation, but some of those now in use will be closed down. The reverberatory plant will take the place of several blast furnaces in handling fine ores, concentrates and flue dust. It is expected that about the same number of men will be employed at the smelter as heretofore.

It is estimated that the daily capacity of the reverberatory plant will be 600 tons. It cost about $750,000 and has been under construction for the last year. All the latest improvements in labor-saving and heat-economizing devices have been installed. A large saving of fuel will be effected. The roasting plant has six large furnaces and is one of the most complete in the United States.

AT SHATTUCK PROPERTY.

Construction work on the new Shattuck smelter will start soon, according to late information that seems reliable. An admirable site has been selected, south of the C. & A. smelter and across the ravine from the Copper Queen plant. Plans are being drawn.

The Shattuck smelter is to have a daily capacity of 400 tons. The mine is in shape to produce 1000 tons of ore daily, but it is not desired to gut the veins. Not all the ore handled will be from the Shattuck, as the company expects to do some custom business.

In every way the site chosen is an admirable one. There is ample room for tracks and yards, for buildings and future extensions to the plant. The slag dumps will extend up the valley.

Since copper has risen to 17 cents, it is expected that several former producers in the Warren district will resume. Owing to the water problem it is thought that the owners of the Denn-Arizona will not attempt to do anything, but the Wolverine, Warren and others can be operated at a profit. All these were operating before the slump of 1907.

All the concrete foundations for the Arizona Copper Company's new smelter at Clifton have been completed, and structural steel will begin arriving from Kansas City any day. General Manager Norman Carmichael, who was in Douglas this week, says that splendid progress is being made in the building of the plant. Last month's output of the mine was 1750 tons of copper.

Advice on Hair Restorers.

Will Irwin, writing a story entitled "Youth Will Be Served," in the American Magazine, makes one of his characters give another the following advice about thinning hair and a hair restorer:

"'A man gets to an age when it begins to thin, and there's little he can do to stop it. I think myself that a man of your complexion looks better when his forehead comes out in front a little. Honest, old-fashioned mange cure will do as much as

A Los Angeles Venture.

PICK AND DRILL MINE HAS GOLD AND COPPER.

WITHIN the past few weeks attention has been directed to the Pick and Drill, an Arizona mine, which is owned and controlled and has been developed by Los Angeles men and capital, and this property is giving an account of itself which, based on the important ore conditions, bids fair to make it one of the great gold mines of the western country.

There are two conditions existing in this property, which are causing it to be watched by the mining talent. In addition to the big gold showings on the 600 and 800-foot levels there are two extensive copper ledges, which have been cut on the 600-foot level in the north and south drifts, that put it in the class of great properties if there was nothing else shown.

Pick & Drill has always been considered by mining men a gold mine only, but with the development now in progress toward the two copper ledges it is the firm conviction of the best mining talent familiar with this mine that within a comparatively short time it will prove a great copper property.

The United Verde was originally worked as a gold mine, but afterward developed into one of the greatest copper properties known to the mining world, with the precious metals paying all expense of operation. Probably no one but Senator Clark himself, who owns this mine, knows how much he is worth—the major portion of his fortune coming from the United Verde, which is located only a few miles from the Pick & Drill.

Developments on the 600-foot level of the Pick & Drill Mine have disclosed six distinct ore shoots, showing widths from two to six feet and sampling from $8 to $35 a ton—all free milling gold; while in the face of the south drift on this level there are three feet of good ore giving a length, as far as developed, of seventy feet.

On the 800-foot level two forces are working two shifts of men. In the south drift on this level they have just recently broken into the first of the six ore bodies that were developed on the 600-foot level, where it gave values in free milling gold of $30 a ton—showing an average width of four feet.

In the north drift they are rapidly approaching the larger of the two copper ledges, which on the 600-foot level was 168 feet in width, and of such promising conditions that it is confidently expected good commercial values will be found on this level. These predictions are based on expert opinions of some of the most prominent members of the mining engineering fraternity.

Two shifts of men are also working in a cross-cut on the 800-foot level, which is headed for a parallel ledge that gave excellent values and good width in higher ground. The striking of this shoot of ore is of daily expectation.

The control of this property is vested in the hands of Los Angeles and Southern California men, who have furnished the money for its development for the past eight years, and who are now coming into the position of realizing upon their eight years of strenuous effort and heavy expenditure, all for labor, machinery and the actual development of the mine, the property having never been charged with any items of salaries or incidental expenses of that character.

The Stenographer's Salary

Many stenographers work on a small salary. In fact the majority who work for others are able to earn but a small salary.

It is not necessary to be tied down to a life of hard work and drudgery on this account, however.

Many shrewd, clever men and women, have found the true road to independence in spite of the discouraging small pay.

Do you see the road to freedom from money worries lying before you? Consider a moment. Fortunes are being made in building and selling homes in Los Angeles to supply the enormous demand. You may not have sufficient capital to engage in this profitable business yourself, but you can combine your savings with those hundreds of others ($5 or $10 a month) and the capital secured this way will earn you a big profit in home-building.

That is the purpose of this company. We combine the savings of hundreds of salaried people, and use the money to build and sell homes.

10 Houses Now Being Erected on the company's property—several of them already sold. In addition, we are erecting two homes for individual parties, at a substantial profit.

The tremendous building and selling activity of this company is creating handsome profits which go to swell the dividend fund and surplus.

Municipal Builders' Investment Company is on a sound financial footing—it is actively engaged in building and selling homes—making clean profit. Yet the stock will remain for a short time longer at par ($1.00 a share.)

Resolve right now that you will place some of your money into this profitable business, no matter how small a salary you may be earning. $5 or $10 a month will hardly be noticed now, but as you receive your dividend checks quarter after quarter, you will be happy in the knowledge that money, difficulties have been swept from your life forever.

Stock now (only 10,000 shares) $1.00 share, 10% down, 10% a month.

GOLDFIELD CON. PAYS DIVIDEND.

Regular Thirty-cent Checks Are Sent Out.

[illegible] in Florence Holds Up to Expectations.

[illegible] Miners Will Not Agree to Wage Scale.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GOLDFIELD, (Nev.) June 7.—The preliminary estimate for the Consolidated Mines Company for the month of May was given out today by Superintendent J. F. Thorn as follows: Dry tons handled, 30,209; gross value recovered, $500,000; operating expenses, $300,000; net realization for the month, $300,000.

At the meeting of the directors the other day, the regular quarterly dividend of thirty cents a share, amounting to a total distribution of $1,060,000, was declared. The Consolidated Mines Company has now paid over [illegible],000,000 in dividends in the past [illegible] years. The recent strike on the [illegible]-foot level of the Grizzly Bear shaft on the Consolidated property is attracting much attention. The well-defined ore body, or mass of quartz has widened out to thirty-five feet, with no hanging wall yet in sight, and showing the essentials of deep ore mineralization—gold, silver and copper. This strike has lent added enthusiasm to the prosecution of deep development on the property of the [illegible] Mines Company and the adjoining Atlanta estate upon which the development will be carried on through the Grizzly Bear shaft.

The recent discovery of high-grade ore on the 250-foot level of the Florence Goldfield mine is holding up in excellent shape, according to the statement of Manager D. D. Dewey. The [illegible] are maintaining their first [illegible] average and the high-grade ore is accompanied by a large body of good milling ore. No effort is being made to rush shipments and ore is being hoisted on the day shift only. Manager Dewey says that highly encouraging results have attended recent development on the twelfth level, a depth of about 830 feet, where some excellent assays are now being obtained and what appears to be a large body of fine milling ore is being developed. Seams of ore are also being cut in the shaft at a depth of about [illegible] feet.

TONOPAH'S PRODUCTION STEADY.

The Tonopah properties keep up their regular production with much development work being done right along. The shipments the past week were: Tonopah Mining Company, [illegible] tons; Belmont, 1850 tons; Mon-Tonopah, 1094 tons; Tonopah Extension, 1020 tons; West End, 667 tons; McNamara, 455 tons; total, [illegible] tons of an estimated value of [illegible].

The miners in the employ of the Pittsburgh Silver Peak Gold Mining Company, which operates a 120-stamp mill on its property at Blair, near [illegible], are out on strike. The new wage scale, announced by Manager [illegible], went into effect on June 1, reducing the wages to approximately the Goldfield scale, and the miners refused to accept the cut. Charles H. Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners, was here the other day and union miners have been ordered away from Blair, but no trouble has yet occurred. Several deputies have been sworn in. [illegible] of the 120 stamps of the mill are operating. Some of the miners refused to quit at the behest of the union officials. The scale that has been in effect at the Silver Peak is the highest paid at any mine in the country. The company recently [illegible] of litigation of years' standing and declared a divident of sixteen cents a share.

EMERALDA IS SOLD.

E. S. Sprague of Goldfield, acting as sole broker, has just concluded the sale of the Esmeralda mine, in the camp of Gold Circle. The property sold for $175,000, and the first payment of $45,000 has been made through the First National Bank of Winnemucca. George H. [illegible] and associates of Salt Lake City bought the mine.

The work in progress on the property of the Diamondfield Extension Company, on ground formerly owned by the old Black Butte Bonanza Company, has resulted in exposing two distinct ledges in the shaft, which is down 42 feet. The work is being conducted at the north end of the property. This shaft is about [illegible] feet south of the Dortch shaft, from which the Black Butte Company is drifting south on a strong vein following an ore shoot that is yielding a product of a shipping grade, and the Diamondfield Extension property adjoins the claims of the Black Butte on the south.

Very good news is coming from the Manhattan camp at this time. A mill-run of thirty tons of ore from the [illegible] lease on the Union Nine [illegible] of the Manhattan Dexter property has just yielded something over [illegible] in gold and as pretty a bar of bullion as has been sent away for some time. This ore was treated at the Eagle mill. All the Manhattan properties are giving a good account of themselves just now.

[illegible] WAGE REDUCTION.

[illegible] of the strike now on at the Pittsburgh Silver Peak property there have been rumors that there might be a cut in wages or a strike of miners in the great silver camp of Tonopah. J. E. Brady, manager of several of the important mines of Tonopah, was in Goldfield today and pronounced such rumors as absurd. The scale now in effect in the silver camp is, according to Brady, the highest paid at any mining camp in the United States, and conditions are in every way satisfactory. No trouble with the miners is expected.

A [illegible] of silver ore, said to [illegible] a ton of the white metal, has arrived from the camp of [illegible], fifty miles southwest of [illegible], where the Jahns Brothers are operating. The ore is a heavy silver [illegible] and it is said that there are [illegible] tons of this ore on the dump. Sampler returns were received today from the shipment of [illegible] which arrived here from [illegible] on May 22, and which was [illegible] the local sampler of the [illegible] Purchasing Company. [illegible] assayed for copper only. [illegible] consisted of 4950 pounds [illegible] sampler certificate gives a [illegible] per ton, or 35.6 per [illegible].

[illegible] official announcement has [illegible] it is claimed that the [illegible] Company of Manhattan is to have a mill of its own, and that the announcement will be made within three weeks.

Thomas D. Murphy, one of the earliest locators of claims in the Goldfield district, arrived yesterday from the Ione district, in the northern part of Nye county, where a bonanza claim was located some time ago and is now being worked with marked success. Development of the veins on the property exposed large bodies of good milling ore, and in order to treat this ore the owners of the claims secured a lease on the 20-stamp mill of the Blue Bell Mining Company of Goldfield, situated at the camp of Berlin, six miles distant from the mine. Ore is now being hauled from the property to the mill, and ten stamps are kept dropping on the product with satisfactory results.

PAN AMERICA.

The announcement that a large quantity of Argentine cotton recently fetched a considerably higher price than American cotton at the Barcelona cotton exchange, has given much encouragement to the cotton growers of the Argentine. Though cotton cultivation is not strictly new in the Argentine Republic, it is new to all practical purposes; cotton is at present grown in the province of Corrientes and the national territories of Chaco, Formosa and Misiones, the area being situated on the Parana, Paraguay, Uruguay, Bermejo and Pilcomayo rivers, which have a population of perhaps half a million. But to this can be added another and slightly larger area to the west and northwest, in the provinces of Santiago del Estero, La Rioja, Catamarca, Tucuman, Salta and Jujuy.

It is in the former area that the cotton recently exhibited in European trade centers is grown. That area which is intercepted by the swamps of Lake Ibera is eminently favorable to cotton growing and the product has been pronounced superior to all except Egyptian cotton.

According to all cotton authorities the Argentine soil produces an average of over 3000 pounds (in Chaco region over 4000 pounds) per 2½ acres, and this is pronounced here as a higher average than that of the United States cotton belt. The land requires neither irrigation nor fertilization and labor is cheaper there than in the States, the gathering of half a pound costing from four to five cents only. This saving, however, is wiped out by the much higher transportation rates from the River Plate to the European markets. It is estimated that there is a profit of $100 gold in the cultivation of every 2½ acres and the government is vigorously backing the new enterprise, as well as the cottonseed oil industry, which is just beginning to attract capital and technical men as well as labor.

That crude oil is becoming abundant in southern Argentina is confirmed by the news just received from Comodoro Rivadavia that another important petroleum deposit has been tapped. There is considerable speculation as to the means of utilizing and marketing the new product. So far nothing definite has developed, but it is pointed out that the progress made in opening up the Patagonian territories of Rio Negro, Chubut and Santa Cruz, where the oil is found, is likely to include the exploitation of petroleum in the near future and that this industry will attract new settlers.

It is especially recognized that as a cheap substitute for coal the petroleum of the southern territories may become the principal factor in the colonization and transportation projects which are being vigorously pushed and which include at least three railways that will run clear across southern Argentina and connect with various points of the railroad system of Chile, as so many links between the south Atlantic and south Pacific. A supply of oil fuel to the west coast of South America, via these railways, is looked upon as a possibility.

Great satisfaction is expressed throughout Bolivia at the conclusion of the treaty of "friendship, commerce and navigation" with the republic of Colombia. It is considered an event for the reason that it is the first ever negotiated between the two countries. The treaty was signed by Don Claudio Pinilla, Minister of Bolivian Foreign Affairs, and the Colombian Minister, Don Francisco Jose Urrutia.

A dispatch to the New York Sun from London states that the Weetman Pearson firm, of which Lord Cowdray is president, has won a contract for $15,000,000 for improving the port of Valparaiso, Chile. It will take seven years to complete the contract. The work will include 300 yards of breakwater, half a mile of quays, a coal wharf, elevators, cranes, customs and other warehouses and a lighthouse. It will be one of the finest harbors in South America. There were several foreign competitors including a German firm.

Nicaragua is in serious financial straits and verging on bankruptcy, according to information reaching the Department of State through the American Minister, to whom the details of the critical condition were told by the Minister of Finance and other high Nicaraguan officials.

No overtures for official aid from the United States government have yet been received, but there is a statement in the informal communication to the American Minister that unless several hundred thousand dollars are forthcoming soon from some source the Nicaraguan Federal employees, who are clamoring for their pay, will strike. Money is also needed to pay the so-called gold debts.

According to advices, many of the government employees in Nicaragua are in actual want for the necessaries of life, being dependent on charity.

Another phase of the financial difficulties which is giving concern is that there is iminent danger of the failure of business houses to which the government owes large amounts. These creditors are insistent, and their claims may result in negotiations with American bankers, if not with the United States government, with a view of devising some means of tiding over the Nicaraguan government.

A Swindler In Luck.

[Kansas City Journal:] With $15,000 cash jingling in his pockets, Ben Richardson left the Kansas State reformatory the other day under a solemn promise that he would repay money he had swindled from others. Richardson was sent to the reformatory two years ago from Topeka for bunkoing the National Hotel at Topeka out of a board bill of $24.75. While in the reformatory Richardson received an inheritance of $15,000 by the death of a relative in the East. He couldn't spend the money while in the institution, and it was kept for him. The reformatory board recently paroled Richardson on the condition that he must immediately repay all those whom he had swindled out of money and make full restitution. This the young man agreed to do. Checks have been sent to all those who had money coming to them, among others a check for $24.75 to the Topeka hotel man to pay that board bill which landed Richardson in the toils.

A TACTFUL CANDIDATE.

Saved a Friend a Bad Half Hour by Agreeing With the Things Suggested by a Woman's Questions.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] In the midst of his campaign for Congress, Stephen G. Porter of Pittsburgh went to a big ball in that town. Before the affair was over he was called on for an impromptu exhibition of quick-wittedness that stamped him as a real major league tactician.

A young man, whom he knew only slightly, walked up to Porter and said: "Mr. Porter, let me introduce you to my wife."

But the moment the man had made the proposition he seemed to think of something, began to look pale, and became as ill at ease as a bigamist.

While Porter was shaking hands with the wife, the man was standing behind her making frantic signs that Porter could not interpret, but he knew he must be tactful and noncommital.

"So you're the Mr. Porter that's running for Congress, are you?" inquired the young woman.

"Yes," admitted Porter.

"And dont you find it exceedingly trying having to be up all night so often?"

"Up all night? Oh, ye-eh, yes. Indeed it is. Should say so. You have no idea how trying it is," replied Porter, with fine diplomacy, but wondering where she got her up-all-night notion.

The young husband was still making queer signs, though he looked somewhat relieved.

"And what does your wife think about your being out all night three or four times a week?" the woman pursued.

"Madam," replied Porter, solemnly, "a woman who has the confidence in her husband that a woman should have doesn't think anything at all when her husband is out all night."

And the young man looked as if he earnestly desired to shout.

It seemed that the man had been telling at home how he was helping Porter in his campaign.

eradication, and considers that the Braucco scale leaves nothing to be desired.

Paul B. Popenoe of the West India Gardens, Altadena, who has already made arrangements for a trip to the Persian Gulf and Bagdad next winter for more offshoots, tells an interesting story of his experiences in the Sahara Desert. All offshoots had to be procured from Arab growers in the remote oases, each of whom has only a few available, and in every case the owner has to be interviewed at great length and with great earnestness, in French or Arabic, or both, before he will consent to part with his pet offshoot at a reasonable price. It usually takes at least one cup of coffee to get the deal closed, and when the negotiation is important every Arab in the village stops work and crowds the coffee-house to give advice. When the offshoot has been at last secured, it is cut from the tree, packed on a camel, and sent to the railroad, a day or two's journey away, where it is wrapped in wet fiber and started on its six weeks' trip to Southern California.

Best in a Puddle.

[Harper's Magazine:] A New Yorker who put up at a country hotel in the Middle West was much impressed by the deft skill of a brisk waitress who attended him. At breakfast she waved a glass pitcher above some steaming hot buckwheat cakes that she had just placed before him.

"Syrup?"

"Please."

"Pardon me, but I don't—"

"Round an' round, or in a puddle?"

"In a—in a—puddle, I think."

Whereupon the golden stream began its sticky descent to the center of the cakes. As she poured, the waitress' eyes embraced the New Yorker in a contemplative glance.

"Some prefer it round an' round," she explained, "but I likes it best in a puddle."

SELF-MADE MEN.

United States Senator Joseph F. Jhonston of Alabama, who has just passed his sixty-ninth milestone, left school at the age of eighteen to join the Confederate army. He served during the war, was wounded four times, and rose to the rank of captain. After the war he entered upon the practice of law, continuing in the profession seventeen years. Then he spent ten years in the banking business. He was elected Governor of Alabama in 1896 and served a second term. On the death of Senator Pettus he was unanimously elected to fill the unexpired term, ending March 3, 1909. His present term ends in March, 1915.

S. Frederick Taylor, who two years ago became president of the Borden Company, a $30,000,000 corporation which produces more than half of the condensed milk manufactured in this country, began life as a Chicago telegraph messenger boy. A little later he went to work in the office of a tea importer, remained there until he learned bookkeeping thoroughly and invented several short cuts to efficiency. In 1885 he went to New York and got a position as salesman, in which he attracted the attention of the Borden people, for whom he went to work as first general salesman and to outline the sales campaign. Promotion followed promotion, and he learned every angle of the milk business. He fifty-one years of age and enjoys life.

Mayor Samuel L. Shank of Indianapolis, whose action in buying produce in carload lots and selling it at fair prices to residents of his city may lead to the governor's chair, was born on a small farm near Indianapolis. He started to learn the gasfitter's trade, but gave it up to become a clerk in a furniture store, where he did everything from washing windows to selling goods. Later he went into the second-hand furniture business. It was so successful that he still retains a big interest in the concern, which has grown to large proportions. Mayor Shank is a big, hearty man, over six feet tall and built like an athlete.

John Haydock Carroll os St. Louis, attorney-general for the Burlington system of railroads, and recognized as one of the ablest railroad lawyers in this country, made his own way in the world. Left an orphan at three, he was placed in a children's home in Cincinnati. After some years in that institution he was taken for service by an Ohio farmer, but managed to get as thorough an education as the country school had to offer.. He prepared himself for the law by hard, unremitting study, determined to specialize, and has devoted himself to this phase of his profession.

Sir William Whyte, recently elected a director of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, has been connected with railroading for fifty years, and is probably the best informed and most practical man in that line of work in Canada. A native of Fifeshire, Scotland, of humble parentage, he began as a freight handler as Coburg, Ontario, for the Grand Trunk Railway. Little by little he rose to the position of general superintendent of the western division of the Canadian Pacific, having jurisdiction over 1455 miles of main line and 700 miles of branch line. King George knighted him for his important part in the maintenance of an imperial highway across Canada. Many other honors have been conferred upon him.

The activity following the extension of the Pacific Electric Line to Owensmouth, and the wonderful showing made by all crops on the 47,000 acre ranch, especially the large fields of potatoes and sugar beets and the wonderful growth shown by all kinds of deciduous fruit trees has necessitated more commodious quarters and a larger sales force.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

Mrs. Anna McClung, aged eighty-nine, of Monroe, Ohio., who has just died, left seven children, thirty-two grandchildren, thirty-eight great-grandchildren and twenty-nine great-great-grandchildren, besides her husband. The couple celebrated their seventieth wedding anniversary recently.

To live more than a century and still retain practical possession of her faculties is the rare good fortune of Mrs. Ann A. Mrs. Pauder is the oldest living member of St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

MEN OF RECORD.

Joseph Beals of Bridgewater, Ct., who has just celebrated his 75th birthday anniversary, has pumped the organ at nearly every service in the First Parish (Unitarian) Church there for forty-one years. No service is held in the church Sunday evenings, so Mr. Beals takes the opportunity of visiting other churches and helping out the other organ blowers.

William H. Melcher of Bath, Me., who has just celebrated his 88th birthday anniversary, has been employed in the joiner department of an iron works in that city for sixty-two years. He is now superintendent of the department and is always on hand, rain or shine, to lay out the work for his men. He lives a mile from the works, but he walks to and from his home every day, winter and summer.

J. Morton Barber of Pittsfield has just entered on his fiftieth year as conductor in the employ of the same firm in that city.

John Rennie, purser of the steamship Vasari, running between New York and Buenos Ayres, celebrated his 66th birthday anniversary last week. He has been following the sea since 1866 and has crossed the equator 150 times.

Benjamin Day, who was engineer of the "millionaires' express" between Morristown, N. J., and Hoboken for twenty-nine years, and in that time ran his train over the thirty-mile stretch not less than 17,000 times, has been pensioned by the Lackawanna Railroad and will start with Mrs. Day on June 1 for a trip to the Pacific Coast. During all his years of service with the railroad he never had a serious accident.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Col. John A. Lundeen, ranking officer of his grade in the Coast Artillery Corps, has been placed on the retired list of the army by operation of law on account of age. A native of Sweden, he was graduated from the United States Military Academy in June, [illegible]. With the exception of a few years on detail in the inspector-general's department, his entire service has been in the artillery arm.

Col. James B. Jackson, who has commanded the Twenty-fifth Infantry since October, will be placed on the retired list August 11 on his own application, after more than thirty-eight years' service. He has been granted leave of absence until that date.

Col. John Conklin of the Second Field Artillery was placed on the retired list of the army, June 1, on his own application, after more than thirty-one years' service. He is from New York and was graduated from the Military Academy. His entire service has been in the artillery arm.

Newell Sanders, appointed by Gov. Hooper to succeed the late United States Senator "Bob" Taylor of Tennessee, is the first Republican from that State in more than thirty years to fill the high office.

Cameron Forbes, Governor of the Philippines, is on a six-months' leave of absence. Speaking of conditions in the islands, Forbes said the public order was satisfactory. While the islands are desperately poor, he said, they show an encouraging result since the industrial revival, "but this does not mean we have not a long way to go," he added. "But I believe that the period of stagnation which followed the war of insurrection is over, and a decided upward movement is in progress."

Walter Burley Griffin of Chicago has been notified that he won the international competition for the design of the site for the new Federal Capital City of Australia, comprising an area of twenty-five square miles in what is now a wilderness. This is the first instance of the planning to the smallest detail of a capital city in order to produce harmony of structure and convenience.

Frank With the Kaiser.

[National Magazine:] The kettledrummer of the First Cuirassiers used to be a favorite with his sovereign, and His Majesty would often measure wits with him. When the Crown Prince was gazetted to his company the kettledrummer proffered his congratulations to his monarch.

"Yes," said the Emperor, "I think the Prince takes after his father."

"Never mind," was the reply, "he'll grow out of it."

APARTMENTS OPENED.

A modern three-story frame apartment-house of sixty-three rooms has just been completed by J. P. Transue at No. 1233 Trenton street. The structure contains among other conveniences builtin refrigerators, a vacuum cleaning system, steam heat, laundry conveniences, telephones and the most up-to-date plumbing. The building is divided into twenty-four two and three-room apartments, each with kitchen and bath. A large social and amusement room is a feature. The plans for the improvement were drawn by I. H. Sehorn.

The Camel Originated in America.

[Popular Mechanics:] The first fossil camels ever found intact in America are being set up in the Carnegie Museum in Pittsburgh and curious little animals they are, being not much larger than greyhounds, with slender legs and long necks.

These skeletons were clothed with flesh ages ago, and existed in the Niobrara Valley in Western Nebraska, where Prof. O. A. Peterson of the Carnegie Museum, and Dr. F. B. Loomis of Yale University found them.

These fossil camels are said to be the remote ancestors of the modern camels and dromedaries of Arabia and Africa, and of the llamas of South America. The camel originated in America, the earliest form being no larger than a European hare. The species represented by the new specimens at Pittsburgh is a later type, to be found in the Miocene strata. Twenty-nine skeletons were found in more or less complete preservation. From the fact that all the skeletons were found in one spot, it is believed that they constituted a herd which was suddenly mired to death or overtaken by some catastrophe of nature.

Catching a Mountain Lion.

[Fur News Magazine:]. The 2nd of April a Colorado hunter and trapper received an order from Colorado Springs for a mountain lion to be used for exhibition purposes. With several companions he set out to get the beast. A full-grown one was found in the mountains, near Meeker. It was surrounded and taken to a tree. Leaving his companions with ropes ready, Tovey, after removing his coat, climbed the tree. Spitting and snarling, the beast backed out on a limb and Tovey, with coat held before him, moved in pursuit.

When the limb began to bend dangerously the beast stopped backing and made a spring toward his pursuer. Over his head and front paws went the coat, and beast and hunter fell to the ground in a tangle. The guide held his prey until the others made it fast with ropes. Thus the mountain lion was delivered at Colorado Springs without even a scratch to mar it.

Overcome by Memories.

[New York Tribune:] Mayor Shank, of Indianapolis, said to a woman interviewer the other day.

"It's you women who must fight the economic battles of the future. The men are so busy earning the money that they have no time to give to the campaign for cheaper living. This must be a woman's campaign, and woman will fight it best with the ballot.

"That's why, when I hear men laugh at the thought of the woman's suffrage struggle, I'm disgusted and ashamed. Such laughter seems as inopportune as Smith's.

"Smith, you know, laughed loud and long on the way home from his wife's funeral.

" 'Henry,' said his mother-in-law, severely, 'I'm suprised to hear you laughing like that when you've just buried your dear wife.'

"Smith, wiht a guffaw, replied:

" 'Oh, I can't help laughing when I remember all the jolly times we used to have together.' "

The Trained Nurse Discovery.

[Baltimore Sun:] If a plain layman were permitted to have an opinion on an expert subject, he would say that the greatest triumph in modern medicine, the greatest discovery, the greatest invention, or whatever may be the proper term for her, is the trained nurse, whose ranks are just now receiving valuable accessions from the graduating classes of the various medical institutions. She is one of the few good things of which there cannot be too much or too many; she has become one of the essentials of life, one of the agencies which the world cannot be without.

Benefit From Playgrounds.

[Cleveland Dealer:] If the arguments for municipal playgrounds were wholly humanitarian they ought to be deemed conclusive., If there were nothing to stake but kindness, mercy and responsibility for the welfare of thousands of boys and girls, opposition to the playgrounds would impeach the conscience or the intelligence of those standing in the way of such a forward step by the sixth city. But it is not a question of giving without return. It is not an issue resting wholly on human brotherhood and the obligation which the men of today owe the men and women of tomorrow. Cleveland will profit in many ways by taking care of the wants and needs of the less fortunate of its children.

THRIFT
Keen Business Instinct

The salaried man whose assets are thrift and a keen business instinct succeeds and prospers. He manages to save at least a few dollars from his weekly pay and puts them to work where they will earn the largest legitimate profits with absolute safety.

Such a man is a firm believer in co-operative investment and co-operative home building. He realizes that it takes money to make money, and that all he could save from his salary during his productive period, if invested by himself, as an individual, would never grow to be a large enough sum to offer him adequate protection during his declining years.

Over 3500 representative salaried and professional men, also well-known business men, are Commonwealth shareholders. They all receive regular quarterly dividends and they can tell you that as an absolutely safe and profitable investment, the home building business is unexcelled.

Security

The shares are increasing in value right along and are worth almost double the original selling price.

The greatest essential in the investing of money is the matter of security. In this respect, Commonwealth shareholders have ample security—first mortgages on Los Angeles real estate and houses—in fact there is nothing better.

$3.50 down and $1.75 per month makes you a shareholder and pays for one hundred shares, at the rate of 35c per share.

Nothing you could invest your money in would pay a larger legitimate profit, or offer you better security. It will pay you to let us explain co-operative home building to you.

We shall take pleasure in showing you what we have done and are going to do this year. Call or write for our 64-page booklet on co-operation and the "Commonwealth" free.

FAME COMES AT NINETY TO "THE INSECTS' HOMER."

One of the Shyest and Most Delightful Old Gentlemen Cannot Understand Why, After a Lifetime of Devotion to Natural History, People Should Suddenly Want to See Him and Read His Books.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, May 30.—On the outskirts of the sleepy village of Serignan, in the heart of old Provence, stands a little, weatherbeaten, six-roomed cottage, half hidden behind cypress and lilac trees. In front of it is a pond, tenanted largely by frogs. And on all sides is waste land—they call it a "harmas" in this part of France—land, which, to quote its owner, "no one would have as a gift to sow with a pinch of turnip seed;" a stony, sun-baked waste, which the flame of a match would set ablaze from one end to the other.

Yet this cottage, this pond, and this desert form the "Eden"—the expression is his own—of one of the most astonishing men living today. A man who, though he is nearly 90, and though tributes to his genius have been paid by Darwin, by Maeterlinck and by Rostand, remains all but unknown outside his own country. A man whose life story is a record of such a game fight against adversity as seldom is heard of; a great writer, a great poet, and, besides all this, the greatest living entomologist, such is J. Henri Fabre, the "Insects' Homer," as the author of "The Blue Bird" called him.

It seems probable that Fabre, through his own writings, soon may become better known to Americans, for I understand that a complete edition, in English, of his magically written 'Entomological Memories" is being planned, to take the place of the rather-indifferent translations of single volumes of Fabre's which, at present, are all that are obtainable in our language. His 89th birthday, which comes this year, is to be celebrated fittingly in Serignan, and also in the near-by town of Orange.

FOR FORTY YEARS.

Forty years of what he himself describes as "a desperate struggle" was required to win for Fabre his "laboratory in the open fields," as he calls it, in the shape of the barren sun-scorched, thistle-ridden little estate at Serignan. But now that it has been won, the "incomparable observer," as Darwin named him, devotes his days to patient study of the tiny creatures which swarm in the "harmas," and of which, and their habits, he writes with a charm that seldom has been surpassed.

Even as a boy, the insect world had a fascination for Fabre, but poverty stood between him and the study of it. The story of his forty years' struggle to attain the independence that would enable him to devote himself to it is a striking one, and his words on the tardy attainment of his desire are pathetic enough.

"The wish he realized," he writes. "It is a little late, Oh, my pretty insects. I greatly fear that the peach is offered to me only when I have no teeth wherewith to eat it. Is the time remaining enough, Oh, my busy Hymenoptera, to enable me to add yet a few seemly pages to your history? Or will my failing strength cheat my good intentions?"

He is a queer mixture, this lovable old philosopher, who is so shy and retiring that when an Emperor of France wished to pay him honor he had to threaten to send gendarmes to fetch him to ensure his coming, and yet who, as a struggling young pedagogue, had the cheek to undertake to teach algebra without himself knowing the first thing about that subject. But you will be able to sum Fabre up for yourself if I tell his story, which may as well begin at the beginning, in the orthodox way.

His parents were poor, hardworking farmers, who lived at Saint-Leons, in the department of Aveyron, and here, in 1823, their son was born. When he was barely 5 years old, the naturalist in him had begun to peep out, and he was trying to discover how the "cicada"—the French cricket—managed to chirp. At 7 he was sent to school. You can imagine the kind of schooling he got from the fact that his teacher was also bailiff for an absentee landlord, as well as local barber, bell ringer and leader of the choir. In the winter each child had to bring a log of wood as a contribution to the warming of the schoolhouse.

As soon as he could read, the boy devoured La Fontaine's fables, and revelled in the pictures of the beasts and birds described therein. At his school the children often were allowed to help their teacher in his garden or on his farm, and whenever young Fabre was brought face to face with nature he found something new to examine and investigate. Meanwhile he sang in the church choir, and, in return for his services, was given a free education at the College at Rodez. Here he learned Latin, and Virgil made a strong impression on his mind with his descriptions of the things of the field and his accounts of the bee and the turtle dove.

Thus far the boy's life had been a pretty happy one, but now began his struggle with adversity—sometimes against actual want, that lasted for two scoe years and over. His "peo- two score years and over. His "peo- had to start working for his bread and butter. Of this part of his life he tells us little, only mentioning that he was always discovering some new creature to study and watching its habits. Meanwhile he had decided that if he had a natural bent, apart from his passion for natural history it was for mathematics, and he decided to fit himself to be a teacher of this subject, realizing that the work nearest to his heart would not produce enough to keep him. So he plunged into the study of conic sections and the rest. He had no master, nor any one to guide him, but he faced difficulties with dogged perseverance, and worked out the problems for himself

His reward was being appointed teacher of physics at the College of Ajaccio. Meanwhile he had put a curb on his natural bent, for fear it would interfere with the subject in hand, but soon after his arrival in Corsica, an accidental acquaintance with Moquintandon, the botanist, revived all his ambitions. "Leave your mathematics," said the savant, "and get to the beast and the plant, and if, as I think, you have some ardor in your veins, the world will listen to you."

HE PEGGED AWAY.

Fabre followed his advice. Without masters or guides, often without books, in poverty and wretchedness he persevered. He observed, drew conclusions from the facts noted and went steadily on with his nature studies. But, all the time, he kept pegging away at mathematics.

The story of how he taught a young man algebra without knowing the first thing about it himself is worth telling because it is so characteristic. The would-be student was preparing for his examination as a civil engineer, and the extra money to be earned by teaching him was tempting, but how is one to teach what he does not know? Fabre asked himself. For, oddly enough, this was a branch of mathematics which he had neglected. He hesitated, and then determined to try. He fixed the first lesson for the following day, thus gaining twenty-four hours in which to make some sort of preparation. It was Thursday, the weekly half-holiday in French schools, and Fabre stirred up the coke fire in his cell of a room, and sat down in front of it to do some hard thinking.

It was rather a tough situation. Besides knowing nothing of algebra, he had no text-book on the subject and, even if it had been possible to buy one in Corisca, off-hand, he had no money. Then he had an inspiration. The master of sciences had a study and laboratory at the college, and the keys of all the masters' rooms were of the same pattern. Fabre decided to break the eighth commandment pro tem. and purloin the science master's text-book till he could afford to buy one of his own. Shaking in his shoes, he unlocked the door of his superior's room, helped himself to the badly-needed volume, and, in less than no time, was back in his own room and turning over the pages.

Next day he gave his first lesson. He explained the first principles to his pupil, so far as he had been able to grasp them himself, and he and the confiding youth worked out the problems together with highly satisfactory results. And so the lessons went on—the pupil dreaming that his master often was as much at sea as himself, until—supreme triumph—the scholar passed his examination.

HIS FAMILY.

That is one of the mighty few episodes that raise a smile in the story of Fabre's life for the thirty years following his start in Corsica. Still grubbing along as a pedagogue, he married and, of course, had a big family. In time he became a professor at the Lycee at Avignon. It was his dream to secure the chair of natural history at some university, but this dream he had to dismiss, having discovered that, for such a position, private means were necessary. Meanwhile, every hour of his spare time was spent in the museums of the fields and woods, studying his beloved insects. What he learned of them, he gave to the world in the first three volumes of his "Entomological Memories," which attracted a lot of attention among naturalists, and particularly fascinated Darwin, leading him to christen Fabre "the incomparable observer," but did not bring in much money.

Money Fabre had to have if ever he was to devote himself to his chosen work, and in the hope of getting some he turned to chemical research. The principal trade at Avignon is that in the madder-root, grown in the neighborhood and supplied to the factories, where it is treated for dying purposes. Fabre's predecessor had experimented, with some success, in perfecting the process; the laboratory was fitted up in a modest way for the purpose, and Fabre decided to try his skill in the same direction.

Apparently he was incurably shy, and does not seem to have been able to realise that he already had made a noise in the world. Given a little more practicalness, he might have found the way smoothed for him, from this point on, but he failed to improve a golden opportunity for realizing his dearest ambition.

This came in the shape of an unexpected visit to Fabre's laboratory from the famous Victor Duruy, who at that time was Minister of Education. Evidently Duruy was all kindness and interest. He would not allow Fabre even to take off his working dress, and soon put the experimenter at ease, asking him many questions about his researches. Then he spontaneously offered to supply whatever Fabre needed for his laboratory. And Fabre declined, saying that he could manage with what he had! Then Duruy inquired what he could do? Fabre replied that he asked only for the privilege of shaking hands with the renowned Minister, and then, on further pressure, suggested naively, that, as the Paris Zoological Gardens were under the Minister of Education, when the next crocodile died, the skin might be sent to him so that he could stuff it with straw, and hang it in his laboratory, like the wizards of old!

SIX MONTHS LATER.

Six months afterward Fabre got a letter from Duruy, asking him to call on him in Paris, but the naturalist was afraid the minister meant to offer him a place at some other grammar school, so he wrote, begging not to be transferred. Duruy's reply was a peremptory letter, signed by the minister's own hand and ordering him to come to Paris at once, failing which Duruy declared he would have him brought there by gendarmes. Twenty-four hours later, Fabre was in the minister's room, where he got the heartiest of greetings, was decorated with the Légion of Honor and willy-nilly forced to accept the sum of $250 to cover the expenses of his journey. He protested that they did not amount to any such sum, and was told to spend the surplus on his laboratory. Then, to his great alarm, he was told that he was to be presented to the Emperor—Napoleon III—next day and that, if he did not put in an appearance the gendarmes would be sent to fetch him. So the shy "Homer of the insects" reluctantly allowed himself to be driven to the Tuileries, where he was rather surprised to find the Emperor quite a commonplace looking mortal, dressed like anybody else, with the exception of the broad ribbon of the Legion of Honor across his breast. Napoleon received Fabre as cordially as his minister had done, and talked with him of his latest work, with which he seemed to be fairly well acquainted. Afterward, while lunching with Duruy, Fabre was asked if he wouldn't like to visit the Paris museums and collections, but he was homesick already, and went straight back to his beloved Provence, where a bitter disappointment was waiting for him. Some time before his perfected process for turning the madder-plant into dye had been accepted, a factory was being built, and it looked as if he were a made man, when an artificial alizaline suddenly was discovered, and all Fabre's hopes were shattered.

HIS FAMILY CATS.

Texeira de Mattos has just been translating a chapter on M. Fabre's cats, relating the prodigious adventures by which the male cats returned to their old empty home after the Fabre family had moved from one town to another and had taken infinite pains to accustom the toms to their new residence. There is not room here for the chapter, full of quaint, sly humor, which no doubt will appear presently in all the pomp of book print; but thanks to the translator one can give M. Fabre's prefatory comments to these stories about his cats—comments which give a glimpse into his style and the workings of his mind.

"To what extent," begins M. Fabre, "does the cat deserve its reputation of being able to return to the beloved home, to the scenes of its amorous exploits, on the roofs and in the haylofts? The most curious facts are told of its instinct; the children's books of natural history abound with [illegible] that do the greatest credit to its [illegible] grim talents. I hold these stories in but moderate esteem; they come from casual observers, devoid of [illegible]

News From the Great California Oil Fields.

Santa Maria.

REPORTED BIG DEAL IN LAND.

Two Million Rumored Paid for Oil Ground.

Strip Lies in Cat Canyon Territory.

San Francisco Man Believed Behind Transaction.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA MARIA, June 6.—Rumor, as yet unconfirmed, has it that a gigantic oil land deal has just been consummated in the southeastern Cat Canyon district. The land involved in the transaction is a portion of the John Bell ranch upon which the Oilfields Syndicate recently brought in a well.

Two million dollars for 2600 acres is the basis of the deal, and W. P. Hammon of San Francisco is the man behind the gun. Some time ago it was apparent that big interests were at work in this portion of the Santa Maria field. As far back as the time when the Oilfields Syndicate well reached the first sands, some of the local magnates began to get busy, and attempts were made to lease certain portions of the Bell ranch. Here it was that discovery was made that someone had drawn a bomb-proof defense about the sought-for acres. Great secrecy was maintained by all parties concerned. But the cat is now out of the bag, for it is pretty well assured that the heirs of the John Bell property have transferred a part of their holdings, and that these same holdings have been recorded in deed to W. P. Hammon.

As a probability pointed out by The Times correspondent some weeks ago, the likelihood of discovering a continuity of the light oil belt in the region of the Oilfields Syndicate well seems now to have resolved into reality. The Syndicate well came in about three weeks ago and is now producing in the neighborhood of 300 barrels daily of 19.2 degrees gravity, Baume, oil. This fact has a large significance with relation to future operations in the Santa Maria field. Heretofore it has been opined that the oil belt did not extend southward much below the location of the famous Bell No. 5 gusher, which is situated over two miles to the north of the "Syndicate' well, and upon the Yereso Bell property. Just how far to the south (not with relation to the Purissima anticline,) the producing belt extends is a matter of conjecture. It is pretty well established that a vast syncline underlies Los Alamos but its limits are not clearly defined. Many of the local oil men are of an opinion that oil of lighter gravity than 20 degrees, Baume, will be found in the new area.

UNION MAY RESUME.

It is believed that the Union Oil Company, operating on the adjoining Theresa Bell property, will now resume activities, and upon a large scale. There also seems a likelihood of much striving toward establishing the limits of the field to the southeast. It is pretty well authenticated that the line of strike, with regard to the producing zones and anticlines in the California fields, runs in a direction northwesterly and southeasterly. Heavy oil has been found just below the Tinaquaic, which would seem to correspond with that of the Cat Canyon region proper. There is now a prevalent idea that lighter oil, corresponding to that found in the "Syndicate" well may be found in the Santa Ynes region, though perhaps the broken foundations existing there may preclude the possibility.

Now that the "Syndicate" well is in and has proved up its area, the most closely watched well hereabouts will probably be that of the Bradley Canyon district, several miles directly north of the famous Palmer wells. Since striking a 14 gravity sand at 475 feet this well has gone steadily ahead with an open hole, and is now at 610 feet. The ten-inch casing is now being installed and an operation of under-reaming is in progress. With Superintendent Wigle's new rig in operation, work has been going on in the very best manner and the hole is in first-class shape. The owners look for the precious fluid at less than 2000 feet.

PALMER ANNEX ACTIVE.

The Palmer Annex Oil, otherwise known as the Santa Maria Oilfields of California, Limited, Oil Company, has become imbued with a new spirit of activity, and the lease is all bustle and stir. During the past few days two new first-class producers have blossomed forth upon the lease. These are numbers 2 and 6. The former is producing 400 barrels and the latter 600 barrels daily. Two or three of the suspended wells will resume operations at once and a new well will spud in very shortly.

The Los Alamos Petroleum well continues to flow in large figures. The gauger reports a daily yield of 1200 barrels.

The Santa Maria Midway Oil Company is reported to be down about 3420 feet with the six-inch casing. The drill is in blue shale with indications that the brown shale is not far away. There is a strong gas pressure present and spots of oil occur very frequently. It was expected that the sands would be struck at about 3400 feet, but the pay-streak "is not yet."

PRINCESS IN SHALE.

The Princess Oil Company, operating well No. 2 on the Tunnell tract in the Tepusquet, is going along in first-class style. The drill is working at about 2660 feet and is in a gray shale with the six and a quarter-inch casing. A plentiful pressure of gas is present and spots of oil are showing in the bailer. The operators are sanguine of success and are much elated over the showing of the well. Land owners in the immediate vicinity of the Princess and Midway wells are anxiously awaiting the outcome of operations. If either well hits oil soon some considerable scramble is prognosticated.

CHARGED WITH FUDGING.

Anaheim Union Water Company Claims Amalgamated Is Not Living up to Leasing Contract.

FULLERTON, June 6.—The Amalgamated Oil Company is charged with fudging on its contract by the Anaheim Union Water Company, on whose land the Amalgamated is drilling.

The directors of the water company have passed a resolution to the effect that the company's attorney prepare a notice to be served on the company that the Amalgamated is not dividing the oil as provided in the lease, and to demand that the oil company comply with the terms of the agreement or suit will be brought to declare the lease forfeited.

The water company is said to be entitled to one-eighth of the oil produced, which at present amounts to about there cars a day.

Interchangeable Gloves.

[London Chronicle:] In the matter of the righ-hand glove, which so few wear and so many pay for, a correspondent suggests the cheap remedy. You have but to turn your right-hand glove, draw it upon your left hand, button it backward, and in the gloom it looks just like the proper glove of the left hand. Try it. But not in the limelight.

We can get over the difficulty of our uneven use of gloves by wearing fishermen's knitted gloves, which are made like babies' first gloves, with a thumb and one huge finger. And as for boots, Northampton still makes "straights," which can be changed from foot to foot like the top boots worn by Richard Jeffries. He wore them every Sunday to church, and by changing them over every week and carefully greasing and "treeing" them they lasted him "for best" fifty years.

McKittrick.

NEW COMPANY IN BELRIDGE.

Bakersfield Men Will Drill New Lease.

Numerous Wells Are Started About McKittrick.

Rig Material Is Shipped Into the Field.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

McKITTRICK (Cal.) June 7.—Harry Thomas, of Bakersfield, and associates, constitute a new oil company that will at once begin operations on section 25, 28-21, in the Belridge district, the property secured by them being close to that of the Pittsburg-Belridge Company. Material is now going out to the lease.

The Pittsburg-Belridge Oil Company is at work on No. 2 well, in the Belridge district, and the Reward Oil Company, on the North McKittrick front, has, in addition to constructing several small buildings, finished its first rig on section 1, 29-21.

On section 5, 29-21, the General Petroleum Company has spudded in its fifth well.

A new well on the Belridge Oil Company's property is flowing in the neighborhood of 3000 barrels a day.

The San Francisco and McKittrick Oil Company has finished well No. 19, and the drillers will begin work within the next day or two.

The Elliott Company has spudded in well No. 2.

Lumber and rig irons for well No. 3, of the Dominion Oil Company, were received this week.

The Kern Trading and Oil Company has eight rigs on section 15, 31-22, and is working on others.

Two rigs have been completed by the Bankline Oil Company, which recently purchased property on section 15, 31-22. Their land is between the leases of the Elliott Company and the Dominion Oil Company.

A new rig is being erected by the I. X. L. Midway Oil Company, on its property in the McKittrick field.

Well No. 14, of the Jewett Oil Company in the McKittrick district, has been perforated.

Coalinga.

INSTALLS TEN SPEED MOTORS.

GENERAL PETROLEUM MAKES IMPROVEMENTS.

Nevada Company Completes a Well—Coalinga Midland Levies Assessment — Bohemian Cements Off Water—Blair Encounters Hard Shell Formation.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

COALINGA, June 6.—The Coalinga Midland Oil Company, located on section 10, 19-15, has levied an assessment for the purpose of resuming operations.

Well No. 1 of the Vancouver Coalinga Oil Company on section 14, 20-15, is down 4387 feet and the 6¼-inch casing has been carried to a depth of 4360 feet.

The Esperanza Land and Oil Company is down about 260 feet in well No. 1 on section 13, 21-14. The well is being put down in 12½-inch casing and is located on the Waethan Creek, a short distance from the old Commercial Petroleum Company.

The Bohemian Oil Company on section 22, 21-15, has cemented off the water in 4½-inch casing at 4100 feet deep. The well came in about a year ago with light oil, but the water had apparently broken in and the well had to be recemented.

The General Petroleum Company is preparing to install ten electrical variable speed pumping motors on their property on section 6, the property formerly owned by the Esperanza Consolidated Oil Company. The foundations have been laid for the motors, which will be in operation about the fifteenth of the month.

The Nevada Petroleum Company completed its well, No. 50 on section 18 a short time ago and the well is now making in the neighborhood of 400 barrels of oil daily. The K. T. & O. is drilling a well on section 7 to offset the well of the Nevada and the United Development Company is preparing to do the same.

The Valley Oil Company, operating on land adjoining the city of Coalinga has cemented off the water again at 3330 feet and will test out this week.

The Blair Oil Company on section 14, 21-15, has encountered another hard shell formation at 4360 feet and the indications are encouraging. The well is being operated in 4½-inch casing and the formations tally with the logs of wells on section 30, 21-15.

The Medallion Oil Company on section 20, 2318 is down over 4200 feet with its 6½-inch casing. The 8¼-inch was landed at 4085 feet. The owners are encouraged and should the well prove a producer a second well will be drilled immediately with the use of a rotary outfit.

1,850,000 Trees Growing Big Money For You

BACK of the preferred stock offering of the Gibraltar Investment and Home Building Company are the immense nurseries at Rialto and Hemet, bearing orange grove at Redlands, and the vast tracts of land in the rich valleys tributary to Los Angeles, which are to be planted from these nurseries and sold in subdivided orchards. These holdings include the largest olive nurseries in the world; 1,500,000 olive trees and 850,000 orange trees, besides other nursery stock. The actual advance in the value of this nursery stock on the market since the incorporation of this company and the immediate profits from the planting of orchards will not permit the selling of stock at par value much longer. The eight per cent. guaranteed the preferred stock is only a small portion of the profits in sight, and dividends will be declared from the operations of land development, which assure all the way from 80 to 100 per cent. Otherwise the directors of this company having taken only common stock would have no reason for offering you 8 per cent. preferred stock.

A Share in a Money-Earning Business

The Gibraltar Investment and Home-Building Company invites the most searching investigation, and you have everything to gain by the enlisting of your co-operation. We do not need your money to do business with, but we do desire your co-operation in the making of greater profits. Our money-making business is in plain sight, growing in the soil, and increasing in value day by day. We cannot emphasize too strongly that we are selling you 8 per cent. preferred stock, in order to engage with you in broader plans of land development, orchard planting and home building, while the earning power of your money is guaranteed by the actual present proceeds of the company's holdings. Our immense nurseries and heavily-laden orange groves will far more than pay 8 per cent. on all stock. The preferred stock is assured 8 per cent. before the common can make anything. The preferred stock of the Gibraltar Company has no limit in sharing the greater profits with the common after 8 per cent. has been paid. The purchase of preferred stock will make much more for the plain reason that the directors of this company would not give their time and experience unless the earnings above that figure returned good profits to the common stock. In these greater earnings the holders of both stocks share equally.

If You Do Not Make Money, Then Nobody Can

As an unusual evidence of fairness and intention to make money for the purchaser of preferred stock the directors of the Gibraltar Investment and Home Building Company bought only common stock, giving in exchange valuable nurseries, orange groves and other property at a conservative valuation of $500,000. This is the most absolute proof that if you do not make money then nobody can. The only object in selling stock is for the development of rich tracts of land and the planting of olive and orange orchards from our own growing trees. This land that we have brought water to and subdivided will, with the direct planting from our own nurseries, sell at big profits. The co-operation of your money and our own, with our direction and expert knowledge, will return far more money than we could make unaided. By the combination of your money with our money, our experience and our property, the fertile valleys tributary to Los Angeles can be used in the making of three profits instead of one—that of growing the trees—that of developing the land—that of the planted orchard over the vacant land. We save all extra commissions and selling cost. Can you show us any better money-making proposition or stock offering? If you are thinking of living on the land, can you offer any more practicable plan? We can show you the fertile land itself, the growing trees, and any further facts that you may desire.

Mother Earth's Dividends

The world may not owe you a living, but Mother Earth does pay big dividends to all those who help in the developing of her rich resources. Are you getting your share of the wealth that grows? If not, the Gibraltar plan offers you the opportunity of securing your portion of that income which is produced each year from the land and, as all the world knows, is more certain than any other form of wealth. Mother Earth never disappears in panics. If you cannot live on it you can grow with it and become rich through co-operation. The United States census reports for 1910 show that land values throughout this country increased 111 per cent. in ten years. How much greater do you suppose the increase in California was? Latest census figures show that the per capita wealth of California is greater than that of any other State in the Union and that the individual savings bank accounts are far greater than those of any other State, while the indebtedness is much less. This Company offers a back-to-the-land movement which is double acting and automatic and is further the most practicable that could be asked for in that the land itself earns the money which will later enable the city worker to realize his desire to live on the land. The preferred stock is exchangeabe at par value, with accrued dividends, for anything which the GIBRALTAR COMPANY has for sale. We claim that this offers the most liberal and practicable back-to-the-land movement in the country today.

Without expense, send me full particulars.

The Secret of Small Savings

Thrift

Behind the glamour and mystery of great fortunes is the impressive lesson of small savings. Fortunes do not grow like Jack's beanstalk—they represent systematic upbuilding founded on saving. Nearly every one of them started with little or nothing, but soon the owners learned to save and then saving instinct with its helpful and instructive influence manifested itself in everything they undertook. This is all the secret there is about getting a competency or starting on the road to a fortune.

How Money Grows

You have only to look at the way money grows to get the inspiration to begin to save. A nickel saved every day with only 4 per cent. interest compounded will amount to $226.56 in ten years. A dime put through the same process will total $445.36 while a quarter saved in this way will grow to $1113.75.

The original HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES shares pays 14% per annum on par value. Buying now at $1.60, the return is nearly 9% on the savings invested.

The start is the hardest thing. Once you have experienced the pleasure of seeing your investment steadily increase in value and have received the regular quarterly returns in cash dividends, it is comparatively easy for you to continue the good work.

NATURE STORIES.

The story of the remarkable homing instincts of Norfolk and Yorkshire crabs, some of which walked over seventy miles to their old homes, after being transferred to other parts of the coast, was related the other day at the meeting of the Eastern Sea Fisheries Board, held at Spalding, says a London dispatch. For the experiments, the inspector of the east coast, Mr. H. Dennison, used nearly 2000 edible crabs. Each, when put back into the sea, had a numbered label attached to it, and the size, sex, place where originally caught, and where liberated, were carefully noted. Rewards were then offered to fishermen who recaptured them.

The crabs released on the grounds where they were caught practically remained where they were, but crabs transferred from a distance commenced to go home again. Yorkshire crabs set free on the Lincolnshire coast made for the north, and Norfolk crabs made for the south. With reference to the Yorkshire crabs, some were recaptured at distances up to eighteen miles, making for the old home, others were recaptured on their old ground, having walked from twelve to thirty-five miles (direct distance) while seventy went beyond, the greatest distance covered being seventy-five miles, direct measurement. The actual distance covered must have been much greater, as the Humber had to be crossed.

Cosmopolitan Alaskan Dogs.

[Wide World Magazine:] Dogs in Alaska are of all breeds and sizes, the most common being the malemute, or native dog. The word "malemute" is an Indian word, meaning Eskimo, and is applied to both dogs and natives. The malemute is of the wolf strain —in fact, the best of the breed are half wolf. They evince all the characteristics of the wolf, both in appearance and in manners. Owing to his wolflike fur, the malemute can easily stand the extreme Alaskan cold. He is a born fighter, an inveterate thief and somewhat of a coward, for he will seldom fight singly against a lone adversary. The malemute, while well able to withstand the cold does not seem to have the same order of intelligence as is displayed by the outside dog, and the best dog for Alaska would seem to be a mixture of the two strains.

Another native breed in the North is the huskie, but this breed is rarer than common usage of the word would imply. The real huskies are bred in the neighborhood of the Mackenzie River, and are more common in the territory under the jurisdiction of the Hudson Bay Company than in Alaska. Small dogs, such as fox terriers, are a rarity in Alaska, for in that country a dog is valuable in exact proportion to the amount he can pull. A sleigh dog will weigh anywhere from 30 to 150 pounds, the average being about seventy-five pounds. It is surprising to the uninitiated how big a load a dog can pull, though I must admit I have never seen or heard of a dog in Alaska pulling a thousand pounds under the conditions described in a well known novelist's book.

Rabbit Beats an Auto.

[Toledo Blade:] A race between a rabbit and an automobile! And the rabbit won by a hare!

The scene was on the road to Point Place. Illuminations were furnished by the moon and stars. Besides the rabbit and the auto there were one man and two girls, also a chauffeur.

The big automobile was speeding along the highway, sending its white light ahead, when suddenly, right across the path of the rays from the head lamps, shot a young rabbit. The chauffeur slackened speed, hating to hurt the little creature, and then the rabbit hopped back into the center of the road again, gave one look into the blinding glare of the lamps, and started the race.

Straight down the center of the smooth, white highway he shot on ahead of the car, and the chauffeur speeded up a bit just to see how fast the race was going to be, but he could not catch the rabbit, not by ten feet. That little critter's feet went so fast there did not seem to be any there, and just a speck where the long ears bobbed with the motion of his little body and a brown blur of hair. And still he ran, on and on, keeping his distance ahead of the big machine as if the light had hypnotized him and he could not stop, while behind, in the car, big, lazy pursuers laughed and watched, and begged the chauffeur not to run him down. There was no such chance. The rabbit was too quick. When he was tired of the sport, he hopped to one side of the road as the car went by, tipped up his tiny head, and winked out of one pink eye as he looked at the speeder and its occupants with a quizzical curve to his little mouth.

A Suffragette Family.

[New York Sun:] "Two suffragists," said Dr. Lyman Abbott, "were talking one evening at the club over a game of billiards.

" 'How is your husband?' the first asked.

" 'Slowly mending, thank you,' the other answered.

" 'Slowly mending? I didn't know he was ill.'

" 'He isn't ill,' the other suffragist explained, laughing heartily. 'He's slowly mending my khaki riding breeches.' " power and prone to exaggeration. It is not given to one and all to talk of beasts correctly. When some one not of the craft says to me, speaking of the animal, 'It is black,' I begin by inquiring whether by chance it be not white; and many a time the truth is found to lie in the converse proposition. Men come to me and sing the praises of the cat as a traveling expert. Good, let us look upon it as a feckless traveler. And that would be the extent of my knowledge if I had only the evidence of books and of people unaccustomed to the scruples of scientific examination. Fortunately I am cognizant of a few facts that will stand the test of my scepticism. The cat really deserves its reputation as a discerning pilgrim. Let us relate those facts.

"One day—it was at Avignon—here appeared upon the garden wall a wretched-looking cat, rumple-coated, hollow-ribbed, his back notched and jagged with leanness. He was mewing with hunger. My children, at that time very young, took pity on his misery. Bread soaked in milk was offered him at the tip of a reed. He took it. And the mouthfuls succeeded one another to such good purpose that he was satisfied and went off, for all the calls, 'Minet! Minet!' of his compassionate friends. Hunger returned; and the starveling reappeared in the wall-top refectory. He received the same fare of bread soaked in milk, the same gentle words. He allowed himself to be tempted. He came down from the wall. The children were able to touch his back. Goodness, how thin he was!

THE CHORUS.

Now that it is too late to interest him much, the chorus in praise of M. Fabre has grown louder and louder. Maeterlinck declares that Fabre's brow should be "girt with a double and radiant crown, as one of the glories of the civilized world, one of the most profound and inventive scholars, and also one of the purest writers and one of the finest poets of the century that is just past." Rostand describes him as "a savant who thinks like a philosopher and writes like a poet," and Richepin paid a similar tribute. Frank Harris, one of the soundest of English critics, calls Fabre "the wisest man, and certainly the best read in the books of nature of whom the centuries have left us any record."
